O D E

TO THE HONOURABLE

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE.

Written at Moor-park, June, 1689,

I.

VIRTUE, the greatest of all monarchies!
 Till, its first emperor, rebellious man
 Depos'd from off his seat,
 It fell, and broke with its own weight
 Into small states and principalities,
 By many a petty lord possess'd,
 But ne'er since seated in one single breast!
 'Tis you who must this land subdue,
 The mighty conquest's left for you,
 The conquest and discovery too;
 Search out this Utopian ground,
 Virtue's Terra Incognita,
 Where none ever led the way,
 Nor ever since but in descriptions found;
 Like the philosopher's stone,
 With rules to search it, yet obtain'd by none.

II.

We have too long been led astray;
 Too long have our misguided souls been taught
 With rules from musty morals brought,
 'Tis you must put us in the way;

Let us (for shame!) no more be fed
 With antique reliques of the dead,
 The gleanings of philosophy;
 Philosophy, the lumber of the schools,
 The roguery of alchemy;
 And we, the bubbled fools,
 Spend all our present life, in hopes of golden rules.

III.

But what does our proud ignorance Learning call?
 We oddly Plato's paradox make good,
 Our knowledge is but mere remembrance all;
 Remembrance is our treasure and our food;
 Nature's fair tablebook, our tender souls,
 We scrawl all o'er with old and empty rules,
 Stale memorandums of the schools:
 For Learning's mighty treasures look
 In that deep grave a book;
 Think that she there does all her treasures hide,
 And that her troubled ghost still haunts there since she died.
 Confine her walks to colleges and schools;
 Her priest, her train, and followers show
 As if they all were spectres too!
 They purchase knowledge at th' expense
 Of common breeding, common sense,
 And grow at once scholars and fools;
 Affect ill-manner'd pedantry,
 Rudeness, ill-nature, incivility,
 And, sick with dregs of knowledge grown,
 Which greedily they swallow down,
 Still cast it up, and nauseate company.

IV. Curst

IV.

Curst be the wretch ! nay doubly curst !
 (If it may lawful be
 To curse our greatest enemy)
Who learn'd himself that heresy first
 (Which since has seiz'd on all the rest)
That knowledge forfeits all humanity ;
Taught us, like Spaniards, to be proud and poor,
And fling our scraps before our door !
Thrice happy you have 'scap'd this general pest ;
Those mighty epithets, learn'd, good, and great,
Which we ne'er join'd before, but in romances meet,
We find in you at last united grown.

 You cannot be compar'd to one :
 I must, like him that painted Venus' face,
 Borrow from every one a grace ;
Virgil and Epicurus will not do,
 Their courting a retreat like you,
Unless I put in Cæsar's learning too :
 Your happy frame at once controls
 This great triumvirate of souls.

V.

Let not old Rome boast Fabius's fate ;
 He sav'd his country by delays,
 But you by peace.
You bought it at a cheaper rate ;
Nor has it left the usual bloody scar,
 To show it cost its price in war ;
War that mad game the world so loves to play,
 And for it does so dearly pay ;
For, though with loss, or victory, a while
 Fortune the gamesters does beguile,
Yet at the last the box sweeps all away.

VI.

Only the laurel got by peace
 No thunder e'er can blast :
 Th' artillery of the skies
 Shoots to the earth, and dies :
 And ever green and flourishing 'twill last,
 Nor dipt in blood, nor widows' tears, nor orphans' cries
 About the head crown'd with these bays,
 Like lambent fire the lightning plays ;
 Nor, its triumphal cavalcade to grace,
 Makes up its solemn train with death ;
 It melts the sword of war, yet keeps it in the sheath.

VII.

The wily shifts of state, those jugglers' tricks,
 Which we call deep designs and politicks,
 (As in a theatre the ignorant fry,
 Because the cords escape their eye,
 Wonder to see the motions fly)
 Methinks, when you expose the scene,
 Down the ill-organ'd engines fall ;
 Off fly the vizards, and discover all :
 How plain I see through the deceit !
 How shallow, and how gross, the cheat !
 Look where the pulley 's tied above !
 Great God ! (said I) what have I seen !
 On what poor engines move
 The thoughts of monarchs, and designs of states !
 What petty motives rule their fates !
 How the mouse makes the mighty mountain shake !
 The mighty mountain labours with its birth,
 Away the frighten'd peasants fly,
 Scar'd at th' unheard-of prodigy,
 Expect some great gigantick son of earth ;

Lo !

Lo! it appears!
See how they tremble! how they quake!
Out starts the little mouse, and mocks their idle fears.

VIII.

Then tell, dear favourite Muse!
What serpent's that which still resorts,
Still lurks in palaces and courts?
Take thy unwonted flight,
And on the terrace light.
See where she lies!
See how she rears her head,
And rolls about her dreadful eyes,
To drive all virtue out, or look it dead!
'Twas sure this basilisk sent Temple thence,
And though as some ('tis said) for their defence
Have worn a casement o'er their skin,
So he wore his within,
Made up of virtue and transparent innocence;
And though he oft renew'd the fight,
And almost got priority of sight,
He ne'er could overcome her quite,
In pieces cut, the viper still did reunite;
Till, at last, tir'd with loss of time and ease,
Resolv'd to give himself, as well as country, peace.

IX.

Sing, belov'd Muse! the pleasures of retreat,
And in some untouch'd virgin strain,
Show the delights thy sister Nature yields;
Sing of thy vales, sing of thy woods, sing of thy fields;
Go, publish o'er the plain
How mighty a proselyte you gain!
How noble a reprisal on the great!

How is the Muse luxuriant grown!
 Whene'er she takes this flight,
 She soars clear out of sight.
 These are the paradises of her own:
 Thy Pegasus, like an unruly horse,
 Though ne'er so gently led,
 To the lov'd pasture where he us'd to feed,
 Runs violent o'er his usual course.
 Wake from thy wanton dreams,
 Come from thy dear-lov'd streams,
 The crooked paths of wandering Thames!
 Fain the fair nymph would stay,
 Oft she looks back in vain,
 Oft 'gainst her fountain does complain,
 And softly steals in many windings down,
 As loth to see the hated court and town,
 And murmurs as she glides away.

X.

In this new happy scene
 Are nobler subjects for your learned pen;
 Here we expect from you
 More than your predecessor Adam knew;
 Whatever moves our wonder, or our sport,
 Whatever serves for innocent emblems of the court;
 How that which we a kernel see,
 (Whose well-compacted forms escape the light, Unpierc'd by the blunt rays of sight)
 Shall ere long grow into a tree;
 Whence takes it its increase, and whence its birth,
 Or from the sun, or from the air, or from the earth,
 Where all the fruitful atoms lie;
 How some go downward to the root,
 Some more ambitiously upward fly,
 And form the leaves, the branches, and the fruit.

You

You strove to cultivate a barren court in vain,
 Your garden's better worth your noble pain,
 Here mankind fell, and hence must rise again.

XI.

Shall I believe a spirit so divine
 Was cast in the same mould with mine?
 Why then does Nature so unjustly share
 Among her elder sons the whole estate,
 And all her jewels and her plate?
 Poor we! cadets of Heaven, not worth her care,
 Take up at best with lumber and the leavings of a fare:
 Some she binds 'prentice to the spade,
 Some to the drudgery of a trade;
 Some she does to Egyptian bondage draw,
 Bids us make bricks, yet sends us to look out for straw:
 Some she condemns for life to try
 To dig the leaden mines of deep philosophy:
 Me she has to the Muse's gallies tied,
 In vain I strive to cross this spacious main,
 In vain I tug and pull the oar,
 And when I almost reach the shore,
 Straight the Muse turns the helm, and I launch out again:
 And yet, to feed my pride,
 Whene'er I mourn, stops my complaining breath,
 With promise of a mad reversion after death.

XII.

Then, Sir, accept this worthless verse,
 The tribute of an humble Muse,
 'Tis all the portion of my niggard stars;
 Nature the hidden spark did at my birth infuse,
 And

And kindled first with indolence and ease ;
 And since, too oft debauch'd by praise,
 'Tis now grown an incurable disease :
 In vain to quench this foolish fire I try
 In wisdom and philosophy :
 In vain all wholesome herbs I sow,
 Where nought but weeds will grow :
 Whate'er I plant (like corn on barren earth)
 By an equivocal birth
 Seeds, and runs up to poetry.

O D E,
 TO THE ATHENIAN SOCIETY.

Moor-park, Feb. 14, 1691.

I.

AS when the deluge first began to fall,
 That mighty ebb, never to flow again,
 When this huge body's moisture was so great,
 It quite o'ercame the vital heat ;
 That mountain, which was highest first of all,
 Appear'd above the universal main,
 To bless the primitive sailor's weary sight !
 And 'twas perhaps Parnassus, if in height
 It be as great as 'tis in fame,
 And nigh to Heaven as is its name :
 So, after th' inundation of a war,
 When Learning's little houshold did embark,
 With her world's fruitful system, in her sacred ark,
 At the first ebb of noise and fears,
 Philosophy's exalted head appears ;

And

And the Dove-Muse will now no longer stay,
But plumes her silver wings, and flies away;
And now a laurel wreath she brings from far,
To crown the happy conqueror,
To show the flood begins to cease,
And brings the dear reward of victory and peace.

II.

The eager Muse took wing upon the waves' decline,
When war her cloudy aspect just withdrew,
When the bright sun of peace began to shine,
And for a while in heavenly contemplation sat,
On the high top of peaceful Ararat;
And pluck'd a laurel branch (for laurel was the first that grew,
The first of plants after the thunderstorm and rain)
And thence, with joyful nimble wing,
Flew dutifully back again,
And made an humble chaplet for the King *.
And the Dove-Muse is fled once more,
(Glad of the victory, yet frighten'd at the war)
And now discovers from afar
A peaceful and a flourishing shore:
No sooner did she land
On the delightful strand,
Than straight she sees the country all around,
Where fatal Neptune rul'd erewhile,
Scatter'd with flowery vales, with fruitful gardens
crown'd,
And many a pleasant wood!
As if the universal Nile
Had rather water'd it than drown'd:

* The Ode I writ to the King in Ireland. SWIFT.—This cannot now be recovered. N.

It seems some floating piece of Paradise,
 Preserv'd by wonder from the flood,
 Long wandering through the deep, as we are told
 Fam'd Delos did of old ;
 And the transported Muse imagin'd it
 To be a fitter birth-place for the God of wit,
 Or the much-talk'd oracular grove ;
 When, with amazing joy, she hears
 An unknown musick all around,
 Charming her greedy ears,
 With many a heavenly song
 Of nature and of art, of deep philosophy and love ;
 While angels tune the voice, and God inspires the tongue.
 In vain she catches at the empty sound,
 In vain pursues the musick with her longing eye,
 And courts the wanton echoes as they fly.

III.

Pardon, ye great unknown, and far-exalted men,
 The wild excursions of a youthful pen ;
 Forgive a young, and (almost) virgin Muse,
 Whom blind and eager curiosity
 (Yet curiosity, they say,
 Is in her sex a crime needs no excuse)
 Has forc'd to grope her uncouth way,
 After a mighty light that leads her wandering eye.
 No wonder then she quits the narrow path of sense
 For a dear ramble through impertinence ;
 Impertinence ! the scurvy of mankind.
 And all we fools, who are the greater part of it,
 Though we be of two different factions still,
 Both the good-natur'd and the ill,
 Yet wheresoe'er you look, you'll always find
 We join, like flies and wasps, in buzzing about wit.

In

In me, who am of the first sect of these,
All merit, that transcends the humble rules
Of my own dazzled scanty sense,
Begets a kinder folly and impertinence
Of admiration and of praise.
And our good brethren of the surly sect,
Must e'en all herd us with their kindred fools:
For though, possess'd of present vogue, they've made
Railing, a rule of wit, and obloquy, a trade;
Yet the same want of brains produces each effect.
And you, whom Pluto's helm does wisely shroud
From us, the blind and thoughtless crowd,
Like the fam'd hero in his mother's cloud,
Who both our follies and impertinences see,
Do laugh perhaps at theirs, and pity mine and me.

IV.

But censure's to be understood
Th' authentick mark of the elect,
The publick stamp Heaven sets on all that's great and good,
Our shallow search and judgment to direct.
The war, methinks, has made
Our wit and learning narrow as our trade;
Instead of boldly sailing far, to buy
A stock of wisdom and philosophy,
We fondly stay at home, in fear
Of every censuring privateer;
Forcing a wretched trade by beating down the sale,
And selling basely by retail.
The wits, I mean the atheists of the age,
Who fain would rule the pulpit, as they do the stage;
Wondrous

Wondrous refiners of philosophy,
Of morals and divinity,
By the new modish system of reducing all to sense,
Against all logick, and concluding laws,
Do own th' effects of Providence,
And yet deny the cause.

V.

This hopeful sect, now it begins to see
How little, very little, do prevail
Their first and chiefest force
To censure, to cry down, and rail,
Not knowing what, or where, or who you be,
Will quickly take another course :
And, by their never-failing ways
Of solving all appearances they please,
We soon shall see them to their ancient methods fall,
And straight deny you to be men, or any thing at all.
I laugh at the grave answer they will make,
Which they have always ready, general, and cheap :
'Tis but to say, that what we daily meet,
And by a fond mistake
Perhaps imagine to be wondrous wit,
And think, alas ! to be by mortals writ,
Is but a crowd of atoms justling in a heap ;
Which from eternal seeds begun,
Justling some thousand years till ripen'd by the sun ;
They're now, just now, as naturally born,
As from the womb of earth a field of corn.

VI.

But as for poor contented me,
Who must my weakness and my ignorance confess,
That I believe in much I ne'er can hope to see ;
Methinks I'm satisfy'd to guess,

That

That this new, noble, and delightful scene,
Is wonderfully mov'd by some exalted men,
Who have well studied in the world's disease,
(That epidemick error and depravity,
Or in our judgment or our eye)
That what surprises us can only please.
We often search contentedly the whole world round,
To make some great discovery;
And scorn it when 'tis found.
Just so the mighty Nile has suffer'd in its fame,
Because 'tis said (and perhaps only said)
We 've found a little inconsiderable head,
That feeds the huge unequal stream.
Consider human folly, and you 'll quickly own,
That all the praises it can give,
By which some fondly boast they shall for ever live,
Won't pay th' impertinence of being known:
Else why should the fam'd Lydian king,
(Whom all the charms of an usurped wife and state,
With all that power unfelt, courts mankind to be great,
Did with new unexperienc'd glories wait)
Still wear, still doat, on his invisible ring?

VII.

Were I to form a regular thought of Fame,
Which is perhaps as hard t' imagine right,
As to paint Echo to the sight;
I would not draw th' idea from an empty name;
Because, alas! when we all die,
Careless and ignorant posterity,
Although they praise the learning and the wit,
And though the title seems to show
The name and man by whom the book was writ,
Yet

Yet how shall they be brought to know,
Whether that very name was he, or you, or I?
Less should I daub it o'er with transitory praise,
And water-colours of these days:
These days! where e'en th' extravagance of poetry,
Is at a loss for figures to express
Men's folly, whimsies, and inconstancy,
And by a faint description makes them less.
Then tell us what is Fame, where shall we search for it?
Look where exalted Virtue and Religion sit,
Enthron'd with heavenly Wit!
Look where you see
The greatest scorn of learned vanity!
(And then how much a nothing is mankind!
Whose reason is weigh'd down by popular air,
Who, by that, vainly talks of baffling death;
And hopes to lengthen life by a transfusion of breath,
Which yet whoe'er examines right will find
To be an art as vain as bottling up of wind!)
And when you find out these, believe true Fame is there,
Far above all reward, yet to which all is due:
And this, ye great unknown! is only known in you.

VIII.

The juggling sea-god, when by chance trepann'd
By some instructed querist sleeping on the sand,
Impatient of all answers, straight became
A stealing brook, and strove to creep away
Into his native sea,

Vext •

Vext at their follies, murmur'd in his stream;
But disappointed of his fond desire,
Would vanish in a pyramid of fire.
This surly slippery God, when he design'd
To furnish his escapes,
Ne'er borrow'd more variety of shapes
Than you to please and satisfy mankind,
And seem (almost) transform'd to water, flame,
and air,
So well you answer all phenomena there:
Though madmen and the wits, philosophers and fools,
With all that factious or enthusiastick dotards dream,
And all the incoherent jargon of the schools;
Though all the fumes of fear, hope, love, and shame,
Contrive to shock your minds with many a senseless
doubt;
Doubts where the Delphick God would grope in ignorance and night,
The God of learning and of light
Would want a God himself to help him out.

IX.

Philosophy, as it before us lies,
Seems to have borrow'd some ungrateful taste
Of doubts, impertinence, and niceties,
From every age through which it pass'd,
But always with a stronger relish of the last.
This beauteous queen, by Heaven design'd
To be the great original
For man to dress and polish his uncourtly mind,
In what mock habits have they put her since the fall!
More oft in fools and madmen's hands than sages,
She seems a medley of all ages,

With a huge farthingale to swell her fustian stuff,
 A new commode, a topknot, and a ruff,
 Her face patch'd o'er with modern pedantry,
 With a long sweeping train
 Of comments and disputes, ridiculous and vain,
 All of old cut with a new dye:
 How soon have you restor'd her charms
 And rid her of her lumber and her books,
 Drest her again genteel and neat,
 And rather tight than great!
 How fond we are to court her to our arms!
 How much of Heaven is in her naked looks!

X.

Thus the deluding Muse oft blinds me to her ways,
 And ev'n my very thoughts transfers
 And changes all to beauty, and the praise
 Of that proud tyrant sex of hers.
 The rebel Muse, alas! takes part
 But with my own rebellious heart,
 And you with fatal and immortal wit conspire
 To fan th' unhappy fire.

Cruel unknown! what is it you intend?
 Ah! could you, could you hope a poet for your friend!

Rather forgive what my first transport said:
 May all the blood, which shall by woman's scorn
 be shed,

Lie upon you and on your children's head!
 For you (ah! did I think I e'er should live to see
 The fatal time when that could be!)
 Have ev'n increas'd their pride and cruelty.
 Woman seems now above all vanity grown,
 Still boasting of her great unknown

Platonick

Platonick champions, gain'd without one female wile,
Or the vast charges of a smile;
Which 'tis a shame to see how much of late
You've taught the covetous wretches to o'errate,
And which they've now the consciences to weigh
In the same balance with our tears,
And with such scanty wages pay
The bondage and the slavery of years.
Let the vain sex dream on; the empire comes from us,
And had they common generosity,
They would not use us thus.
Well—though you've rais'd her to this high degree,
Ourselves are rais'd as well as she;
And, spite of all that they or you can do,
'Tis pride and happiness enough to me,
Still to be of the same exalted sex with you.

XI.

Alas, how fleeting and how vain,
Is ev'n the nobler man, our learning and our wit!
I sigh whene'er I think of it:
As at the closing of an unhappy scene
Of some great king and conqueror's death,
When the sad melancholy Muse
Stays but to catch his utmost breath.
I grieve, this nobler work most happily begun,
So quickly and so wonderfully carry'd on,
May fall at last to interest, folly, and abuse.
There is a noontide in our lives,
Which still the sooner it arrives,
Although we boast our winter sun looks bright,
And foolishly are glad to see it at its height,
Yet so much sooner comes the long and gloomy night.

No conquest ever yet begun,
And by one mighty hero carried to its height,
E'er flourish'd under a successor or a son;
It lost some mighty pieces through all hands it past,
And vanish'd to an empty title in the last.

For, when the animating mind is fled (Which nature never can retain,
Nor e'er call back again)
The body, though gigantick, lies all cold and dead.

XII.

And thus undoubtedly 'twill fare,
With what unhappy men shall dare
To be successors to these great unknown,
On Learning's high-establish'd throne,
Censure, and Pedantry, and Pride,
Numberless nations, stretching far and wide,
Shall (I foresee it) soon with Gothick swarms come forth

From Ignorance's universal North,
And with blind rage break all this peaceful government:

Yet shall these traces of your wit remain,
Like a just map, to tell the vast extent
Of conquest in your short and happy reign;

And to all future mankind shew
How strange a paradox is true,
That men who liv'd and died without a name
Are the chief heroes in the sacred list of fame.

WRITTEN IN A LADY'S IVORY TABLEBOOK,

PERUSE my leaves through every part,
 And think thou seest my owner's heart,
 Scrawl'd o'er with trifles thus, and quite
 As hard, as senseless, and as light;
 Expos'd to every coxcomb's eyes,
 But hid with caution from the wise.
 Here you may read, "Dear charming saint!"
 Beneath, "A new receipt for paint:"
 Here, in beau-spelling, "True tel deth;"
 There, in her own, "For an el breth:"
 Here, "Lovely nymph, pronounce my doom!"
 There, "A safe way to use perfume:"
 Here, a page fill'd with billets-doux;
 On t'other side, "Laid out for shoes"—
 "Madam, I die without your grace"—
 "Item, for half a yard of lace."
 Who that had wit would place it here,
 For every peeping fop to jeer?
 In power of spittle and a clout,
 Whene'er he please to blot it out;
 And then, to heighten the disgrace,
 Clap his own nonsense in the place.
 Whoe'er expects to hold his part
 In such a book, and such a heart,
 If he be wealthy, and a fool,
 Is in all points the fittest tool;
 Of whom it may be justly said,
 He's a gold pencil tipp'd with lead.

MRS. HARRIS'S PETITION. 1699.

TO their Excellencies the Lords Justices of Ireland *, The humble petition of Frances Harris,
 Who must starve, and die a maid, if it miscarries ;
 Humbly sheweth,
 That I went to warm myself in lady Betty's † chamber, because I was cold ;
 And I had in a purse seven pounds, four shillings, and six pence, beside farthings, in money and gold ;
 So, because I had been buying things for my lady
 last night,
 I was resolved to tell my money, to see if it was right.
 Now, you must know, because my trunk has a very bad lock,
 Therefore all the money I have, which, God knows, is a very small stock,
 I keep in my pocket, tied about my middle, next to my smock. }
 So when I went to put up my purse, as God would have it, my smock was unripp'd,
 And, instead of putting it into my pocket, down
 it slipp'd ;
 Then the bell rung, and I went down to put my lady to bed ;
 And, God knows, I thought my money was as safe as my maidenhead.
 So, when I came up again, I found my pocket feel very light ;
 But when I search'd, and miss'd my purse, Lord !
 I thought I should have sunk outright.

* The earls of Berkeley and of Galway.

† Lady Betty Berkeley, afterward Germaine.

Lord !

Lord ! madam, says Mary, how d'ye do ? Indeed, says I, never worse :

But pray, Mary, can you tell what I have done with my purse ?

Lord help me ! says Mary, I never stirr'd out of this place :

Nay, said I, I had it in lady Betty's chamber, that's a plain case.

So Mary got me to bed, and cover'd me up warm :

However, she stole away my garters, that I might do myself no harm.

So I tumbled and toss'd all night, as you may very well think,

But hardly ever set my eyes together, or slept a wink.

So I was a-dream'd, methought, that we went and search'd the folks round,

And in a corner of Mrs. Dukes's * box, tied in a rag, the money was found.

So next morning we told Whittle †, and he fell a swearing :

Then my dame Wadgar ‡ came ; and she, you know, is thick of hearing.

Dame, said I, as loud as I could bawl, do you know what a loss I have had ?

Nay, said she, my lord Colway's § folks are all very sad :

For my lord Dromedary || comes a Tuesday without fail.

Pugh ! said I, but that's not the business that I ail.

* Wife to one of the footmen.

‡ The old deaf housekeeper.

§ Galway.

|| The earl of Drogheda, who with the primate was to succeed
the two earls.

Says Cary *, says he, I have been a servant this five and twenty years, come spring,

And in all the places I liv'd I never heard of such a thing.

Yes, says the steward †, I remember when I was at my lady Shrewsbury's,

Such a thing as this happen'd just about the time of gooseberries.

So I went to the party suspected, and I found her full of grief;

Now, you must know, of all things in the world, I hate a thief:

However, I was resolv'd to bring the discourse slyly about:

Mrs. Dukes, said I, here's an ugly accident has hap-pen'd out:

'Tis not that I value the money three skips of a louse ‡;

But the thing I stand upon is the credit of the house.

'Tis true, seven pounds, four shillings, and six pence, makes a great hole in my wages:

Besides, as they say, service is no inheritance in these ages.

Now, Mrs. Dukes, you know, and every body understands,

That though 'tis hard to judge, yet money can't go without hands.

The devil take me! said she (blessing herself) if ever I saw 't!

So she roar'd like a Bedlam, as though I had call'd her all to naught.

* Clerk of the kitchen.

† Ferris, of whom, see Journal to Stella, Dec. 21, 1710.

‡ A usual saying of hers.

So you know, what could I say to her any more?
I e'en left her, and came away as wise as I was before.

Well; but then they would have had me gone to the cunning man!

No, said I, 'tis the same thing, the chaplain will be here anon.

So the chaplain * came in. Now the servants say he is my sweetheart,

Because he's always in my chamber, and I always take his part.

So, as the devil would have it, before I was aware,
out I blunder'd,

Parson, said I, can you cast a nativity, when a body's plunder'd?

(Now you must know, he hates to be call'd parson like the devil!)

Truly, says he, Mrs. Nab, it might become you to be more civil;

If your money be gone, as a learned divine says, d'ye see,

You are no text for my handling; so take that from me:

I was never taken for a conjurer before, I'd have you to know.

Lord! said I, don't be angry, I am sure I never thought you so;

You know I honour the cloth; I design to be a parson's wife;

I never took one in your coat for a conjurer in all my life.

* Dr. Swift.

With

With that he twisted his girdle at me like a rope, as who should say,

Now you may go hang yourself for me! and so went away.

Well: I thought I should have swoon'd. Lord! said I, what shall I do?

I have lost my money, and shall lose my true love too!

Then my lord call'd me: Harry*, said my lord,
don't cry;

I'll give you something toward thy loss: and, says
my lady, so will I.

Oh! but said I, what if, after all, the chaplain won't come to?

For that, he said, (an't please your excellencies,) I must petition you.

The premises tenderly consider'd, I desire your excellencies protection,

And that I may have a share in next Sunday's collection;

And, over and above, that I may have your excellencies letter,

With an order for the chaplain aforesaid, or, instead of him, a better:

And then your poor petitioner, both night and day,
Or the chaplain (for 'tis his trade), as in duty bound,
shall ever pray.

* A cant word of lord and lady B. to Mrs. Harris.

ON THE GAME OF TRAFFICK.

Written at the Castle of Dublin, 1699.

MY Lord *, to find out who must deal,
Delivers cards about,
But the first knave does seldom fail
To find the doctor out.

But then his honour cry'd, gadzooks!

And seem'd to knit his brow:
For on a knave he never looks

But h' thinks upon Jack How †.

My lady, though she is no player,
Some bungling partner takes,
And, wedg'd in corner of a chair,
Takes snuff, and holds the stakes.

Dame Floyd looks out in grave suspense

For pair-royals and sequents;

But, wisely cautious of her pence,

The castle seldom frequents.

Quoth Herries, fairly putting cases,

I'd won it on my word,

If I had but a pair of aces,

And could pick up a third.

But Weston has a new-cast gown

On Sundays to be fine in,

And, if she can but win a crown,

'Twill just new dye the lining.

* The earl of Berkeley.

† Paymaster to the army.

 “ Not knowing how to spend his time,
 “ Does make a wretched shift,
 “ To deafen them with puns and rhyme.”

A BALLAD,

TO THE TUNE OF, THE CUT-PURSE*.

Written in 1699.

I.

ONCE on a time, as old stories rehearse,
 A friar would need show his talent in Latin;
 But was sorely put to 't in the midst of a verse,
 Because he could find no word to come pat in :
 Then all in the place
 He left a void space,
 And so went to bed in a desperate case :
 When behold the next morning a wonderful riddle !
 He found it was strangely filled up in the middle.

CHO. Let censuring criticks then think what they list on 't ;

Who would not write verses with such an assistant ?

II.

This put me the friar into an amazement :

For he wisely consider'd it must be a sprite ;

* Lady Betty Berkeley, finding the preceding verses in the author's room unfinished, wrote under them the concluding stanza ; which gave occasion to this ballad, written by the author in a counterfeit hand, as if a third person had done it.

That

That he came through the keyhole, or in at the casement;

And it needs must be one that could both read and write:

Yet he did not know

If it were friend or foe,

Or whether it came from above or below:

However, 'twas civil, in angel or elf,

For he ne'er could have fill'd it so well of himself.

CHOR. Let censuring, &c.

III.

Even so master doctor had puzzled his brains

In making a ballad, but was at a stand:

He had mixt little wit with a great deal of pains,

When he found a new help from invisible hand.

Then, good doctor Swift,

Pay thanks for the gift,

For you freely must own, you were at a dead lift:

And, though some malicious young spirit did do't,

You may know by the hand it had no cloven foot.

CHO. Let censuring, &c.

THE DISCOVERY.

WHEN wise lord Berkeley first came here *,

Statesmen and mob expected wonders,

Nor thought to find so great a peer

Ere a week past committing blunders.

* To Ireland, as one of the lords justices.

Till on a day cut out by fate,
 When folks came thick to make their court,
 Out slipt a mystery of state,
 To give the town and country sport.
 Now enters Bush * with new state airs,
 His lordship's premier minister;
 And who, in all profound affairs,
 Is held as needful as his clyster †.
 With head reclining on his shoulder,
 He deals and hears mysterious chat,
 While every ignorant beholder,
 Asks of his neighbour, who is that?
 With this he put up to my lord,
 The courtiers kept their distance due,
 He twitch'd his sleeve, and stole a word;
 Then to a corner both withdrew.
 Imagine now, my lord and Bush
 Whispering in junto most profound,
 Like good king Phyz and good king Ush ‡,
 While all the rest stood gaping round.
 At length a spark not too well bred,
 Of forward face and ear acute,
 Advanc'd on tiptoe, lean'd his head,
 To overhear the grand dispute;
 To learn what Northern kings design,
 Or from Whitehall some new express,
 Papists disarm'd, or fall of coin;
 For sure (thought he) it can't be less.
 My lord, said Bush, a friend and I,
 Disguis'd in two old threadbare coats,

* Bush, by some underhand insinuation, obtained the post of secretary; which had been promised to Swift.

† Always taken before my lord went to council.

‡ See "The Rehearsal."

Ere morning's dawn, stole out to spy
 How markets went for hay and oats.
 With that he draws two handfuls out,
 The one was oats, the other hay;
 Puts this to's excellency's snout,
 And begs he would the other weigh.
 My lord seems pleas'd, but still directs
 By all means to bring down the rates;
 Then, with a conjée circumflex,
 Bush, smiling round on all retreats.
 Our listener stood a while confus'd,
 But gathering spirits, wisely ran for't,
 Enrag'd to see the world abus'd,
 By two such whispering kings of Brentford.

THE PROBLEM.

“THAT MY LORD BERKELEY STINKS,
 “WHEN HE IS IN LOVE.”

DID ever problem thus perplex,
 Or more employ the female sex?
 So sweet a passion, who would think,
 Jove ever form'd to make a stink?
 The ladies vow and swear, they'll try,
 Whether it be a truth or lie.
 Love's fire, it seems, like inward heat,
 Works in my lord by stool and sweat,
 Which brings a stink from every pore,
 And from behind and from before;
 Yet, what is wonderful to tell it,
 None but the favourite nymph can smell it.

But

But now, to solve the natural cause
 By sober philosophick laws:
 Whether all passions, when in ferment,
 Work out as anger does in vermin;
 So, when a weasel you torment,
 You find his passion by his scent.
 We read of kings, who, in a fright,
 Though on a throne, would fall to sh—.
 Beside all this, deep scholars know,
 That the main string of Cupid's bow,
 Once on a time was an a— gut;
 Now to a nobler office put,
 By favour or desert preferr'd
 From giving passage to a t—;
 But still, though fix'd among the stars
 Does sympathize with human a—.

Thus, when you feel a hardbound breech,
 Conclude love's bowstring at full stretch,
 Till the kind looseness comes, and then
 Conclude the bow relax'd again.

And now, the ladies all are bent
 To try the great experiment,
 Ambitious of a regent's heart,
 Spread all their charms to catch a f—;
 Watching the first unsavoury wind,
 Some ply before, and some behind.
 My lord, on fire amid the dames,
 F—ts like a laurel in the flames.
 The fair approach the speaking part,
 To try the back-way to his heart.
 For, as when we a gun discharge,
 Although the bore be ne'er so large,
 Before the flame from muzzle burst,
 Just at the breech it flashes first:

So from my lord his passion broke,
He f—d first, and then he spoke.

The ladies vanish in the smother,
To confer notes with one another,
And now they all agreed to name
Whom each one thought the happy dame.
Quoth Neal, whate'er the rest may think,
I'm sure 'twas I, that smelt the stink.
You smell the stink! by G—d, you lye,
Quoth Ross, for I'll be sworn 'twas I.
Ladies, quoth Levens, pray forbear:
Let's not fall out; we all had share,
And, by the most I can discover,
My lord's a universal lover.

THE DESCRIPTION OF A SALAMANDER. 1706.

Pliny, Nat. Hist. lib. x. c. 67. lib. xxix. c. 4.

AS mastiff dogs in modern phrase are Call'd Pompey, Scipio, and Cæsar;
As pies and daws are often styl'd
With Christian nicknames, like a child;
As we say monsieur to an ape,
Without offence to human shape;
So men have got, from bird and brute,
Names that would best their natures suit.
The Lion, Eagle, Fox, and Boar,
Were heroes titles heretofore,
Bestow'd as hieroglyphicks fit
To show their valour, strength, or wit:

VOL. VII.

D

For

For what is understood by fame,
 Beside the getting of a name?
 But, e'er since men invented guns,
 A different way their fancy runs:
 To paint a hero, we inquire
 For something that will conquer fire.
 Would you describe Turenne or Trump?
 Think of a bucket or a pump.
 Are these too low?—then find out grander,
 Call my lord Cutts a Salamander.
 'Tis well;—but, since we live among
 Detractors with an evil tongue,
 Who may object against the term,
 Pliny shall prove, what we affirm:
 Pliny shall prove and we'll apply,
 And I'll be judg'd by standers by.

First, then, our author has defin'd
 This reptile of the serpent kind,
 With gaudy coat and shining train;
 But loathsome spots his body stain:
 Out from some hole obscure he flies,
 When rains descend, and tempests rise,
 Till the sun clears the air; and then
 Crawls back neglected to his den.

So, when the war has rais'd a storm,
 I've seen a snake in human form,
 All stain'd with infamy and vice,
 Leap from the dunghill in a trice,
 Burnish, and make a gaudy show,
 Become a general, peer, and beau,
 Till peace has made the sky serene;
 Then shrink into its hole again.

“ All this we grant—why then look yonder.

“ Sure that must be a salamander!”

Farther,

Farther, we are by Pliny told,
 This serpent is extremely cold ;
 So cold, that put it in the fire,
 'Twill make the very flames expire :
 Besides, it spews a filthy froth
 (Whether through rage or lust, or both)
 Of matter purulent and white,
 Which, happening on the skin to light,
 And there corrupting to a wound,
 Spreads leprosy and baldness round.

So I have seen a batter'd beau,
 By age and claps grown cold as snow,
 Whose breath or touch, where'er he came,
 Blew out love's torch, or chill'd the flame :
 And should some nymph, who ne'er was cruel,
 Like Charlton cheap, or fam'd Du-Ruel,
 Receive the filth which he ejects,
 She soon would find the same effects,
 Her tainted carcase to pursue,
 As from the salamander's spew ;
 A dismal shedding of her locks,
 And, if no leprosy, a pox.
 " Then I'll appeal to each by-stander,
 " If this be not a salamander?"

 The Christian worlds his deeds proclaim,
 And prints are crowded with his name.

In journies he outrides the post,
Sits up till midnight with his host,
Talks politicks, and gives the toast.

Knows every prince in Europe's face,
Flies like a squib from place to place,
And travels not, but runs a race.

From Paris gazette a-la-main,
This day arriv'd, without his train,
Mordanto in a week from Spain.

A messenger comes all a-reek
Mordanto at Madrid to seek;
He left the town above a week.

Next day the postboy winds his horn,
And rides through Dover in the morn:
Mordanto's landed from Leghorn.

Mordanto gallops on alone,
The roads are with his followers strown,
This breaks a girth, and that a bone;

His body active as his mind,
Returning sound in limb and wind,
Except some leather lost behind.

A skeleton in outward figure,
His meagre corpse, though full of vigour,
Would halt behind him, were it bigger.

So wonderful his expedition,
When you have not the least suspicion,
He's with you like an apparition.

Shines in all climates like a star;
In senates bold, and fierce in war;
A land commander, and a tar:

Heroick

Heroick actions early bred in,
 Ne'er to be match'd in modern reading,
 But by his namesake Charles of Sweden.

ON THE UNION.

THE queen has lately lost a part
 Of her ENTIRELY-ENGLISH * heart,
 For want of which, by way of botch,
 She piec'd it up again with scotch.
 Blest revolution ! which creates
 Divided hearts, united states !
 See how the double nation lies,
 Like a rich coat, with skirts of frize :
 As if a man, in making posies,
 Should bundle thistles up with roses.
 Who ever yet a union saw
 Of kingdoms without faith or law ?
 Henceforward let no statesman dare
 A kingdom to a ship compare ;
 Lest he should call our commonweal,
 A vessel with a double keel :
 Which, just like ours, new rigg'd and mann'd,
 And got about a league from land,
 By change of wind to leeward side,
 The pilot knew not how to guide.
 So tossing faction will o'erwhelm
 Our crazy double-bottom'd realm.

* The motto on queen Anne's coronation medal.

ON MRS. BIDDY FLOYD;

OR, THE RECEIPT TO FORM A BEAUTY *.

WHEN Cupid did his grandsire Jove intreat
 To form some Beauty by a new receipt,
 Jove sent, and found, far in a country scene,
 Truth, innocence, good nature, look serene :
 From which ingredients first the dextrous boy
 Pick'd the demure, the awkward, and the coy.
 The Graces, from the court did next provide Breeding, and wit, and air, and decent pride:
 These Venus cleans from every spurious grain
 Of nice, coquet, affected, pert, and vain.
 Jove mix'd up all, and the best clay employ'd ;
 Then call'd the happy composition Floyd.

 APOLLO OUTWITTED.

To the Honourable Mrs. FINCH, afterward Countess of WINCHELSEA, under her name of ARDELIA.

PHŒBUS, now shortening every shade,
 Up to the northern tropick came,
 And thence beheld a lovely maid,
 Attending on a royal dame.

The god laid down his feeble rays,
 Then lighted from his glittering coach ;
 But fenc'd his head with his own bays,
 Before he durst the nymph approach.

* An elegant Latin version of this "Receipt" is printed in the sixth volume of Dryden's Miscellanies.

Under those sacred leaves, secure
From common lightning of the skies,
He fondly thought he might endure
The flashes of Ardelia's eyes.

The nymph, who oft had read in books
Of that bright god whom bards invoke,
Soon knew Apollo by his looks,
And guess'd his business ere he spoke.

He, in the old celestial cant,
Confess'd his flame, and swore by Styx,
Whate'er she would desire, to grant—
But wise Ardelia knew his tricks.

Ovid had warn'd her, to beware
Of strolling gods, whose usual trade is,
Under pretence of taking air,
To pick up sublunary ladies.

Howe'er she gave no flat denial,
As having malice in her heart ;
And was resolv'd upon a trial,
To cheat the god in his own art.

Hear my request, the virgin said ;
Let which I please of all the Nine
Attend, whene'er I want their aid,
Obey my call, and only mine.

By vow oblig'd, by passion led,
The god could not refuse her prayer :
He wav'd his wreath thrice o'er her head,
Thrice mutter'd something to the air.

And now he thought to seize his due ;
But she the charm already tried :
Thalia heard the call, and flew
To wait at bright Ardelia's side.

On sight of this celestial prude,
 Apollo thought it vain to stay;
 Nor in her presence durst be rude,
 But made his leg, and went away.

He hop'd to find some lucky hour,
 When on their queen the Muses wait;
 But Pallas owns Ardelia's power;
 For vows divine are kept by Fate.

Then, full of rage, Apollo spoke:
 Deceitful nymph! I see thy art;
 And, though I can't my gift revoke,
 I'll disappoint its nobler part.

Let stubborn pride possess thee long,
 And be thou negligent of fame;
 With every Muse to grace thy song,
 May'st thou despise a poet's name!

Of modest poets thou be first;
 To silent shades repeat thy verse,
 Till Fame and Echo almost burst,
 Yet hardly dare one line rehearse.

And last, my vengeance to complete,
 May'st thou descend to take renown,
 Prevail'd on by the thing you hate,
 A whig! and one that wears a gown!

VANBRUGH'S HOUSE,

BUILT FROM THE RUINS OF WHITEHALL, 1706.

IN times of old, when time was young,
 And poets their own verses sung,
 A verse would draw a stone or beam,
 That now would overload a team;
 Lead them a dance of many a mile,
 Then rear them to a goodly pile.
 Each number had its different power:
 Heroick strains could build a tower;
 Sonnets, or elegies to Chloris,
 Might raise a house about two stories;
 A lyrick ode would slate; a catch
 Would tile; an epigram would thatch.

But, to their own or landlord's cost,
 Now poets feel this art is lost.
 Not one of all our tuneful throng
 Can raise a lodging for a song.
 For Jove consider'd well the case,
 Observ'd they grew a numerous race:
 And should they build as fast as write,
 'Twould ruin undertakers quite.
 This evil therefore to prevent,
 He wisely chang'd their element:
 On earth the god of wealth was made
 Sole patron of the building trade;
 Leaving the wits the spacious air,
 With licence to build castles there:
 And 'tis conceiv'd, their old pretence
 To lodge in garrets comes from thence.

Premising

Premising thus, in modern way,
The better half we have to say;
Sing, Muse, the house of poet Van,
In higher strains than we began.

Van (for 'tis fit the reader know it)
Is both a herald and a poet;
No wonder then if nicely skill'd
In both capacities to build.
As herald, he can in a day
Repair a house gone to decay;
Or, by achievement, arms, device,
Erect a new one in a trice;
And as a poet, he has skill
To build in speculation still.
Great Jove! he cry'd, the art restore
To build by verse as heretofore,
And make my Muse the architect;
What palaces shall we erect!
No longer shall forsaken Thames
Lament his old Whitehall in flames;
A pile shall from its ashes rise,
Fit to invade or prop the skies.

Jove smil'd, and like a gentle god,
Consenting with the usual nod,
Told Van, he knew his talent best,
And left the choice to his own breast.
So Van resolv'd to write a farce;
But, well perceiving wit was scarce,
With cunning that defect supplies:
Takes a French play as lawful prize;
Steals thence his plot and every joke,
Not once suspecting Jove would smoke;
And (like a wag set down to write)
Would whisper to himself, a bite.

Then,

Then, from this motley mingled style,
Proceeded to erect his pile.
So men of old, to gain renown, did
Build Babel with their tongues confounded.
Jove saw the cheat, but thought it best
To turn the matter to a jest:
Down from Olympus' top he slides,
Laughing as if he 'd burst his sides:
Ay, thought the god, are these your tricks?
Why then old plays deserve old bricks;
And since you're sparing of your stuff,
Your building shall be small enough.
He spake, and grudging, lent his aid;
Th' experienc'd bricks, that knew their trade,
(As being bricks at second-hand)
Now move, and now in order stand.

The building, as the poet writ,
Rose in proportion to his wit:
And first the prologue built a wall;
So wide as to encompass all.
The scene, a wood, produc'd no more
Than a few scrubby trees before.
The plot as yet lay deep; and so
A cellar next was dug below:
But this a work so hard was found,
Two acts it cost him under ground.
Two other acts, we may presume,
Were spent in building each a room:
Thus far advanc'd, he made a shift
To raise a roof with act the fifth.
The epilogue behind did frame
A place not decent here to name.

Now poets from all quarters ran,
To see the house of brother Van:

Look'd

Look'd high and low, walk'd often round;
But no such house was to be found.
One asks the watermen hard by,
"Where may the poet's palace lie?"
Another of the Thames inquires,
If he has seen its gilded spires?
At length they in the rubbish spy
A thing resembling a goose-pye.
Thither in haste the poets throng,
And gaze in silent wonder long,
Till one in raptures thus began
To praise the pile and builder Van.

Thrice happy poet! who mayst trail
Thy house about thee like a snail:
Or, harness'd to a nag, at ease
Take journeys in it like a chaise;
Or in a boat, whene'er thou wilt,
Canst make it serve thee for a tilt!
Capacious house! 'tis own'd by all
Thou'rt well contriv'd, though thou art small:
For every wit in Britain's isle
May lodge within thy spacious pile.
Like Bacchus thou, as poets feign,
Thy mother burnt, art born again,
Born like a phoenix from the flame;
But neither bulk nor shape the same;
As animals of largest size
Corrupt to maggots, worms, and flies;
A type of modern wit and style,
The rubbish of an ancient pile.
So chemists boast they have a power,
From the dead ashes of a flower,
Some faint resemblance to produce,
But not the virtue, taste, or juice.

So

So modern rhymers wisely blast,
The poetry of ages past;
Which, after they have overthrown,
They from its ruins build their own.

THE HISTORY OF

VANBRUGH'S HOUSE. 1708.

WHEN mother Clud had rose from play,
And call'd to take the cards away,
Van saw, but seem'd not to regard,
How Miss pick'd every painted card,
And busy both with hand and eye,
Soon rear'd a house two stories high.
Van's genius, without thought or lecture,
Is hugely turn'd to architecture:
He view'd the edifice, and smil'd,
Vow'd it was pretty for a child:
It was so perfect in its kind,
He kept the model in his mind.

But, when he found the boys at play,
And saw them dabbling in their clay,
He stood behind a stall to lurk,
And mark the progress of their work;
With true delight observ'd them all
Raking up mud to build a wall.
The plan he much admir'd, and took
The model in his tablebook:
Thought himself now exactly skill'd,
And so resolv'd a house to build;

A real

A real house, with rooms, and stairs,
Five times at least as big as theirs;
Taller than Miss's by two yards;
Not a sham thing of clay or cards:
And so he did; for, in a while,
He built up such a monstrous pile,
That no two chairmen could be found
Able to lift it from the ground.
Still at Whitehall it stands in view,
Just in the place where first it grew:
There all the little schoolboys run,
Envyng to see themselves outdone.

From such deep rudiments as these,
Van is become, by due degrees,
For building fam'd, and justly reckon'd,
At court, Vitruvius the second:
No wonder, since wise authors show,
That best foundations must be low;
And now the duke has wisely ta'en him
To be his architect at Blenheim.

But, raillery at once apart,
If this rule holds in every art;
Or if his grace were no more skill'd in
The art of battering walls than building,
We might expect to see next year,
A mouse-trap-man chief engineer!

BAUCIS AND PHILEMON*.

ON THE EVERLAMENTED LOSS OF THE TWO YEW-TREES IN THE PARISH OF CHILTHORNE, SOMERSET. 1708.

Imitated from the Eighth Book of OVID.

IN ancient times, as story tells,
The saints would often leave their cells,
And stroll about, but hide their quality,
To try good people's hospitality.

It happen'd on a winter night, 5
As authors of the legend write,
Two brother hermits, saints by trade,
Taking their tour in masquerade,
Disguis'd in tatter'd habits, went
To a small village down in Kent; 10
Where, in the strollers' canting strain,
They begg'd from door to door in vain,
Tried every tone might pity win;
But not a soul would let them in.

Our wandering saints, in woeful state, 15
Treated at this ungodly rate,
Having through all the village past,
To a small cottage came at last!
Where dwelt a good old honest ye'man,
Call'd in the neighbourhood Philemon; 20
Who kindly did these saints invite
In his poor hut to pass the night;

* This poem is very fine; and though in the same strain with Prior's Ladle, is yet superiour. GOLDSMITH.

And then the hospitable sire
 Bid goody Baucis mend the fire ;
 While he from out the chimney took 25
 A flitch of bacon off the hook,
 And freely from the fattest side
 Cut out large slices to be fry'd ;
 Then step'd aside to fetch them drink,
 Fill'd a large jug up to the brink, 30
 And saw it fairly twice go round ;
 Yet (what is wonderful !) they found,
 'Twas still replenish'd to the top,
 As if they ne'er had touch'd a drop.
 The good old couple were amaz'd, 35
 And often on each other gaz'd ;
 For both were frighten'd to the heart,
 And just began to cry,—What ar't !
 Then softly turn'd aside, to view
 Whether the lights were burning blue. 40
 The gentle pilgrims, soon aware on't,
 Told them their calling, and their errand :
 Good folks, you need not be afraid,
 We are but saints, the hermits said ;
 No hurt shall come to you or yours : 45
 But for that pack of churlish boors,
 Not fit to live on Christian ground,
 They and their houses shall be drown'd ;
 While you shall see your cottage rise,
 And grow a church before your eyes. 50
 They scarce had spoke, when fair and soft,
 The roof began to mount aloft ;
 Aloft rose every beam and rafter ;
 The heavy wall climb'd slowly after.
 The chimney widen'd, and grew higher, 55
 Became a steeple with a spire.

"The kettle to the top was hoist,
 And there stood fasten'd to a joist,
 But with the upside down, to show
 Its inclination for below : 60
 In vain ; for a superiour force
 Apply'd at bottom stops its course :
 Doom'd ever in suspense to dwell,
 'Tis now no kettle, but a bell.

A wooden jack, which had almost 65
 Lost by disuse the art to roast,
 A sudden alteration feels,
 Increas'd by new intestine wheels ;
 And, what exalts the wonder more,
 The number made the motion slower. 70
 The flier, though it had leaden feet,
 Turn'd round so quick you scarce could see 't ;
 But, slacken'd by some secret power,
 Now hardly moves an inch an hour.

The jack and chimney, near allied, 75
 Had never left each other's side :
 The chimney to a steeple grown,
 The jack would not be left alone ;
 But, up against the steeple rear'd,
 Became a clock, and still adher'd ; 80
 And still its love to household cares,
 By a shrill voice at noon, declares,
 Warning the cookmaid not to burn
 That roast meat, which it cannot turn.

The groaning-chair began to crawl, 85
 Like a huge snail, along the wall ;
 There stuck aloft in publick view,
 And with small change, a pulpit grew.

The porringers, that in a row
 Hung high, and made a glittering show, 90

To a less noble substance chang'd,
Were now but leathern buckets rang'd.

The ballads, pasted on the wall,
Of Joan of France, and English Mall*,
Fair Rosamond, and Robinhood, 95
The Little Children in the Wood,
Now seem'd to look abundance better,
Improv'd in picture, size, and letter;
And, high in order plac'd, describe
The heraldry of every tribe †. 100

A bedstead of the antique mode,
Compact of timber many a load,
Such as our ancestors did use,
Was metamorphos'd into pews;
Which still their ancient nature keep, 105
By lodging folks dispos'd to sleep.

The cottage, by such feats as these,
Grown to a church by just degrees,
The hermits then desir'd their host
To ask for what he fancy'd most. 110
Philemon, having paus'd a while,
Return'd them thanks in homely style;
Then said, My house is grown so fine,
Methinks, I still would call it mine.
I'm old, and fain would live at ease; 115
Make me the parson if you please.

He spoke, and presently he feels
His grazier's coat fall down his heels:
He sees, yet hardly can believe,
About each arm a pudding-sleeve; 120

* Mall Frith, the Roaring Girl. See Granger.

† The tribes of Israel are sometimes distinguished in country churches by the ensigns given to them by Jacob.

His waistcoat to a cassock grew
 And both assum'd a sable hue ;
 But, being old, continu'd just
 As threadbare, and as full of dust.
 His talk was now of tithes and dues : 125
 He smok'd his pipe, and read the news ;
 Knew how to preach old sermons next,
 Vamp'd in the preface and the text ;
 At christenings well could act his part,
 And had the service all by heart ; 130
 Wish'd women might have children fast,
 And thought whose sow had farrow'd last ;
 Against dissenters would repine,
 And stood up firm for right divine ;
 Found his head fill'd with many a system : 135
 But classick authors,—he ne'er miss'd 'em.

Thus having furbish'd up a parson,
 Dame Baucis next they play'd their farce on.
 Instead of homespun coifs, were seen
 Good pinnars edg'd with colberteen ; 140
 Her petticoat, transform'd apace,
 Became black sattin flounc'd with lace.
 Plain Goody would no longer down,
 'Twas Madam, in her grogram gown.
 Philemon was in great surprise, 145
 And hardly could believe his eyes,
 Amaz'd to see her look so prim ;
 And she admir'd as much at him.

Thus happy in their change of life,
 Were several years this man and wife : 150
 When on a day which prov'd their last,
 Discoursing o'er old stories past,
 They went by chance, amid their talk,
 To the churchyard to take a walk ;

When Baucis hastily cry'd out, 155
 My dear, I see your forehead sprout!
 Sprout! quoth the man; what's this you tell us?
 I hope you don't believe me jealous!
 But yet, methinks, I feel it true;
 And really yours is budding too — 160
 Nay, — now I cannot stir my foot;
 It feels as if 'twere taking root.

Description would but tire my muse,
 In short, they both were turn'd to yews,
 Old goodman Dobson of the green 165
 Remembers he the trees has seen;
 He'll talk of them from noon till night,
 And goes with folks to show the sight;
 On Sundays, after evening prayer,
 He gathers all the parish there; 170
 Points out the place of either yew;
 Here Baucis, there Philemon, grew:
 Till once a parson of our town,
 To mend his barn, cut Baucis down;
 At which, 'tis hard to be believ'd 175
 How much the other tree was griev'd,
 Grew scrubbed, died atop, was stunted;
 So the next parson stubb'd and burnt it.

ELEGY

E L E G Y

ON THE SUPPOSED DEATH OF PARTRIDGE, THE ALMANACK MAKER. 1708.

WELL; 'tis as Bickerstaff has guess'd,
Though we all took it for a jest:
Partridge is dead; nay more, he died
Ere he could prove the good 'squire lied.
Strange, an astrologer should die
Without one wonder in the sky!
Not one of all his crony stars
To pay their duty at his hearse!
No meteor, no eclipse appear'd!
No comet with a flaming beard!
The sun has rose, and gone to bed,
Just as if Partridge were not dead;
Nor hid himself behind the moon
To make a dreadful night at noon.
He at fit periods walks through Aries,
Howe'er our earthly motion varies;
And twice a year he'll cut th' equator,
As if there had been no such matter.

Some wits have wonder'd what analogy
There is 'twixt cobbling* and astrology;
How Partridge made his opticks rise
From a shoe-sole to reach the skies.

A list the cobbler's temples ties,
To keep the hair out of his eyes;
From whence 'tis plain, the diadem
That princes wear derives from them:

* Partridge was a cobbler.

And therefore crowns are nowadays
Adorn'd with golden stars and rays;
Which plainly shows the near alliance
'Twixt cobbling and the planet science.

Besides, that slow-pac'd sign Boötes,
As 'tis miscall'd, we know not who 'tis:
But Partridge ended all disputes;
He knew his trade, and call'd it boots.

The horned moon, which heretofore
Upon their shoes the Romans wore,
Whose wideness kept their toes from corns,
And whence we claim our shoeing-horns,
Shows how the art of cobbling bears
A near resemblance to the spheres.
A scrap of parchment hung by geometry,
(A great refiner in barometry)
Can, like the stars, foretell the weather;
And what is parchment else but leather?
Which an astrologer might use
Either for almanacks or shoes.

Thus Partridge, by his wit and parts,
At once did practise both these arts:
And as the boding owl (or rather
The bat, because her wings are leather)
Steals from her private cell by night,
And flies about the candle-light;
So learned Partridge could as well
Creep in the dark from leathern cell,
And in his fancy fly as far,
To peep upon a twinkling star.

Besides, he could confound the spheres,
And set the planets by the ears;
To show his skill, he Mars could join
To Venus in aspect malign;

Then

Then call in Mercury for aid,
And cure the wounds that Venus made.

Great scholars have in Lucian read,
When Philip king of Greece was dead,
His soul and spirit did divide,
And each part took a different side :
One rose a star ; the other fell
Beneath, and mended shoes in Hell.

Thus Partridge still shines in each art,
The cobbling and stargazing part,
And is install'd as good a star
As any of the Cæsars are.

Triumphant star ! some pity show
On cobblers militant below,
Whom roguish boys, in stormy nights,
Torment by pissing out their lights,
Or through a chink convey their smoke,
Inclos'd artificers to choke.

Thou, high exalted in thy sphere,
Mayst follow still thy calling there.
To thee the Bull will lend his hide,
By Phœbus newly tann'd and dry'd :
For thee they Argo's hulk will tax,
And scrape her pitchy sides for wax :
Then Ariadne kindly lends
Her braided hair to make thee ends ;
The points of Sagittarius' dart
Turns to an awl by heavenly art ;
And Vulcan, wheedled by his wife,
Will forge for thee a paring knife.
For want of room by Virgo's side,
She'll strain a point, and sit astride.
To take thee kindly in between ;
And then the signs will be thirteen.

THE EPITAPH.

HERE, five feet deep, lies on his back
 A cobbler, starmonger, and quack;
 Who, to the stars in pure good will,
 Does to his best look upward still.
 Weep, all you customers that use
 His pills, his almanacks, or shoes:
 And you that did your fortune seek,
 Step to his grave but once a week;
 This earth, which bears his body's print,
 You'll find has so much virtue in't,
 That I durst pawn my ears, 'twill tell,
 Whate'er concerns you full as well,
 In physick, stolen goods, or love,
 As he himself could, when above.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE MORNING.

1709.

NOW hardly here and there a hackney coach
 Appearing, show'd the ruddy morn's approach.
 Now Betty from her master's bed had flown,
 And softly stole to discompose her own ;
 The slipshod 'prentice from his master's door
 Had par'd the dirt, and sprinkled round the floor.
 Now Moll had whirl'd her mop with dextrous airs,
 Prepar'd to scrub the entry and the stairs.
 The youth with broomy stumps began to trace
 The kennel's edge, where wheels had worn the place.
 The smallcoal man was heard with cadence deep,
 Till drown'd in shriller notes of chimneysweep :
 Duns at his lordship's gate began to meet ;
 And brickdust Moll had scream'd through half the street.

A DESCRIPTION OF A CITY SHOWER.

In Imitation of Virgil's Georgicks. 1710.

CAREFUL observers may foretell the hour,
 (By sure prognosticks) when to dread a shower.
 While rain depends, the pensive cat gives o'er
 Her frolicks, and pursues her tail no more.
 Returning home at night, you'll find the sink
 Strike your offended sense with double stink.
 If you be wise, then go not far to dine;
 You'll spend in coach-hire more than save in wine.
 A coming shower your shooting corns presage,
 Old aches will throb, your hollow tooth will rage;
 Sauntering in coffeehouse is Dulman seen;
 He damns the climate, and complains of spleen.
 Meanwhile the south, rising with dabbled wings,
 A sable cloud athwart the welkin flings,
 That swill'd more liquor than it could contain,
 And, like a drunkard, gives it up again.
 Brisk Susan whips her linen from the rope,
 While the first drizzling shower is born aslope:
 Such is that sprinkling which some careless quean
 Flirts on you from her mop, but not so clean:
 You fly, invoke the gods; then, turning, stop
 To rail; she, singing, still whirls on her mop.

Not

Not yet the dust had shunn'd th' unequal strife,
But, aided by the wind, fought still for life,
And, wafted with its foe by violent gust,
"Twas doubtful which was rain, and which was dust.
Ah! where must needy poet seek for aid,
When dust and rain at once his coat invade?
Sole coat! where dust, cemented by the rain,
Erects the nap, and leaves a cloudy stain!

Now in contiguous drops the flood comes down,
Threatening with deluge this devoted town.
To shops in crowds the daggled females fly,
Pretend to cheapen goods, but nothing buy.
The templar spruce, while every spout's abroach,
Stays till 'tis fair, yet seems to call a coach.
The tuck'd-up semstress walks with hasty strides,
While streams run down her oil'd umbrella's sides.
Here various kinds, by various fortunes led,
Commence acquaintance underneath a shed.
Triumphant tories, and desponding whigs,
Forget their feuds, and join to save their wigs.
Box'd in a chair, the beau impatient sits,
While spouts run clattering o'er the roof by fits,
And ever and anon with frightful din
The leather sounds; he trembles from within.
So when Troy chairmen bore the wooden steed,
Pregnant with Greeks impatient to be freed,
(Those bully Greeks, who, as the moderns do,
Instead of paying chairmen, ran them through)
Laocoon struck the outside with his spear,
And each imprison'd hero quak'd for fear.

Now from all parts the swelling kennels flow,
And bear their trophies with them as they go:
Filths of all hues and odour, seem to tell
What street they sail'd from, by their sight and smell.

They,

They, as each torrent drives, with rapid force,
 From Smithfield to St 'Pulchre's shape their course,
 And in huge confluence join'd at Snowhill ridge,
 Fall from the conduit prone to Holbourn bridge.
 Sweepings from butchers' stalls, dung, guts, and blood,
 Drown'd puppies, stinking sprats, all drench'd in mud,
 Dead cats, and turnip-tops come tumbling down
 the flood.

ON THE LITTLE HOUSE BY THE CHURCHYARD
 OF CASTLENOCK. 1710.

WHOEVER pleases to inquire

Why yonder steeple wants a spire,

The gray old fellow, poet Joe *,

The philosophick cause will show.

Once on a time a western blast

At least twelve inches overcast,

Reckoning roof, weathercock, and all,

Which came with a prodigious fall;

And tumbling topsyturvy round

Lit with its bottom on the ground.

For, by the laws of gravitation,

It fell into its proper station.

This is the little strutting pile,

You see just by the churchyard stile;

The walls in tumbling gave a knock,

And thus the steeple got a shock;

* Mr. Beaumont of Trim.

From whence the neighbouring farmer calls
The steeple, Knock; the vicar, Walls*.

The vicar once a week creeps in,
Sits with his knees up to his chin;
Here cons his notes, and takes a whet,
Till the small ragged flock is met.

A traveller, who by did pass,
Observ'd the roof behind the grass:
On tiptoe stood, and rear'd his snout,
And saw the parson creeping out;
Was much surpris'd to see a crow
Venture to build his nest so low.

A schoolboy ran unto't and thought,
The crib was down, the blackbird caught.
A third, who lost his way by night,
Was forc'd for safety to alight,
And stepping o'er the fabrick roof,
His horse had like to spoil his hoof.

Warburton† took it in his noddle,
This building was design'd a model;
Or of a pigeon-house or oven,
To bake one loaf, and keep one dove in.

Then Mrs. Johnson‡ gave her verdict,
And every one was pleas'd that heard it:
All that you make this stir about
Is but a still which wants a spout.
The reverend Dr. Raymond§ guess'd
More probably than all the rest;
He said, but that it wanted room,
It might have been a pigmy's tomb.

* Archdeacon Wall, a correspondent of Swift's.

† Dr. Swift's curate at Laracor.

‡ Stella.

§ Minister of Trim.

The doctor's family came by,
 And little miss began to cry;
 Give me that house in my own hand!
 Then madam bade the chariot stand,
 Call'd to the clerk, in manner mild,
 Pray, reach that thing here to the child:
 That thing, I mean, among the kale;
 And here's to buy a pot of ale.

The clerk said to her, in a heat,
 What! sell my master's country seat,
 Where he comes every week from town!
 He would not sell it for a crown.
 Poh! fellow, keep not such a pother;
 In half an hour thou'lt make another.

Says Nancy *, I can make for miss
 A finer house ten times than this;
 The dean will give me willow sticks,
 And Joe my apron full of bricks.

THE VIRTUES
 SID HAMET THE MAGICIAN'S ROD.
 1710.

THE rod was but a harmless wand,
 While Moses held it in his hand;
 But, soon as e'er he laid it down,
 'Twas a devouring serpent grown.

Our great magician, Hamet Sid,
 Reverses what the prophet did:

* The waiting-woman.

His

His rod was honest English wood,
 That senseless in a corner stood,
 Till, metamorphos'd by his grasp,
 It grew an all-devouring asp;
 Would hiss, and sting, and roll, and twist,
 By the mere virtue of his fist;
 But, when he laid it down, as quick
 Resum'd the figure of a stick.

So, to her midnight feasts, the hag
 Rides on a broomstick for a nag,
 That, rais'd by magick of her breech,
 O'er sea and land conveys the witch;
 But with the morning dawn resumes
 The peaceful state of common brooms.

They tell us something strange and odd,
 About a certain magick rod *,
 That bending down its top, divines
 Whene'er the soil has golden mines;
 Where there are none, it stands erect,
 Scorning to show the least respect;
 As ready was the wand of Sid,
 To bend where golden mines were hid;
 In Scottish hills found precious ore †,
 Where none e'er look'd for it before;
 And by a gentle bow divin'd
 How well a cully's purse was lin'd;
 To a forlorn and broken rake,
 Stood without motion, like a stake.

The rod of Hermes was renown'd
 For charms above, and under ground;
 To sleep could mortal eyelids fix,
 And drive departed souls to Styx.

* The virgula divina, said to be attracted by minerals.

† Supposed to allude to the Union.

That rod was just a type of Sid's,
Which o'er a British senate's lids
Could scatter opium full as well,
And drive as many souls to Hell,

Sid's rod was slender, white, and tall,
Which oft he us'd to fish withal;
A place was fasten'd to the hook,
And many score of gudgeons took;
Yet still so happy was his fate,
He caught his fish, and sav'd his bait.

Sid's brethren of the conjuring tribe,
A circle with their rod describe,
Which proves a magical redoubt,
To keep mischievous spirits out.
Sid's rod was of a larger stride,
And made a circle thrice as wide,
Where spirits throng'd with hideous din,
And he stood there to take them in:
But, when th' enchanted rod was broke,
They vanish'd in a stinking smoke.

Achilles' sceptre was of wood,
Like Sid's, but nothing near so good;
That down from ancestors divine
Transmitted to the hero's line;
Thence, through a long descent of kings,
Came an HEIRLOOM, as Homer sings.
Though this description looks so big,
That sceptre was a sapless twig,
Which, from the fatal day, when first
It left the forest where 'twas nurs'd,
As Homer tells us o'er and o'er,
Nor leaf, nor fruit, nor blossom, bore.
Sid's sceptre, full of juice, did shoot
In golden boughs, and golden fruit;

And

And he, the dragon never sleeping,
 Guarded each fair Hesperian pippin.
 No hobby horse, with gorgeous top,
 The dearest in Charles Mather's * shop,
 Or glittering tinsel of May fair,
 Could with this rod of Sid compare.

Dear Sid, then, why wert thou so mad
 To break thy rod like naughty lad!
 You should have kiss'd it in your distress,
 And then return'd it to your mistress;
 Or made it a Newmarket † switch,
 And not a rod for thy own breech.
 But since old Sid has broken this,
 His next may be a rod in piss.

 Unloads upon a stall to rest,
 Or, when he can no longer stand,
 Desires a friend to lend a hand;

So Atlas, lest the ponderous spheres,
Should sink, and fall about his ears,
Got Hercules to bear the pile,
That he might sit and rest a while.

Yet Hercules was not so strong,
Nor could have born it half so long.

Great statesmen are in this condition;
And Atlas is a politician,
A premier minister of state;
Alcides one of second rate.
Suppose then Atlas ne'er so wise;
Yet, when the weight of kingdoms lies
Too long upon his single shoulders,
Sink down he must, or find upholders.

A TOWN ECLOGUE*. 1710.

SCENE, THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.

CORYDON.

NOW the keen rigour of the winter's o'er,
No hail descends, and frosts can pinch no more,
While other girls confess the genial spring,
And laugh aloud, or amorous ditties sing,
Secure from cold their lovely necks display,
And throw each useless chafing-dish away;
Why sits my Phillis discontented here,
Nor feels the turn of the revolving year?
Why on that brow dwell sorrow and dismay,
Where Loves were wont to sport, and Smiles to play?

* First printed in the Fifth Volume of the Tatler. See the Eighteenth Volume of this Collection.

PHILLIS.

PHILLIS! Ah, Corydon! survey the 'Change around,

Through all the 'Change no wretch like me is found:

Alas! the day, when I, poor heedless maid,

Was to your rooms in Lincoln's Inn betray'd;

Then how you swore, how many vows you made!

Ye listening Zephyrs, that o'erheard his love,

Waft the soft accents to the gods above.

Alas! the day; for (O, eternal shame!)

I sold you handkerchiefs, and lost my fame.

COR. When I forget the favour you bestow'd,

Red herrings shall be spawn'd in Tyburn Road;

Fleet street transform'd become a flowery green,

And mass be sung where operas are seen.

The wealthy cit, and the St. James's beau,

Shall change their quarters, and their joys forego;

Stockjobbing, this, to Jonathan's shall come,

At the Groom Porter's, that, play off his plum.

PHIL. But what to me does all that love avail,

If, while I doze at home o'er porter's ale,

Each night with wine and wenches you regale?

My livelong hours in anxious cares are past,

And raging hunger lays my beauty waste.

On templars spruce in vain I glances throw,

And with shrill voice invite them as they go.

Expos'd in vain my glossy ribands shine,

And unregarded wave upon the twine.

The week flies round; and when my profit's known,

I hardly clear enough to change a crown.

COR. Hard fate of virtue, thus to be distress,

Thou fairest of thy trade, and far the best!

As fruitmen's stalls the summer-market grace,

And ruddy peaches them; as first in place

Plumcake is seen o'er smaller pastry ware,
And ice on that ; so Phillis does appear
In playhouse and in park, above the rest
Of belles mechanick, elegantly drest.

PHIL. And yet Crepundia, that conceited fair,
Amid her toys, affects a saucy air,
And views me hourly with a scornful eye.

COR. She might as well with bright Cleora vie.

PHIL. With this large petticoat I strive in vain
To hide my folly past, and coming pain ;
'Tis now no secret ; she, and fifty more,
Observe the symptoms I had once before :
A second babe at Wapping must be plac'd,
When I scarce bear the charges of the last.

COR. What I could raise I sent ; a pound of plums,
Five shillings, and a coral for his gums ;
Tomorrow I intend him something more.

PHIL. I sent a frock and pair of shoes before.

COR. However, you shall home with me to night,
Forget your cares, and revel in delight.
I have in store a pint or two of wine,
Some cracknels, and the remnant of a chine.

And now on either side, and all around,
The weighty shopboards fall, and bars resound ;
Each ready semstress slips her pattins on,
And ties her hood, preparing to be gone.

THE

THE FABLE OF MIDAS. 1711.

MIDAS, we are in story told,
 Turn'd every thing he touch'd to gold :
 He chipp'd his bread ; the pieces round
 Glitter'd like spangles on the ground :
 A codling, ere it went his lip in,
 Would straight become a golden pippin :
 He call'd for drink ; you saw him sup
 Potable gold in golden cup :
 His empty paunch that he might fill,
 He suck'd his victuals through a quill :
 Untouch'd it pass'd between his grinders,
 Or't had been happy for gold-finders :
 He cock'd his hat, you would have said
 Mambrino's helm adorn'd his head :
 Whene'er he chanc'd his hands to lay
 On magazines of corn or hay,
 Gold ready coin'd appear'd, instead
 Of paltry provender and bread ;
 Hence by wise farmers we are told,
 Old hay is equal to old gold ;
 And hence a critick deep maintains,
 We learn'd to weigh our gold by grains.

This fool had got a lucky hit ;
 And people fancy'd he had wit.
 Two gods their skill in musick try'd,
 And both chose Midas to decide ;
 He against Phœbus' harp decreed,
 And gave it for Pan's oaten reed :
 The god of wit, to show his grudge,
 Clapt asses' ears upon the judge ;

A goodly pair, erect and wide,
Which he could neither gild nor hide.
And now the virtue of his hands
Was lost among Pactolus' sands,
Against whose torrent while he swims,
The golden scurf peels off his limbs:
Fame spreads the news, and people travel
From far to gather golden gravel;
Midas, expos'd to all their jeers,
Had lost his art, and kept his ears.

This tale inclines the gentle reader
To think upon a certain leader;
To whom from Midas down, descends
That virtue in the finger's ends.
What else by perquisites are meant,
By pensions, bribes, and three per cent?
By places and commissions sold,
And turning dung itself to gold?
By starving in the midst of store,
As t'other Midas did before?

None e'er did modern Midas choose,
Subject or patron of his Muse,
But found him thus their merit scan,
That Phœbus must give place to Pan:
He values not the poet's praise,
Nor will exchange his plums for bays.
To Pan alone rich misers call;
And there 's the jest, for Pan is ALL.
Here English wits will be to seek,
Howe'er, 'tis all one in the Greek.

Besides, it plainly now appears
Our Midas too has asses' ears;
Where every fool his mouth applies,
And whispers in a thousand lies;

Such

Such gross delusions could not pass
Through any ears but of an ass.

But gold defiles with frequent touch;
There's nothing fouls the hand so much:
And scholars give it for the cause
Of British Midas' dirty paws;
Which, while the senate strove to scour,
They wash'd away the chemick power.

While he his utmost strength apply'd,
To swim against this popular tide,
The golden spoils flew off apace,
Here fell a pension, there a place:
The torrent merciless imbibes
Commissions, perquisites, and bribes;
By their own weight sunk to the bottom;
Much good may do them that have caught 'em!
And Midas now neglected stands,
With asses' ears, and dirty hands.

AN EXCELLENT NEW SONG. 1711.

BEING THE INTENDED SPEECH OF A FAMOUS ORATOR AGAINST PEACE*.

AN Orator dismal of Nottinghamshire,
Who has forty years let out his conscience to hire,
Out of zeal for his country, and want of a place,
Is come up, vi et armis, to break the queen's peace,

* The lord treasurer having hinted a wish one evening that a ballad might be made on the earl of Nottingham, this song was written and printed the next morning.

He has vamp'd an old speech, and the court to their sorrow,
 Shall hear him harangue against Prior to morrow.
 When once he begins, he never will flinch,
 But repeats the same note a whole day, like a Finch.
 I have heard all the speech repeated by Hoppy,
 And, "Mistakes to prevent, I've obtained a copy."

THE SPEECH.

WHEREAS, notwithstanding, I am in great pain,
 To hear we are making a peace without Spain;
 But, most noble senators, 'tis a great shame,
 There should be a peace, while I'm Not-in-game.
 The duke show'd me all his fine house; and the duchess

From her closet brought out a full purse in her clutches:

I talk'd of a peace, and they both gave a start,
 His grace swore by G—d, and her grace let a f—t:
 My long oldfashion'd pocket was presently cramm'd;
 And sooner than vote for a peace I'll be damn'd.

But some will cry Turncoat, and rip up old stories,
 How I always pretended to be for the tories:

I answer; the tories were in my good graces,
 Till all my relations were put into places.

But still I'm in principle ever the same,
 And will quit my best friends, while I'm Not-in-game.

When I and some others subscribed our names
 To a plot for expelling my master king James;
 I withdrew my subscription by help of a blot,
 And so might discover or gain by the plot:

I had

I had my advantage and stood at defiance,
 For Daniel was got from the den of the lions :
 I came in without danger, and was I to blame ?
 For, rather than hang, I would be Not-in-game.

I swore to the queen, that the prince of Hanover
 During her sacred life would never come over :
 I made use of a trope; that " an heir to invite,
 " Was like keeping her monument always in sight."
 But, when I thought proper, I alter'd my note;
 And in her own hearing I boldly did vote,
 That her majesty stood in great need of a tutor,
 And must have an old or a young coadjutor :
 For why ; I would fain have put all in a flame,
 Because, for some reasons, I was Not-in-game.

Now my new benefactors have brought me about,
 And I'll vote against peace, with Spain or without :
 Though the court gives my nephews, and brothers,
 and cousins,
 And all my whole family places by dozens ;
 Yet, since I know where a full purse may be found,
 And hardly pay eighteen pence tax in the pound :
 Since the tories have thus disappointed my hopes,
 And will neither regard my figures nor tropes ;
 I'll speech against peace while Dismal's my name,
 And be a true whig, while I'm Not-in-game.

THE WINDSOR PROPHECY*.

WHEN a holy black Swede, the son of Bob †,
 With a saint ‡ at his chin, and a seal § at his fob,
 Shall not see one ¶ New-year's day in that year,
 Then let old Englund make good cheer!

* First printed in December, 1711; with the following introduction: "About three months ago, at Windsor, a poor knight's widow was buried in the cloisters. In digging the grave, the sexton struck against a small leaden coffer, about half a foot in length, and four inches wide. The poor man, expecting he had discovered a treasure, opened it with some difficulty; but found only a small parchment, rolled up very fast, put into a leather case; which case was tied at the top, and sealed with a St. George, the impression on black wax, very rude and gothick. The parchment was carried to a gentleman of learning, who found in it the following lines, written in a black old English letter, and in the orthography of the age, which seems to be about two hundred years ago. I made a shift to obtain a copy of it; but the transcriber, I find, hath in many parts altered the spelling to the modern way. The original, as I am informed, is now in the hands of the ingenious Dr. W—, F. R. S. where, I suppose, the curious will not be refused the satisfaction of seeing it.

"The lines seem to be a sort of prophecy, and written in verse, as old prophecies usually are, but in a very hobbling kind of measure. Their meaning is very dark, if it be any at all; of which the learned reader can judge better than I: however it be, several persons were of opinion, that they deserved to be published, both as they discover somewhat of the genius of a former age, and may be an amusement to the present." See the Journal to Stella, Dec. 24, 1711.

‡ He was dean of Windsor, and lord privy seal.

§ The New Style (which was not used in Great Britain and Ireland till 1752) was then observed in most parts of Europe. The bishop set out from England the latter end of December O. S.; and, on his arrival at Utrecht, by the variation of the style, he found January somewhat advanced.

Windsor

Windsor * and Bristow * then shall be Joined together in the Low-countree *.
 Then shall the tall black Daventry Bird †
 Speak against peace right many a word;
 And some shall admire his conying wit,
 For many good groats his tongue shall slit.
 But, spight of the Harpy ‡ that crawls on all four,
 There shall be peace, pardie, and war no more,
 But Englund must cry alack and well-a-day,
 If the stick be taken from the dead sea.
 And, dear Englund, if ought I understond,
 Beware of Carrots § from Northumberland.
 Carrots sown Thynne || a deep root may get,
 If so be they are in Somer set:
 Their  Conyngs mark thou; for I have been told,
 They assassine when young, and poison when old.
 Root out these Carrots, O thou ††, whose name
 Is backwards and forwards always the same;
 And keep close to thee always that name,
 Which backwards and forwards ‡‡ is almost the same.
 And, Englund, wouldst thou be happy still,
 Bury those Carrots under a Hill §§.

EPIGRAM. 1712.

AS Thomas was cudgell'd one day by his wife,
He took to the street, and fled for his life:
Tom's three dearest friends came by in the squabble,
And sav'd him at once from the shrew and the rabble;
Then ventur'd to give him some sober advice—
But Tom is a person of honour so nice,
Too wise to take counsel, too proud to take warning,
That he sent to all three a challenge next morning:
Three duels he fought, thrice ventur'd his life;
Went home, and was cudgell'd again by his wife.

CORINNA. 1712.

THIS day (the year I dare not tell)
Apollo play'd the midwife's part;
Into the world Corinna fell,
And he endow'd her with his art.

But Cupid with a Satyr comes;
Both softly to the cradle creep;
Both stroke her hands, and rub her gums,
While the poor child lay fast asleep.

Then Cupid thus: This little maid
Of Love shall always speak and write.

And I pronounce (the Satyr said)
The world shall feel her scratch, and bite.

Her talent she display'd betimes;
For in twice twelve revolving moons,
She seem'd to laugh and squall in rhymes,
And all her gestures were lampoons.

At six years old the subtle jade
 Stole to the pantry door, and found
 The butler with my lady's maid :
 And you may swear the tale went round.
 She made a song, how little miss
 Was kiss'd and slobber'd by a lad :
 And how when master went to p—,
 Miss came, and peep'd at all he had.
 At twelve a wit and a coquette ;
 Marries for love, half whore, half wife ;
 Cuckolds, elopes, and runs in debt ;
 Turns authoress, and is Curll's for life.
 Her common-place book all gallant is,
 Of scandal now a cornucopia ;
 She pours it out in Atalantis *,
 Or memoirs of the New Utopia.

TOLAND'S INVITATION TO DISMAL,

TO DINE WITH THE CALF'S-HEAD CLUB †.

Imitated from HORACE, Lib. I. Epist. 5.

IF, dearest Dismal, you for once can dine
 Upon a single dish, and tavern wine,
Toland

SI potes Archaicis conviva recumbere lectis,
 Nec modicâ cœnare times clus omne patellâ,

* Written by Mrs. Manley.

† This poem, and that which follows it, are two of the penny papers mentioned in Swift's Journal to Stella, Aug. 7, 1712. They are printed from folio copies in the Lambeth Library.

Supremo

Toland to you this invitation sends,
 To eat the calf's-head with your trusty friends.
 Suspend a while your vain ambitious hopes,
 Leave hunting after bribes, forget your tropes.
 Tomorrow we our mystick feast prepare,
 Where thou, our latest proselyte, shalt share:
 When we, by proper signs and symbols, tell,
 How, by brave hands, the royal traitor fell;
 The meat shall represent the tyrant's head,
 The wine his blood our predecessors shed;
 While an alluding hymn some artist sings,
 We toast, "Confusion to the race of kings!"
 At monarchy we nobly show our spite,
 And talk, what fools call treason, all the night.

Who, by disgraces or ill fortune sunk,
 Feels not his soul enliven'd when he's drunk?
 Wine can clear up Godolphin's cloudy face,
 And fill Jack Smith with hopes to keep his place:
 By force of wine, ev'n Scarborough is brave,
 Hal grows more pert, and Somers not so grave:
 Wine can give Portland wit, and Cleaveland sense,
 Montague learning, Bolton eloquence:
 Cholmondeley, when drunk, can never lose his wand;
 And Lincoln then imagines he has land.

My

Quid non ebrietas designat? operta recludit;

Spes jubet esse ratas; in prælia trudit inermem;

Solicitis animis onus eximit; addocet artes.

Fœcundi

My province is, to see that all be right,
 Glasses and linen clean, and pewter bright;
 From our mysterious club to keep out spies,
 And tories (dress'd like waiters) in disguise.
 You shall be coupled as you best approve,
 Seated at table next the men you love.
 Sunderland, Orford, Boyle, and Richmond's grace,
 Will come; and Hampden shall have Walpole's place.
 Wharton, unless prevented by a whore,
 Will hardly fail; and there is room for more.
 But I love elbowroom whene'er I drink;
 And honest Harry * is too apt to stink.

Let no pretence of business make you stay;
 Yet take one word of counsel by the way.
 If Guernsey calls, send word you're gone abroad;
 He'll tease you with king Charles, and bishop Laud,
 Or make you fast, and carry you to prayers:
 But, if he will break in, and walk up stairs,
 Steal by the backdoor out, and leave him there;
 Then order Squash to call a hackney chair.

PEACE AND DUNKIRK.

BEING AN EXCELLENT NEW SONG UPON THE SURRENDER OF DUNKIRK TO GENERAL HILL. 1712.

To the Tune of, "The King shall enjoy his own again."

I.

SPITE of Dutch friends and English foes,

Poor Britain shall have peace at last:

Holland got towns, and we got blows;

But Dunkirk's ours, we'll hold it fast.

We have got it in a string,

And the whigs may all go swing,

For among good friends I love to be plain;

All their false deluded hopes

Will, or ought to end in ropes;

"But the Queen shall enjoy her own again."

II.

Sunderland's run out of his wits,

And Dismal double Dismal looks;

Wharton can only swear by fits,

And strutting Hal is off the hooks;

Old Godolphin full of spleen,

Made false moves, and lost his queen;

Harry look'd fierce, and shook his ragged mane:

But a prince of high renown

Swore he'd rather lose a crown,

"Than the Queen should enjoy her own again."

III. Our

III.

Our merchant ships may cut the Line,
 And not be snapt by privateers,
 And commoners who love good wine
 Will drink it now as well as peers :
 Landed men shall have their rent,
 Yet our stocks rise cent per cent.
 The Dutch from hence shall no more millions drain :
 We'll bring on us no more debts,
 Nor with bankrupts fill gazettes ;
 “ And the queen shall enjoy her own again.”

IV.

The towns we took ne'er did us good :
 What signified the French to beat ?
 We spent our money and our blood,
 To make the Dutchmen proud and great :
 But the lord of Oxford swears,
 Dunkirk never shall be theirs.
 The Dutch-hearted whigs may rail and complain ;
 But true Englishmen may fill
 A good health to general Hill ;
 “ For the queen now enjoys her own again.”

 HORACE, BOOK I. EP. VII.

Addressed to the Earl of OXFORD, 1713.

HARLEY, the nation's great support,
 Returning home one day from court,
 (His mind with publick cares possest,
 All Europe's business in his breast)

Observ'd a parson near Whitehall 5
 Cheapening old authors on a stall.
 The priest was pretty well in case,
 And show'd some humour in his face;
 Look'd with an easy, careless mien,
 A perfect stranger to the spleen; 10
 Of size that might a pulpit fill,
 But more inclining to sit still.
 My lord (who, if a man may say 't, Loves mischief better than his meat)
 Was now dispos'd to crack a jest, 15
 And bid friend Lewis * go in quest
 (This Lewis is a cunning shaver,
 And very much in Harley's favour)
 In quest who might this parson be,
 What was his name, of what degree; 20
 If possible, to learn his story,
 And whether he were whig or tory.
 Lewis his patron's humour knows,
 Away upon his errand goes,
 And quickly did the matter sift; 25
 Found out that it was doctor Swift;
 A clergyman of special note
 For shunning those of his own coat;
 Which made his brethren of the gown
 Take care betimes to run him down; 30
 No libertine, nor over nice,
 Addicted to no sort of vice,
 Went where he pleas'd, said what he thought;
 Not rich, but ow'd no man a groat:
 In state opinions à la mode, 35
 He hated Wharton like a toad,

* Erasmus Lewis, esq. the treasurer's secretary.

Had given the faction many a wound,
 And libell'd all the junto round :
 Kept company with men of wit,
 Who often father'd what he writ : 40
 His works were hawk'd in every street,
 But seldom rose above a sheet :
 Of late indeed the paper stamp
 Did very much his genius cramp ;
 And since he could not spend his fire, 45
 He now intended to retire.

Said Harley, “ I desire to know
 “ From his own mouth if this be so ;
 “ Step to the doctor straight, and say,
 “ I ’d have him dine with me to day.” 50
 Swift seem'd to wonder what he meant,
 Nor would believe my lord had sent ;
 So never offer'd once to stir ;
 But coldly said, “ Your servant, sir !”
 “ Does he refuse me ?” Harley cried ; 55
 “ He does, with insolence and pride.”

Some few days after, Harley spies
 The doctor fasten'd by the eyes
 At Charing-cross among the rout,
 Where painted monsters are hung out : 60
 He pull'd the string, and stopt his coach,
 Beckoning the doctor to approach.

Swift, who could neither fly nor hide,
 Came sneaking to the chariot side,
 And offer'd many a lame excuse : 65
 He never meant the least abuse —
 “ My lord — the honour you design'd —
 “ Extremely proud — but I had din'd —
 “ I'm sure I never should neglect —
 “ No man alive has more respect —” 70

“ Well,

“ Well, I shall think of that no more,
 “ If you ’ll be sure to come at four.”

The doctor now obeys the summons,
 Likes both his company and commons;
 Displays his talents, sits till ten; 75

Next day invited comes again;
 Soon grows domestick, seldom fails
 Either at morning or at meals:
 Came early, and departed late;
 In short, the gudgeon took the bait. 80

My lord would carry on the jest,
 And down to Windsor takes his guest.
 Swift much admires the place and air,
 And longs to be a canon there;
 In summer round the park to ride, 85
 In winter — never to reside.

A canon! that ’s a place too mean:
 No, doctor, you shall be a dean;
 Two dozen canons round your stall,
 And you the tyrant o’er them all: 90
 You need but cross the Irish seas,
 To live in plenty, power, and ease.
 Poor Swift departs; and what is worse,
 With borrow’d money in his purse,
 Travels at least a hundred leagues, 95
 And suffers numberless fatigues.

Suppose him now a dean complete,
 Demurely lolling in his seat;
 The silver verge, with decent pride,
 Stuck underneath his cushion side; 100
 Suppose him gone through all vexations,
 Patents, instalments, abjurations,
 First-fruits and tenths, and chapter-treats;
 Dues, payments, fees, demands, and cheats —

The

The wicked laity's contriving
To hinder clergymen from thriving. 105

Now all the doctor's money spent,
His tenants wrong him in his rent;
The farmers, spitefully combin'd,
Force him to take his tithes in kind: 110

And Parvisol * discounts arrears
By bills for taxes and repairs.

Poor Swift, with all his losses vex'd,
Not knowing where to turn him next,

Above a thousand pounds in debt, 115

Takes horse, and in a mighty fret

Rides day and night at such a rate,

He soon arrives at Harley's gate;

But was so dirty, pale, and thin,

Old Read † would hardly let him in. 120

Said Harley, "Welcome, reverend dean!

"What makes your worship look so lean?

"Why, sure you won't appear in town

"In that old wig and rusty gown?

"I doubt your heart is set on pelf 125

"So much, that you neglect yourself.

"What! I suppose, now stocks are high,

"You've some good purchase in your eye?

"Or is your money out at use?"—

"Truce, good my lord, I beg a truce," 130

(The doctor in a passion cried)

"Your raillery is misapplied;

"Experience I have dearly bought;

"You know I am not worth a groat:

* The dean's agent, a Frenchman.

† The lord treasurer's porter.

“ But you resolv’d to have your jest, 135
 “ And ’twas a folly to contest;
 “ Then, since you now have done your worst,
 “ Pray leave me where you found me first.”

IMITATION OF PART OF THE SIXTH
 SATIRE OF THE SECOND BOOK OF
 HORACE. 1714.

I’VE often wish’d that I had clear,
 For life, six hundred pounds a year,
 A handsome house to lodge a friend,
 A river at my garden’s end,
 A terrace walk, and half a rood 5
 Of land; set out to plant a wood.

Well, now I have all this and more,
 I ask not to increase my store;
 [“ * But here a grievance seems to lie,
 “ All this is mine but till I die; 10
 “ I can’t but think ’twould sound more clever,
 “ To me and to my heirs for ever.
 “ If I ne’er got or lost a groat,
 “ By any trick, or any fault;
 “ And if I pray by reason’s rules, 15
 “ And not like forty other fools:
 “ As

 “ Or, if it be thy will and pleasure,
 “ Direct my plow to find a treasure !” 20
 “ But only what my station fits,

 In short, I ’m perfectly content,
 Let me but live on this side Trent * ; 30
 Nor cross the channel twice a year,
 To spend six months with statesmen here.
 I must by all means come to town,
 ’Tis for the service of the crown.

* He was perpetually expressing his deep discontent at his Irish preferment, and forming schemes for exchanging it for a smaller in England ; and courted queen Caroline and sir Robert Walpole to effect such a change. A negotiation had nearly taken place between the dean and a Mr. Talbot for the living of Burfield, in Berkshire. Mr. Talbot himself informed me of this negotiation. Burfield is in the neighbourhood of Bucklebury, lord Bolingbroke’s seat. Dr. WARTON.

It is but so much more in debt,
And that they ne'er consider'd yet.

And find his honour in a pound,

Hemm'd by a triple circle round,

Chequer'd with ribbons blue and green :

How should I thrust myself between ? 50

Some wag observes me thus perplex'd,

And, smiling, whispers to the next,

What I desire the world should know.

† The rise and progress of Swift's intimacy with lord Oxford is minutely detailed in his very interesting Journal to Stella. And the reasons why a man, that served a ministry so effectually, was so tardily, and so difficultly, and so poorly rewarded, are well explained in Sheridan's Life of Swift, and arose principally from the insuperable aversion the queen had conceived to the author of a Tale of a Tub as a profane book; which aversion was kept alive, and increased by the duchess of Somerset, against whom Swift had written a severe lampoon. It appears from this life, that lords Oxford and Bolingbroke always kept concealed from

 And question me of this and that;

 Or gravely try to read the lines
 Writ underneath the country signs *;
 Or, "Have you nothing new to day

 My lord and me as far as Staines,
 As once a week we travel down
 To Windsor, and again to town,
 Where all that passes inter nos
 Might be proclaim'd at Charing-cross. 100
 Yet some I know with envy swell,
 Because they see me us'd so well:

Swift their inability to serve him. One of the most common artifices of ministers and great men is to retain in their service those whom they cannot reward, and "Spe pascere inani;"—for year after year. With whatever secrets Swift might have been trusted, it does not appear he knew any thing of a design to bring in the pretender. Swift was a true whig. His political principles are amply unfolded in an excellent letter written to Pope, Jan. 20, 1721: and indeed they had been sufficiently displayed, many years before, in The Sentiments of a Church of England Man; a treatise replete with strong sense, sound principles, and clear reasoning. Dr. WARTON.

* Another of their amusements in these excursions consisted in lord Oxford and Swift's counting the poultry on the road, and which ever reckoned thirty-one first, or saw a cat, or an old woman, won the game. Bolingbroke overtaking them one day

“ I wonder what some people mean !

“ My lord and he are grown so great, 105

“ Always together, tête-à-tête ;

“ What ! they admire him for his jokes ?—

“ See but the fortune of some folks !”

There flies about a strange report

Of some express arriv'd at court : 110

I'm stopp'd by all the fools I meet,

And catechis'd in every street.

“ You, Mr. dean, frequent the great :

“ Inform us, will the emperor treat ?

“ Or do the prints and papers lie ?” 115

Faith, sir, you know as much as I.

“ Ah, doctor, how you love to jest !

“ 'Tis now no secret” — I protest

'Tis one to me — “ Then tell us, pray,

“ When are the troops to have their pay ?” 120

And, though I solemnly declare

I know no more than my lord mayor,

They stand amaz'd, and think me grown

The closest mortal ever known.

Thus in a sea of folly tost, 125
 My choicest hours of life are lost;
 Yet always wishing to retreat,
 O, could I see my country seat!
 There leaning near a gentle brook,
 Sleep, or peruse some ancient book; 130
 And there in sweet oblivion drown
 Those cares that haunt the court and town*.

† Dr. John Sharpe, who, for some unbecoming reflections in his sermons had been suspended May 14, 1686, was raised from the deanery of Canterbury to the archbishoprick of York, July 5, 1691; and died Feb. 2, 1712-13. According to Dr. Swift's account, the archbishop had represented him to the queen as a person that was not a Christian; a great lady had supported the aspersion; and the queen upon such assurances had given away a bishoprick contrary to her majesty's first intentions [which were in favour of Swift.] ORRERY.

By

By dull divines, who look with envious eyes
On every genius that attempts to rise;
And pausing o'er a pipe, with doubtful nod,
Give hints, that poets ne'er believe in God
So clowns on scholars as on wizards look,
And take a folio for a conjuring book.

Swift had the sin of wit, no venial crime;
Nay, 'tis affirm'd, he sometimes dealt in rhyme:
Humour and mirth had place in all he writ;
He reconcil'd divinity and wit:
He mov'd and bow'd, and talk'd with too much grace;
Nor show'd the parson in his gait or face;
Despis'd luxurious wines and costly meat;
Yet still was at the tables of the great;
Frequented lords; saw those that saw the queen;
At Child's or Truby's never once had been;
Where town and country vicars flock in tribes,
Secur'd by numbers from the laymen's gibes;
And deal in vices of the graver sort,
Tobacco, censure, coffee, pride, and port.

But, after sage monitions from his friends,
His talents to employ for nobler ends;
To better judgments willing to submit,
He turns to politicks his dangerous wit.

And now, the publick interest to support,
By Harley Swift invited comes to court;
In favour grows with ministers of state;
Admitted private, when superiours wait:
And Harley, not asham'd his choice to own,
Takes him to Windsor in his coach alone.
At Windsor Swift no sooner can appear,
But St. John comes and whispers in his ear:
The waiters stand in ranks; the yeomen cry,
Make room, as if a duke were passing by.

Now

Now Finch * alarms the lords: he hears for certain
 This dangerous priest is got behind the curtain.
 Finch, fam'd for tedious elocution, proves
 That Swift oils many a spring which Harley moves.
 Walpole and Aislachie †, to clear the doubt,
 Inform the commons, that the secret's out:

“ A certain doctor is observ'd of late
 “ To haunt a certain minister of state:
 “ From whence with half an eye we may discover
 “ The peace is made, and Perkin must come over.”

York is from Lambeth sent, to show the queen
 A dangerous treatise ‡ writ against the spleen;
 Which, by the style, the matter, and the drift,
 'Tis thought could be the work of none but Swift.
 Poor York! the harmless tool of others hate;
 He sues for pardon §, and repents too late.

 On Swift's reproaches for her  spouse:
 From her red locks her mouth with venom fills,
 And thence into the royal ear instills.
 The queen incens'd, his services forgot,
 Leaves him a victim to the vengeful Scot **.
 Now through the realm a proclamation spread,
 To fix a price on his devoted head ††,
 While innocent, he scorns ignoble flight;
 His watchful friends preserve him by a sleight.

By Harley's favour once again he shines;
 Is now caress'd by candidate divines,

 And in Swift's ear thrusts half his powder'd nose.
 The Scottish nation, whom he durst offend,

By faction tir'd, with grief he waits a while,
 His great contending friends to reconcile,

THE FAGGOT.

Written when the Ministry were at Variance. 1713.

OBERVE the dying father speak:
 Try, lads, can you this bundle break?
 Then bids the youngest of the six
 Take up a well-bound heap of sticks.
 They thought it was an old man's maggot;
 And strove by turns to break the faggot:
 In vain; the complicated wands
 Were much too strong for all their hands.
 See, said the sire, how soon 'tis done:
 Then took and broke them one by one.
 So strong you'll be, in friendship tied;
 So quickly broke, if you divide.
 Keep close then, boys, and never quarrel:
 Here ends the fable, and the moral.

* Then lord treasurer of the household, who cautiously avoided Swift while the proclamation was impending.

† He was visited by the Scotch lords more than ever.

This

This Tale may be apply'd in few words
 To treasurers, comptrollers, stewards;
 And others, who in solemn sort,
 Appear with slender wands at court;
 Not firmly join'd to keep their ground,
 But lashing one another round:
 While wise men think they ought to fight
 With quarterstuffs instead of white;
 Or constable with staff of peace,
 Should come and make the clattering cease;
 Which now disturbs the queen and court,
 And gives the whigs and rabble sport.

In history we never found
 The consul's fasces were unbound:
 Those Romans were too wise to think on't,
 Except to lash some grand delinquent.
 How would they blush to hear it said,
 The prætor broke the consul's head!
 Or consul, in his purple gown,
 Came up, and knock'd the prætor down!

Come, courtiers: every man his stick!
 Lord treasurer, for once be quick:
 And that they may the closer cling,
 Take your blue ribbon for a string.
 Come, trimming Harcourt*, bring your mace;
 And squeeze it in, or quit your place:
 Dispatch, or else that rascal Northey†
 Will undertake to do it for thee:
 And be assur'd, the court will find him
 Prepar'd to leap o'er sticks, or bind them.

To make the bundle strong and safe,
 Great Ormond, lend thy general's staff:

* Lord chancellor.

† Sir Edward Northey, attorney general.

And,

And, if the crosier could be cramm'd in,
 A fig for Lechmere, King, and Hambden!
 You'll then defy the strongest whig
 With both his hands to bend a twig;
 Though with united strength they all pull,
 From Somers, down to Craggs and Walpole.

 I curse her every hour sincerely,
 Yet, hang me but I love her dearly.

I MARCH'D three miles through scorching sand,
 With zeal in heart, and notes in hand:
 I rode four more to Great St. Mary,
 Using four legs, when two were weary:
 To three fair virgins I did tie men,
 In the close bands of pleasing Hymen:
 I dipp'd two babes in holy water,
 And purify'd their mother after.

* A French gentleman dining with some company on a fast-day, called for some bacon and eggs. The rest were very angry, and reprov'd him for so heinous a sin: whereupon he wrote the following lines extempore; which are translated above:

Peut on croire avec bon sens
 Qu'un lardon le mit en colère,
 Ou, que manger un hareng,
 C'est un secret pour lui plaire?
 En sa gloire envelopé,
 Songe-t-il bien de nos soupés?

Within an hour and eke a half,
 I preach'd three congregations deaf;
 Where thundering out, with lungs longwinded,
 I chopp'd so fast, that few there minded.

 Saw all these mighty labours done
 Before one race of his was run.
 All this perform'd by Robert Hewit:
 What mortal else could e'er go through it!

CADENUS AND VANESSA*.

Written at Windsor, 1713.

THE shepherds and the nymphs were seen
 Pleading before the Cyprian queen.
 The counsel for the fair began,
 Accusing the false creature Man.
 The brief with weighty crimes was charg'd, 5
 On which the pleader much enlarg'd;
 That Cupid now has lost his art,
 Or blunts the point of every dart; —
 His altar now no longer smokes,
 His mother's aid no youth invokes: 10
 This tempts freethinkers to refine,
 And bring in doubt their powers divine;
 Now love is dwindled to intrigue,
 And marriage grown a money league;

* This is thought to be one of Dr. Swift's correctest pieces. Its chief merit, indeed, is the elegant ease with which a story, but ill conceived in itself, is told. GOLDSMITH.

Which crimes aforesaid (with her leave) 15
 Were (as he humbly did conceive)
 Against our sovereign lady's peace,
 Against the statute in that case,
 Against her dignity and crown:
 Then pray'd an answer, and sat down: 20
 The nymphs with scorn beheld their foes:
 When the defendant's counsel rose,
 And, what no lawyer ever lack'd,
 With impudence own'd all the fact;
 But, what the gentlest heart would vex, 25
 Laid all the fault on t'other sex.
 That modern love is no such thing
 As what those ancient poets sing;
 A fire celestial, chaste, refin'd,
 Conceived and kindled in the mind; 30
 Which, having found an equal flame,
 Unites, and both become the same,
 In different breasts together burn,
 Together both to ashes turn.
 But women now feel no such fire, 35
 And only know the gross desire.
 Their passions move in lower spheres,
 Where'er caprice or folly steers.
 A dog, a parrot, or an ape,
 Or some worse brute in human shape, 40

 The few soft moments they can spare,
 From visits to receive and pay;
 From scandal, politicks, and play;
 From fans, and flounces, and brocades, 45

If a small breeze obstruct the course,
It whirls about, for want of force,
And in its narrow circle gathers 55
Nothing but chaff, and straws, and feathers.
The current of a female mind
Stops thus, and turns with every wind ;
Thus whirling round together draws
Fools, fops, and rakes, for chaff and straws. 60
Hence we conclude, no women's hearts
Are won by virtue, wit, and parts :
Nor are the men of sense to blame,
For breasts incapable of flame ;
The fault must on the nymphs be plac'd, 65
Grown so corrupted in their taste.
The pleader, having spoke his best,
Had witness ready to attest,
Who fairly could on oath depose,
When questions on the fact arose, 70
That every article was true ;
Nor farther those deponents knew : —
Therefore he humbly would insist,
The bill might be with costs dismiss'd.
The cause appear'd of so much weight, 75
That Venus, from her judgment seat,
Desir'd them not to talk so loud,
Else she must interpose a cloud :
For, if the heavenly folk should know
These pleadings in the courts below, 80
That mortals here disdain to love,
She ne'er could show her face above ;

For gods, their betters, are too wise
 To value that which men despise.
 And then, said she, my son and I 85
 Must stroll in air, 'twixt land and sky;
 Or else, shut out from Heaven and earth,
 Fly to the sea, my place of birth;
 There live, with daggled mermaids pent,
 And keep on fish perpetual Lent. 90

But, since the case appear'd so nice,
 She thought it best to take advice.
 The Muses, by the king's permission,
 Though foes to love, attend the session,
 And on the right hand took their places 95
 In order; on the left, the Graces:
 To whom she might her doubts propose
 On all emergencies that rose.
 The Muses oft were seen to frown;
 The Graces half asham'd look down; 100
 And 'twas observ'd, there were but few
 Of either sex among the crew,
 Whom she or her assessors knew,
 The goddess soon began to see,
 Things were not ripe for a decree; 105
 And said, she must consult her books,
 The lovers' Fletas, Bractons, Cokes.
 First to a dapper clerk she beckon'd
 To turn to Ovid, book the second;
 She then referr'd them to a place 110
 In Virgil, vide Dido's case:
 As for Tibullus's reports,
 They never pass'd for law in courts:
 For Cowley's briefs, and pleas of Waller,
 Still their authority was smaller. 115

There

There was on both sides much to say:
 She'd hear the cause another day.
 And so she did; and then a third
 She heard it — there she kept her word:
 But, with rejoinders or replies, 120
 Long bills, and answers stuff'd with lies,
 Demur, imparlance, and essoign,
 The parties ne'er could issue join:
 For sixteen years the cause was spun,
 And then stood where it first begun. 125

Now, gentle Clio, sing or say,
 What Venus meant by this delay.
 The goddess much perplex'd in mind
 To see her empire thus declin'd;
 When first this grand debate arose, 130
 Above her wisdom to compose,
 Conceiv'd a project in her head
 To work her ends; which, if it sped,
 Would show the merits of the cause
 Far better than consulting laws. 135

In a glad hour Lucina's aid
 Produc'd on earth a wondrous maid,
 On whom the Queen of Love was bent
 To try a new experiment.
 She threw her law books on the shelf, 140
 And thus debated with herself.

Since men allege, they ne'er can find
 Those beauties in a female mind,
 Which raise a flame that will endure
 For ever uncorrupt and pure; 145
 If 'tis with reason they complain,
 This infant shall restore my reign.
 I'll search where every virtue dwells,
 From courts inclusive down to cells:

What preachers talk, or sages write; 150
 These I will gather and unite,
 And represent them to mankind
 Collected in that infant's mind.

This said, she plucks in Heaven's high bowers
 A sprig of amaranthine flowers. 155

In nectar thrice infuses bays,
 Three times refin'd in Titan's rays;
 Then calls the Graces to her aid,
 And sprinkles thrice the newborn maid:
 From whence the tender skin assumes 160

A sweetness above all perfumes;
 From whence a cleanliness remains,
 Incapable of outward stains:
 From whence that decency of mind,
 So lovely in the female kind, 165

Where not one careless thought intrudes,
 Less modest than the speech of prudes;
 Where never blush was call'd in aid,
 That spurious virtue in a maid,
 A virtue but at second hand; 170
 They blush, because they understand.

The Graces next would act their part,
 And show'd but little of their art;
 Their work was half already done,
 The child with native beauty shone; 175
 The outward form no help requir'd:
 Each, breathing on her thrice, inspir'd
 That gentle, soft, engaging air,
 Which in old times adorn'd the fair:

And said, "Vanessa be the name 180
 "By which thou shalt be known to fame:
 "Vanessa, by the gods enroll'd:
 "Her name on earth shall not be told."

But

But still the work was not complete;
 When Venus thought on a deceit. 185
 Drawn by her doves, away she flies,
 And finds out Pallas in the skies.
 Dear Pallas, I have been this morn
 To see a lovely infant born;
 A boy in yonder isle below, 190
 So like my own without his bow,
 By beauty could your heart be won,
 You 'd swear it is Apollo's son:
 But it shall ne'er be said, a child
 So hopeful has by me been spoil'd; 195
 I have enough beside to spare,
 And give him wholly to your care.

Wisdom 's above suspecting wiles:
 The Queen of Learning gravely smiles.
 Down from Olympus comes with joy, 200
 Mistakes Vanessa for a boy;
 Then sows within her tender mind
 Seeds long unknown to womankind;
 For manly bosoms chiefly fit,
 The seeds of knowledge, judgment, wit. 205
 Her soul was suddenly endued
 With justice, truth, and fortitude;
 With honour, which no breath can stain,
 Which malice must attack in vain;
 With open heart and bounteous hand, 210
 But Pallas here was at a stand;
 She knew, in our degenerate days,
 Bare virtue could not live on praise;
 That meat must be with money bought:
 She therefore, upon second thought, 215
 Infus'd, yet as it were by stealth,
 Some small regard for state and wealth;

Of

Of which, as she grew up, there staid
 A tincture in the prudent maid :
 She manag'd her estate with care, 220
 Yet lik'd three footmen to her chair.
 But, lest he should neglect his studies
 Like a young heir, the thrifty goddess
 (For fear young master should be spoil'd)
 Would use him like a younger child ; 225
 And, after long computing, found
 'Twould come to just five thousand pound.

The Queen of Love was pleas'd, and proud,
 To see Vanessa thus endow'd :
 She doubted not but such a dame 230
 Through every breast would dart a flame ;
 That every rich and lordly swain
 With pride would drag about her chain ;
 That scholars would forsake their books,
 To study bright Vanessa's looks ; 235
 As she advanc'd, that womankind
 Would by her model form their mind,
 And all their conduct would be try'd
 By her, as an unerring guide ;
 Offending daughters oft would hear 240
 Vanessa's praise rung in their ear :
 Miss Betty, when she does a fault,
 Lets fall her knife, or spills the salt,
 Will thus be by her mother chid,
 " 'Tis what Vanessa never did ! " 245
 Thus by the nymphs and swains ador'd,
 My power shall be again restor'd,
 And happy lovers bless my reign —
 So Venus hop'd, but hop'd in vain.

For when in time the Martial Maid 250
 Found out the trick that Venus play'd,

She

She shakes her helm, she knits her brows,
And fir'd with indignation, vows,
To morrow, ere the setting sun,
She'd all undo that she had done. 255

But in the poets we may find
A wholesome law, time out of mind,
Had been confirm'd by Fate's decree,
That gods, of whatsoe'er degree,
Resume not what themselves have given, 260

Or any brother god in Heaven;
Which keeps the peace among the gods,
Or they must always be at odds:

And Pallas, if she broke the laws,
Must yield her foe the stronger cause; 265

A shame to one so much ador'd
For wisdom at Jove's council board.

Besides, she fear'd the Queen of Love
Would meet with better friends above.

And though she must with grief reflect, 270

To see a mortal virgin deck'd

With graces hitherto unknown

To female breasts, except her own:

Yet she would act as best became

A goddess of unspotted fame. 275

She knew, by augury divine,

Venus would fail in her design:

She study'd well the point, and found

Her foe's conclusions were not sound,

From premisses erroneous brought, 280

And therefore the deduction's naught,

And must have contrary effects,

To what her treacherous foe expects.

In proper season Pallas meets

The Queen of Love, whom thus she greets, 285

(For

(For gods, we are by Homer told,
 Can in celestial language scold)
 Perfidious goddess! but in vain
 You form'd this project in your brain;
 A project for thy talents fit,
 With much deceit and little wit.
 Thou hast, as thou shalt quickly see,
 Deceiv'd thyself, instead of me:
 For how can heavenly wisdom prove
 An instrument to earthly love? 295
 Know'st thou not yet, that men commence
 Thy votaries, for want of sense?
 Nor shall Vanessa be the theme
 To manage thy abortive scheme:
 She'll prove the greatest of thy foes; 300
 And yet I scorn to interpose,
 But, using neither skill nor force,
 Leave all things to their natural course.
 The goddess thus pronounc'd her doom:
 When lo! Vanessa in her bloom 305
 Advanc'd, like Atalanta's star,
 But rarely seen, and seen from far:
 In a new world with caution stept,
 Watch'd all the company she kept,
 Well knowing, from the books she read, 310
 What dangerous paths young virgins tread:
 Would seldom at the Park appear,
 Nor saw the playhouse twice a year;
 Yet, not incurious, was inclin'd
 To know the converse of mankind. 315

First issued from perfumer's shops,
 A crowd of fashionable fops:
 They ask'd her, how she lik'd the play;
 Then told the tattle of the day;

(For

A duel

A duel fought last night at two, 320
 About a lady—you know who;
 Mention'd a new Italian, come
 Either from Muscovy or Rome;
 Gave hints of who and who's together;
 Then fell to talking of the weather; 325
 Last night was so extremely fine,
 The ladies walk'd till after nine;
 Then, in soft voice and speech absurd,
 With nonsense every second word,
 With fustian from exploded plays, 330
 They celebrate her beauty's praise;
 Run o'er their cant of stupid lies,
 And tell the murders of her eyes.

With silent scorn Vanessa sat,
 Scarce listening to their idle chat; 335
 Farther than sometimes by a frown,
 When they grew pert, to pull them down.
 At last she spitefully was bent
 To try their wisdom's full extent;
 And said, she valu'd nothing less 340
 Than titles, figure, shape, and dress;
 That merit should be chiefly plac'd
 In judgment, knowledge, wit, and taste;
 And these, she offer'd to dispute,
 Alone distinguish'd man from brute: 345
 That present times have no pretence
 To virtue, in the noble sense
 By Greeks and Romans understood,
 To perish for our country's good.
 She nam'd the ancient heroes round, 350
 Explain'd for what they were renown'd;
 Then spoke with censure or applause
 Of foreign customs, rites, and laws;

Through

Through nature and through art she rang'd,
 And gracefully her subject chang'd ;— 355
 In vain ! her hearers had no share
 In all she spoke, except to stare.
 Their judgment was, upon the whole,
 — That lady is the dullest soul ! —
 Then tipt their forehead in a jeer, 360
 As who should say — She wants it here !
 She may be handsome, young, and rich,
 But none will burn her for a witch !

A party next of glittering dames,
 From round the purlieus of St. James, 365
 Came early, out of pure good will,
 To see the girl in dishabille.
 Their clamour, 'lighting from their chairs,
 Grew louder all the way up stairs ;
 At entrance loudest, where they found 370
 The room with volumes litter'd round.
 Vanessa held Montaigne, and read,
 While Mrs. Susan comb'd her head.
 They call'd for tea and chocolate,
 And fell into their usual chat, 375
 Discoursing with important face,
 On ribands, fans, and gloves, and lace ;
 Show'd patterns just from India brought,
 And gravely ask'd her what she thought,
 Whether the red or green were best, 380
 And what they cost ! Vanessa guess'd,
 As came into her fancy first ;
 Nam'd half the rates, and lik'd the worst.
 To scandal next — What awkward thing
 Was that last Sunday in the ring ! 385
 I'm sorry Mopsa breaks so fast :
 I said, her face would never last.

Corinna,

Corinna, with that youthful air,
 Is thirty, and a bit to spare :
 Her fondness for a certain earl
 Began when I was but a girl !
 Phillis, who but a month ago
 Was marry'd to the Tunbridge beau,
 I saw coquetting t'other night
 In publick with that odious knight !

They rally'd next Vanessa's dress :
 That gown was made for old queen Bess.
 Dear madam, let me see your head :
 Don't you intend to put on red ?
 A petticoat without a hoop !
 Sure, you are not asham'd to stoop !
 With handsome garters at your knees,
 No matter what a fellow sees.

Fill'd with disdain, with rage inflam'd,
 Both of herself and sex asham'd,
 The nymph stood silent out of spite,
 Nor would vouchsafe to set them right.
 Away the fair detractors went,
 And gave by turns their censures vent.
 She's not so handsome in my eyes :
 For wit, I wonder where it lies !
 She's fair and clean, and that's the most :
 But why proclaim her for a toast ?
 A baby face ; no life, no airs,
 But what she learn'd at country fairs ;
 Scarce knows what difference is between Rich Flanders lace and Colberteen.
 I'll undertake, my little Nancy
 In flounces has a better fancy !
 With all her wit, I would not ask
 Her judgment how to buy a mask.

We

We begg'd her but to patch her face;
She never hit one proper place;
Which every girl at five years old
Can do as soon as she is told. 425

I own, that out of fashion stuff
Becomes the creature well enough.
The girl might pass, if we could get her
To know the world a little better.
(To know the world! a modern phrase 430
For visits, ombre, balls, and plays.)

Thus, to the world's perpetual shame,
The Queen of Beauty lost her aim;
Too late with grief she understood,
Pallas had done more harm than good; 435
For great examples are but vain,
Where ignorance begets disdain.
Both sexes, arm'd with guilt and spite,
Against Vanessa's power unite:
To copy her few nymphs aspir'd; 440
Her virtues fewer swains admir'd.
So stars, beyond a certain height,
Give mortals neither heat nor light.

Yet some of either sex, endow'd
With gifts superiour to the crowd, 445
With virtue, knowledge, taste, and wit,
She condescended to admit:
With pleasing arts she could reduce
Men's talents to their proper use;
And with address each genius held 450
To that wherein it most excell'd;
Thus, making others' wisdom known,
Could please them, and improve her own.
A modest youth said something new;
She plac'd it in the strongest view. 455

All

All humble worth she strove to raise;
 Would not be prais'd, yet lov'd to praise.
 The learned met with free approach,
 Although they came not in a coach:
 Some clergy too she would allow, 460
 Nor quarrel'd at their awkward bow;
 But this was for Cadenus' sake,
 A gownman of a different make;
 Whom Pallas, once Vanessa's tutor,
 Had fix'd on for her coadjutor. 465

But Cupid, full of mischief, longs
 To vindicate his mother's wrongs.
 On Pallas all attempts are vain:
 One way he knows to give her pain;
 Vows on Vanessa's heart to take 470
 Due vengeance, for her patron's sake;
 Those early seeds by Venus sown,
 In spite of Pallas, now were grown;
 And Cupid hop'd, they would improve
 By time, and ripen into love. 475

The boy made use of all his craft,
 In vain discharging many a shaft,
 Pointed at colonels, lords, and beaux:
 Cadenus warded off the blows;
 For, placing still some book betwixt, 480
 The darts were in the cover fix'd,
 Or, often blunted and recoil'd,
 On Plutarch's Morals struck, were spoil'd.

The Queen of Wisdom could foresee,
 But not prevent, the Fates' decree: 485
 And human caution tries in vain
 To break that adamant chain.
 Vanessa, though by Pallas taught,
 By Love invulnerable thought,

Searching in books for wisdom's aid, 490
Was, in the very search, betray'd.

Cupid, though all his darts were lost,
Yet still resolv'd to spare no cost:

He could not answer to his fame
The triumphs of that stubborn dame, 495
A nymph so hard to be subdued,
Who neither was coquette nor prude.

I find, said he, she wants a doctor,
Both to adore her, and instruct her:
I'll give her what she most admires, 500
Among those venerable sires.

Cadenus is a subject fit,
Grown old in politicks and wit,
Caress'd by ministers of state,
Of half mankind the dread and hate. 505

Whate'er vexations love attend,
She need no rivals apprehend.

Her sex, with universal voice,
Must laugh at her capricious choice.

Cadenus many things had writ: 510
Vanessa much esteem'd his wit,
And call'd for his poetick works:

Mean time the boy in secret lurks;
And, while the book was in her hand,
The urchin from his private stand 515

Took aim, and shot with all his strength
A dart of such prodigious length,
It pierc'd the feeble volume through,

And deep transfix'd her bosom too.
Some lines, more moving than the rest, 520

Stuck to the point that pierc'd her breast,
And, born directly to the heart,
With pains unknown, increas'd her smart.

Vanessa,

Vanessa, not in years a score,
 Dreams of a gown of forty-four; 525
 Imaginary charms can find
 In eyes with reading almost blind:
 Cadenus now no more appears
 Declin'd in health, advanc'd in years.
 She fancies musick in his tongue; 530
 Nor farther looks, but thinks him young.
 What mariner is not afraid
 To venture in a ship decay'd?
 What planter will attempt to yoke
 A sapling with a falling oak? 535
 As years increase, she brighter shines;
 Cadenus with each day declines:
 And he must fall a prey to time,
 While she continues in her prime.

Cadenus, common forms apart, 540
 In every scene had kept his heart;
 Had sigh'd and languish'd, vow'd and writ,
 For pastime, or to show his wit.
 But books, and time, and state affairs,
 Had spoil'd his fashionable airs: 545
 He now could praise, esteem, approve,
 But understood not what was love.
 His conduct might have made him styl'd
 A father, and the nymph his child.
 That innocent delight he took 550
 To see the virgin mind her book,
 Was but the master's secret joy
 In school to hear the finest boy.
 Her knowledge with her fancy grew;
 She hourly press'd for something new; 555
 Ideas came into her mind
 So fast, his lessons lagg'd behind;

She reason'd, without plodding long,
Nor ever gave her judgment wrong.
But now a sudden change was wrought: 560
She minds no longer what he taught.
Cadenus was amaz'd, to find
Such marks of a distracted mind:
For, though she seem'd to listen more
To all he spoke, than e'er before, 565
He found her thoughts would absent range,
Yet guess'd not whence could spring the change.
And first he modestly conjectures
His pupil might be tir'd with lectures;
Which help'd to mortify his pride, 570
Yet gave him not the heart to chide:
But, in a mild dejected strain,
At last he ventur'd to complain;
Said, she should be no longer teaz'd,
Might have her freedom when she pleas'd: 575
Was now convinc'd he acted wrong
To hide her from the world so long,
And in dull studies to engage
One of her tender sex and age:
That every nymph with envy own'd, 580
How she might shine in the grande monde;
And every shepherd was undone
To see her cloister'd like a nun.
This was a visionary scheme:
He wak'd, and found it but a dream; 585
A project far above his skill;
For nature must be nature still.
If he were bolder than became
A scholar to a courtly dame,
She might excuse a man of letters: 590
Thus tutors often treat their betters:

And,

And, since his talk offensive grew,
He came to take his last adieu.

Vanessa, fill'd with just disdain,
Would still her dignity maintain, 595
Instructed from her early years
To scorn the art of female tears.

Had he employ'd his time so long
To teach her what was right and wrong;
Yet could such notions entertain 600
That all his lectures were in vain?
She own'd the wandering of her thoughts;
But he must answer for her faults.
She well remember'd, to her cost,
That all his lessons were not lost. 605
Two maxims she could still produce,
And sad experience taught their use;
That virtue, pleas'd by being shown,
Knows nothing which it dares not own;
Can make us without fear disclose 610
Our inmost secrets to our foes:
That common forms were not design'd
Directors to a noble mind.

Now, said the nymph, to let you see
My actions with your rules agree; 615
That I can vulgar forms despise,
And have no secrets to disguise:
I knew, by what you said and writ,
How dangerous things were men of wit;
You caution'd me against their charms, 620
But never gave me equal arms;
Your lessons found the weakest part,
Aim'd at the head, but reach'd the heart.

Cadenus felt within him rise
Shame, disappointment, guilt, surprise. 625

He knew not how to reconcile
 Such language with her usual style :
 And yet her words were so exprest,
 He could not hope she spoke in jest.
 His thought had wholly been confin'd 630
 To form and cultivate her mind.
 He hardly knew, till he was told,
 Whether the nymph were young or old ;
 Had met her in a publick place,
 Without distinguishing her face : 635
 Much less could his declining age
 Vanessa's earliest thoughts engage ;
 And, if her youth indifference met,
 His person must contempt beget :
 Or, grant her passion be sincere, 640
 How shall his innocence be clear ?
 Appearances were all so strong,
 The world must think him in the wrong :
 Would say, he made a treacherous use
 Of wit, to flatter and seduce : 645
 The town would swear, he had betray'd
 By magick spells the harmless maid :
 And every beau would have his jokes,
 That scholars were like other folks ;
 And, when Platonick flights were over, 650
 The tutor turn'd a mortal lover !
 So tender of the young and fair !
 It show'd a true paternal care —
 Five thousand guineas in her purse !
 The doctor might have fancy'd worse. — 655

Hardly at length he silence broke,
 And falter'd every word he spoke ;
 Interpreting her complaisance,
 Just as a man sans consequence,

She

She rallied well, he always knew : 660
Her manner now was something new;
And what she spoke was in an air
As serious as a tragick player.
But those who aim at ridicule
Should fix upon some certain rule, 665
Which fairly hints they are in jest,
Else he must enter his protest :
For, let a man be ne'er so wise,
He may be caught with sober lies ;
A science which he never taught, 670
And, to be free, was dearly bought ;
For, take it in its proper light,
'Tis just what coxcombs call a bite.

But, not to dwell on things minute,
Vanessa finish'd the dispute ; 675
Brought weighty arguments to prove
That reason was her guide in love.
She thought he had himself describ'd,
His doctrines when she first imbib'd :
What he had planted, now was grown ; 680
His virtues she might call her own ;
As he approves, as he dislikes,
Love or contempt her fancy strikes.
Self-love, in nature rooted fast,
Attends us first, and leaves us last : 685
Why she likes him, admire not at her ;
She loves herself, and that's the matter.
How was her tutor wont to praise
The geniuses of ancient days !
(Those authors he so oft had nam'd, 690
For learning, wit, and wisdom, fam'd)
Was struck with love, esteem, and awe,
For persons whom he never saw.

Suppose Cadenus flourish'd then,
He must adore such godlike men. 695

If one short volume could comprise
All that was witty, learn'd, and wise,
How would it be esteem'd and read,
Although the writer long were dead!
If such an author were alive, 700

How all would for his friendship strive,
And come in crowds to see his face!
And this she takes to be her case.

Cadenus answers every end,
The book, the author, and the friend; 705

The utmost her desires will reach,
Is but to learn what he can teach:
His converse is a system fit
Alone to fill up all her wit;
While every passion of her mind 710
In him is centred and confin'd.

Love can with speech inspire a mute,
And taught Vanessa to dispute.

This topick, never touch'd before,
Display'd her eloquence the more: 715

Her knowledge, with such pains acquir'd,
By this new passion grew inspir'd;

Through this she made all objects pass
Which gave a tincture o'er the mass;

As rivers, though they bend and twine, 720
Still to the sea their course incline;

Or, as philosophers, who find
Some favourite system to their mind,

In every point to make it fit,
Will force all nature to submit. 725

Cadenus, who could ne'er suspect
His lessons would have such effect,

Or

Or be so artfully apply'd,
Insensibly came on her side.
It was an unforeseen event ; 730
Things took a turn he never meant.
Whoe'er excels in what we prize,
Appears a hero in our eyes :
Each girl, when pleas'd with what is taught,
Will have the teacher in her thought. 735
When miss delights in her spinet,
A fidler may a fortune get ;
A blockhead, with melodious voice,
In boarding-schools may have his choice ;
And oft the dancingmaster's art 740
Climbs from the toe to touch the heart.
In learning let a nymph delight,
The pedant gets a mistress by 't.
Cadenus, to his grief and shame,
Could scarce oppose Vanessa's flame ; 745
And, though her arguments were strong,
At least could hardly wish them wrong.
Howe'er it came, he could not tell,
But sure she never talk'd so well.
His pride began to interpose ; 750
Preferr'd before a crowd of beaux !
So bright a nymph to come unsought !
Such wonder by his merit wrought !
'Tis merit must with her prevail !
He never knew her judgment fail ! 755
She noted all she ever read !
And had a most discerning head !
'Tis an old maxim in the schools,
That flattery's the food of fools ;
Yet now and then your men of wit 760
Will condescend to take a bit.

So,

So, when Cadenus could not hide,
 He chose to justify his pride;
 Construing the passion he had shown,
 Much to her praise, more to his own. 765
 Nature in him had merit plac'd,
 In her a most judicious taste.
 Love, hitherto a transient guest,
 Ne'er held possession of his breast;
 So long attending at the gate, 770
 Disdain'd to enter in so late.
 Love why do we one passion call,
 When 'tis a compound of them all?
 Where hot and cold, where sharp and sweet,
 In all their equipages meet; 775
 Where pleasures mix'd with pains appear,
 Sorrow with joy, and hope with fear;
 Wherein his dignity and age
 Forbid Cadenus to engage.
 But friendship, in its greatest height, 780
 A constant, rational delight,
 On virtue's basis fix'd to last,
 When love allurements long are past,
 Which gently warms, but cannot burn,
 He gladly offers in return; 785
 His want of passion will redeem
 With gratitude, respect, esteem;
 With that devotion we bestow,
 When goddesses appear below.
 While thus Cadenus entertains 790
 Vanessa in exalted strains,
 The nymph in sober words entreats
 A truce with all sublime conceits:
 For why such raptures, flights, and fancies,
 To her who durst not read romances? 795
 In

In lofty style to make replies,
 Which he had taught her to despise?
 But when her tutor will affect
 Devotion, duty, and respect,
 He fairly abdicates the throne; 800
 The government is now her own;
 He has a forfeiture incurr'd;
 She vows to take him at his word,
 And hopes he will not think it strange,
 If both should now their stations change; 805
 The nymph will have her turn to be
 The tutor; and the pupil, he:
 Though she already can discern
 Her scholar is not apt to learn;
 Or wants capacity to reach 810
 The science she designs to teach:
 Wherein his genius was below
 The skill of every common beau,
 Who, though he cannot spell, is wise
 Enough to read a lady's eyes, 815
 And will each accidental glance
 Interpret for a kind advance.

But what success Vanessa met
 Is to the world a secret yet.
 Whether the nymph, to please her swain, 820
 Talks in a high romantick strain;
 Or whether he at last descends
 To act with less seraphick ends;
 Or, to compound the business, whether
 They temper love and books together; 825
 Must never to mankind be told,
 Nor shall the conscious Muse unfold.

Meantime the mournful Queen of Love
 Led but a weary life above.

She

She ventures now to leave the skies, 830
 Grown by Vanessa's conduct wise :
 For, though by one perverse event
 Pallas had cross'd her first intent ;
 Though her design was not obtain'd ;
 Yet had she much experience gain'd, 835
 And, by the project vainly try'd,
 Could better now the cause decide.
 She gave due notice, that both parties,
Coram Regina, prox' die Martis,
 Should at their peril, without fail, 840
 Come and appear, and save their bail.
 All met ; and, silence thrice proclaim'd,
 One lawyer to each side was nam'd.
 The judge discover'd in her face
 Resentments for her late disgrace ; 845
 And, full of anger, shame, and grief,
 Directed them to mind their brief ;
 Nor spend their time to show their reading ;
 She 'd have a summary proceeding.
 She gather'd under every head 850
 The sum of what each lawyer said,
 Gave her own reasons last, and then
 Decreed the cause against the men.
 But, in a weighty case like this,
 To show she did not judge amiss, 855
 Which evil tongues might else report,
 She made a speech in open court ;
 Wherein she grievously complains,
 " How she was cheated by the swains ;
 " On whose petition (humbly shewing, 860
 " That women were not worth the wooing,
 " And that, unless the sex would mend,
 " The race of lovers soon must end)—

" She

“ She was at Lord knows what expense
 “ To form a nymph of wit and sense, 865
 “ A model for her sex design’d,
 “ Who never could one lover find.
 “ She saw her favour was misplac’d;
 “ The fellows had a wretched taste;
 “ She needs must tell them to their face, 870
 “ They were a stupid, senseless race;
 “ And, were she to begin again,
 “ She’d study to reform the men;
 “ Or add some grains of folly more
 “ To women, than they had before, 875
 “ To put them on an equal foot;
 “ And this, or nothing else, would do’t.
 “ This might their mutual fancy strike;
 “ Since every being loves its like.
 “ But now, repenting what was done, 880
 “ She left all business to her son;
 “ She put the world in his possession,
 “ And let him use it at discretion.”
 The crier was order’d to dismiss
 The court, so made his last “ O yes!” 885
 The goddess would no longer wait;
 But, rising from her chair of state,
 Left all below at six and seven,
 Harness’d her doves, and flew to Heaven.

TO LOVE*.

IN all I wish, how happy should I be,
 Thou grand Deluder, were it not for thee!
 So weak thou art, that fools thy power despise;
 And yet so strong, thou triumph'st o'er the wise.
 Thy traps are laid with such peculiar art,
 They catch the cautious, let the rash depart.
 Most nets are fill'd by want of thought and care:
 But too much thinking brings us to thy snare;
 Where, held by thee, in slavery we stay,
 And throw the pleasing part of life away.
 But, what does most my indignation move,
 Discretion! thou wert ne'er a friend to Love:
 Thy chief delight is to defeat those arts,
 By which he kindles mutual flames in hearts;
 While the blind loitering God is at his play,
 Thou steal'st his golden pointed darts away:
 Those darts which never fail; and in their stead
 Convey'st malignant arrows tipt with lead:
 The heedless God, suspecting no deceits,
 Shoots on, and thinks he has done wondrous feats;
 But the poor nymph, who feels her vitals burn,
 And from her shepherd can find no return,
 Laments, and rages at the power divine,
 When, curst Discretion! all the fault was thine:
 Cupid and Hymen thou hast set at odds,
 And bred such feuds between those kindred gods;
 That Venus cannot reconcile her sons;
 When one appears, away the other runs.

* Found in miss Vanhomrigh's desk, after her death, in the handwriting of Dr. Swift.

The

The former scales, wherein he us'd to poise
 Love against love, and equal joys with joys,
 Are now fill'd up with avarice and pride,
 Where titles, power, and riches, still subside.
 Then, gentle Venus, to thy father run,
 And tell him, how thy children are undone;
 Prepare his bolts to give one fatal blow,
 And strike Discretion to the shades below.

A REBUS. BY VANESSA.

CUT the name of the man* who his mistress deny'd,
 And let the first of it be only apply'd
 To join with the prophet† who David did chide;
 Then say what a horse is that runs very fast‡;
 And that which deserves to be first put the last;
 Spell all then, and put them together, to find
 The name and the virtues of him I design'd.
 Like the patriarch in Egypt, he's vers'd in the state;
 Like the prophet in Jewry, he's free with the great;
 Like a racer he flies, to succour with speed,
 When his friends want his aid, or desert is in need.

THE DEAN'S ANSWER.

THE nymph who wrote this in an amorous fit,
 I cannot but envy the pride of her wit,
 Which thus she will venture profusely to throw
 On so mean a design, and a subject so low.
 For mean's her design, and her subject as mean,
 The first but a rebus, the last but a dean.
 A dean's but a parson: and what is a rebus?
 A thing never known to the Muses or Phœbus.
 The corruption of verse; for, when all is done,
 It is but a paraphrase made on a pun.
 But a genius like her's no subject can stifle,
 It shows and discovers itself through a trifle.
 By reading this trifle, I quickly began
 To find her a great wit, but the dean a small man.
 Rich ladies will furnish their garrets with stuff,
 Which others for mantuas would think fine enough:
 So the wit that is lavishly thrown away here,
 Might furnish a second-rate poet a year.
 Thus much for the verse, we proceed to the next,
 Where the nymph has entirely forsaken her text:
 Her fine panegyricks are quite out of season,
 And what she describes to be merit, is treason:
 The changes which faction has made in the state,
 Have put the dean's politicks quite out of date:
 Now no one regards what he utters with freedom,
 And, should he write pamphlets, no great man would read 'em;
 And should want or desert stand in need of his aid,
 This racer would prove but a dull founder'd jade.

HORACE,

HORACE, B. II. ODE I. PARAPHRASED.

ADDRESSED TO RICHARD STEELE, ESQ. 1714.

“ En qui promittit, cives, urbem sibi curæ,
 “ Imperium fore, & Italiam, & delubra deorum.”

HOR. I. SAT. vi. 34.

DICK, thou 'rt resolv'd, as I am told,
 Some strange arcana to unfold,
 And, with the help of Buckley's pen,
 To vamp the good old cause again :
 Which thou (such Burnet's shrewd advice is) 5
 Must furbish up, and nickname Crisis.
 Thou pompously wilt let us know
 What all the world knew long ago,
 (E'er since sir William Gore was mayor,
 And Harley fill'd the commons' chair) 10
 That we a German prince must own,
 When Anne for Heaven resigns her throne.
 But, more than that, thou 'lt keep a rout
 With—who is in—and who is out ;
 Thou 'lt rail devoutly at the peace, 15
 And all its secret causes trace,
 The bucket-play 'twixt whigs and tories,
 Their ups and downs, with fifty stories
 Of tricks the lord of Oxford knows,
 And errors of our plenipoes. 20
 Thou 'lt tell of leagues among the great,
 Portending ruin to our state ;
 And of that dreadful coup d'eclat,
 Which has afforded thee much chat.

The queen, forsooth (despotick), gave 25
 Twelve coronets without thy leave!
 A breach of liberty, 'tis own'd;
 For which no heads have yet aton'd!
 Believe me, what thou 'st undertaken
 May bring in jeopardy thy bacon; 30
 For madmen, children, wits, and fools,
 Should never meddle with edg'd tools.
 But, since thou 'rt got into the fire,
 And canst not easily retire,
 Thou must no longer deal in farce, 35
 Nor pump to cobble wicked verse;
 Until thou shalt have eas'd thy conscience,
 Of spleen, of politicks, and nonsense;
 And, when thou 'st bid adieu to cares,
 And settled Europe's grand affairs, 40
 'Twill then, perhaps, be worth thy while
 For Drury Lane to shape thy style:
 "To make a pair of jolly fellows,
 "The son and father, join to tell us,
 "How sons may safely disobey, 45
 "And fathers never should say nay;
 "By which wise conduct they grow friends
 "At last—and so the story ends *."

When first I knew thee, Dick, thou wert
 Renown'd for skill in Faustus' art †; 50
 Which made thy closet much frequented
 By buxom lasses — some repented
 Their luckless choice of husbands — others,
 Impatient to be like their mothers,

* This is said to be a plot of a comedy with which Mr. Steele has long threatened the town. SWIFT.—In some particulars it would apply to "The Conscious Lovers."

† There were some tolerable grounds for this reflection. Mr. Steele had actually a laboratory at Poplar.

Receiv'd from thee profound directions 55
 How best to settle their affections.
 Thus thou, a friend to the distress'd,
 Didst in thy calling do thy best.

But now the Senate (if things hit
 And thou at Stockbridge wert not bit) 60
 Must feel thy eloquence and fire,
 Approve thy schemes, thy wit admire,
 Thee with immortal honours crown,
 While, patriot-like, thou 'lt strut and frown.

What though by enemies 'tis said, 65
 The laurel, which adorns thy head,
 Must one day come in competition,
 By virtue of some sly petition:
 Yet mum for that; hope still the best,
 Nor let such cares disturb thy rest. 70

Methinks I hear thee loud as trumpet,
 As bagpipe shrill, or oyster-strumpet;
 Methinks I see thee, spruce and fine,
 With coat embroider'd richly shine,
 And dazzle all the idol faces, 75
 As through the hall thy worship paces;
 (Though this I speak but at a venture,
 Supposing thou hast tick with Hunter)
 Methinks I see a black-guard rout
 Attend thy coach, and hear them shout 80
 In approbation of thy tongue,
 Which (in their style) is purely hung.
 Now! now you carry all before you!
 Nor dares one Jacobite or Tory
 Pretend to answer one syl-lable, 85
 Except the matchless hero Abel*.

* Abel Roper.

What though her highness and her spouse,
 In Antwerp * keep a frugal house,
 Yet, not forgetful of a friend,
 They'll soon enable thee to spend, 90
 If to Macartney † thou wilt toast,
 And to his pious patron's ghost.

Now manfully thou'lt run a tilt
 " On popes, for all the blood they've spilt,
 " For massacres, and racks, and flames, 95
 " For lands enrich'd by crimson streams,
 " For inquisitions taught by Spain,
 " Of which the Christian world complain."

Dick, we agree—all's true thou'st said,
 As that my Muse is yet a maid. 100

But, if I may with freedom talk,
 All this is foreign to thy walk :
 Thy genius has perhaps a knack
 At trudging in a beaten track,
 But is for state affairs as fit 105
 As mine for politicks and wit.

Then let us both in time grow wise,
 Nor higher than our talents rise ;
 To some snug cellar let's repair
 From duns and debts, and drown our care ; 110
 Now quaff of honest ale a quart,
 Now venture at a pint of port ;
 With which inspir'd, we'll club each night
 Some tender sonnet to indite,
 And with Tom D'Urfey, Philips, Dennis, 115
 Immortalize our Dolls and Jennys.

HORACE, BOOK I. EP. V.

JOHN DENNIS, THE SHELTERING POET'S
 INVITATION TO RICHARD STEELE,
 THE SECLUDED PARTY WRITER AND MEMBER,
 TO COME AND LIVE WITH HIM IN THE MINT. 1714*.

Fit to be bound up with THE CRISIS.

IF thou canst lay aside a spendthrift's air,
 And condescend to feed on homely fare,
 Such as we Minters, with ragouts unstor'd,
 Will, in defiance of the law, afford :
 Quit thy patrols with Toby's Christmas box, 5
 And come to me at The Two Fighting Cocks ;
 Since printing by subscription now is grown
 The stalest, idlest cheat about the town ;
 And ev'n Charles Gildon, who, a papist bred,
 Has an alarm against that worship spread, 10
 Is practising those beaten paths of cruising,
 And for new levies on Proposals musing.

'Tis true, that Bloomsbury square's a noble place :
 But what are lofty buildings in thy case ?
 What's a fine house embellish'd to profusion, 15
 Where shoulderdabbers are in execution ?
 Or whence its timorous tenant seldom sallies,
 But apprehensive of insulting bailiffs ?
 This once be mindful of a friend's advice,
 And cease to be improvidently nice ; 20

* This and the preceding poem were first added to the dean's Works by Mr. Nichols, from copies in the Lambeth Library, K. 1, 2. 29, 30. 4to.

Exchange the prospects that delude thy sight,
From Highgate's steep ascent and Hampstead's height,
With verdant scenes, that, from St. George's field,
More durable and safe enjoyments yield.

Here I, ev'n I, that ne'er till now could find 25
Ease to my troubled and suspicious mind,
But ever was with jealousies possess'd,
Am in a state of indolence and rest;
Fearful no more of Frenchmen in disguise,
Nor looking upon strangers as on spies, 30
But quite divested of my former spleen,
Am unprovok'd without, and calm within:
And here I'll wait thy coming, till the sun
Shall its diurnal course completely run.
Think not that thou of sturdy bub shall fail, 35
My landlord's cellar's stock'd with beer and ale,
With every sort of malt that is in use,
And every county's generous produce.
The ready (for here Christian faith is sick,
Which makes us seldom trespass upon tick) 40
Instantly brings the choicest liquors out,
Whether we ask for homebrew'd or for stout,
For mead or cider, or, with dainties fed,
Ring for a flask or two of white or red,
Such as the drawer will not fail to swear 45
Was drunk by Pilkington when third time mayor.
That name, methinks, so popularly known
For opposition to the church and crown,
Might make the Lusitanian grape to pass,
And almost give a sanction to the glass; 50
Especially with thee, whose hasty zeal
Against the late rejected commerce bill
Made thee rise up, like an audacious elf,
To do the speaker honour, not thyself.

But,

But, if thou soar'st above the common prices, 55
By virtue of subscription to thy Crisis,
And nothing can go down with thee, but wines
Press'd from Burgundian and Campanian vines,
Bid them be brought; for, though I hate the French,
I love their liquors, as thou lov'st a wench; 60
Else thou must humble thy expensive taste,
And, with us, hold contentment for a feast.

The fire's already lighted; and the maid
Has a clean cloth upon the table laid,
Who never on a Saturday had struck, 65
But for thy entertainment, up a buck.
Think of this act of grace, which by your leave
Susan would not have done on Easter Eve,
Had she not been inform'd over and over
'Twas for th' ingenious author of The Lover. 70

Cease therefore to beguile thyself with hopes,
Which is no more than making sandy ropes,
And quit the vain pursuit of loud applause,
That must bewilder thee in faction's cause.
Pry'thee what is't to thee who guides the state? 75
Why Dunkirk's demolition is so late?
Or why her majesty thinks fit to cease
The din of war, and hush the world to peace?
The clergy too, without thy aid, can tell
What texts to choose, and on what topicks dwell; 80
And, uninstructed by thy babbling, teach
Their flocks celestial happiness to reach.
Rather let such poor souls as you and I,
Say that the holydays are drawing nigh,
And that tomorrow's sun begins the week, 85
Which will abound with store of ale and cake,
With hams of bacon, and with powder'd beef,
Stuff'd to give field-itinerants relief.

Then I, who have within these precincts kept,
And ne'er beyond the chimneysweeper's stept, 90
Will take a loose, and venture to be seen,
Since 'twill be Sunday, upon Shanks's green;
There, with erected looks and phrase sublime,
To talk of unity of place and time,
And with much malice, mix'd with little satire, 95
Explode the wits on t'other side o' th' water.

Why has my lord Godolphin's special grace
Invested me with a queen's waiter's place,
If I, debarr'd of festival delights,
Am not allow'd to spend the perquisites? 100
He's but a short remove from being mad,
Who at a time of jubilee is sad,
And, like a griping usurer, does spare
His money to be squander'd by his heir;
Flutter'd away in liveries and in coaches, 105
And washy sorts of feminine debauches.
As for my part, whate'er the world may think,
I'll bid adieu to gravity, and drink;
And, though I can't put off a woeful mien,
Will be all mirth and cheerfulness within: 110
As, in despite of a censorious race,
I most incontinently suck my face.
What mighty projects does not he design,
Whose stomach flows, and brain turns round with wine?

Wine, powerful wine, can thaw the frozen cit, 115
And fashion him to humour and to wit;
Makes even S* to disclose his art,
By racking every secret from his heart,
As he flings off the statesman's sly disguise,
To name the cuckold's wife with whom he lies. 120

Ev'n

Ev'n Sarum, when he quaffs it stead of tea,
 Fancies himself in Canterbury's see,
 And S when he carousing reels,
 Imagines that he has regain'd the seals:
 W, by virtue of his juice, can fight, 125
 And Stanhope of commissioners make light.
 Wine gives lord Wingham aptitude of parts,
 And swells him with his family's deserts:
 Whom can it not make eloquent of speech?
 Whom in extremest poverty not rich? 130
 Since, by the means of the prevailing grape,
 Thn can Lechmere's warmth not only ape,
 But, half seas o'er, by its inspiring bounties,
 Can qualify himself in several counties.
 What I have promis'd, thou mayst rest assur'd, 135
 Shall faithfully and gladly be procur'd.
 Nay, I'm already better than my word,
 New plates and knives adorn the jovial board:
 And, lest thou at their sight shouldst make wry faces,
 The girl has scour'd the pots, and wash'd the glasses,
 Ta'en care so excellently well to clean 'em,
 That thou mayst see thine own dear picture in 'em.

Moreover, due provision has been made,
 That conversation may not be betray'd;
 I have no company but what is proper 145
 To sit with the most flagrant whig at supper.
 There's not a man among them but must please,
 Since they're as like each other as are peas.
 Toland and Hare have jointly sent me word,
 They'll come; and Kennett thinks to make a third, 150
 Provided he's no other invitation,
 From men of greater quality and station.
 Room will for Oldmixon and J—s be left:
 But their discourses smell so much of theft,

There

There would be no abiding in the room, 155
 Should two such ignorant pretenders come.
 However by this trusty bearer write,
 If I should any other scabs invite ;
 Though if I may my serious judgment give,
 I'm wholly for king Charles's number five : 160
 That was the stint in which that monarch fix'd,
 Who would not be with noisiness perplex'd :
 And that, if thou'lt agree to think it best,
 Shall be our tale of heads, without one other guest.

I've nothing more, now this is said, to say, 165
 But to request thou'lt instantly away.
 And leave the duties of thy present post,
 To some well-skill'd retainer in a host ;
 Doubtless he'll carefully thy place supply,
 And o'er his grace's horses have an eye. 170
 While thou, who slunk through postern more than once,

Dost by that means avoid a crowd of duns,
 And, crossing o'er the Thames at Temple stairs,
 Leav'st Philips with good words to cheat their ears.

TO LORD HARLEY, ON HIS MARRIAGE,

1713.

AMONG the numbers who employ
 Their tongues and pens to give you joy,
 Dear Harley ! generous youth, admit
 What friendship dictates more than wit.

Forgive me, when I fondly thought
 (By frequent observations taught)

A spirit

A spirit so inform'd as yours
Could never prosper in amours.
The God of Wit, and Light, and Arts,
With all acquir'd and natural parts,
Whose harp could savage beasts enchant,
Was an unfortunate gallant.
Had Bacchus after Daphne reel'd,
The nymph had soon been brought to yield:
Or, had embroider'd Mars pursued,
The nymph would ne'er have been a prude.
Ten thousand footsteps, full in view,
Mark out the way where Daphne flew:
For such is all the sex's flight,
They fly from learning, wit, and light:
They fly, and none can overtake
But some gay coxcomb, or a rake.

How then, dear Harley, could I guess
That you should meet, in love, success?
For, if those ancient tales be true,
Phœbus was beautiful as you:
Yet Daphne never slack'd her pace,
For wit and learning spoil'd his face.
And, since the same resemblance held
In gifts wherein you both excell'd,
I fancy'd every nymph would run
From you, as from Latona's son.

Then where, said I, shall Harley find
A virgin of superiour mind,
With wit and virtue to discover,
And pay the merit of her lover?

This character shall Ca'endish claim,
Born to retrieve her sex's fame.
The chief among the glittering crowd,
Of titles, birth, and fortune proud,

(As

(As fools are insolent and vain)
Madly aspir'd to wear her chain :
But Pallas, guardian of the maid,
Descending to her charge's aid,
Held out Medusa's snaky locks,
Which stupify'd them all to stocks.
The nymph with indignation view'd
The dull, the noisy, and the lewd :
For Pallas, with celestial light,
Had purify'd her mortal sight ;
Show'd her the virtues all combin'd,
Fresh blooming, in young Harley's mind.

Terrestrial nymphs, by former arts,
Display their various nets for hearts :
Their looks are all by method set,
When to be prude, and when coquette ;
Yet, wanting skill and power to choose,
Their only pride is to refuse.
But, when a goddess would bestow
Her love on some bright youth below,
Round all the earth she casts her eyes ;
And then, descending from the skies,
Makes choice of him she fancies best,
And bids the ravish'd youth be bless'd.

Thus the bright Empress of the Morn
Chose, for her spouse, a mortal born :
The goddess made advances first ;
Else what aspiring hero durst ?
Though, like a virgin of fifteen,
She blushes when by mortals seen ;
Still blushes, and with speed retires,
When Sol pursues her with his fires.

Diana thus, Heaven's chastest queen,
Struck with Endymion's graceful mien,

Down

Down from her silver chariot came,
And to the shepherd own'd her flame.

Thus Ca'endish, as Aurora bright,
And chaster than the Queen of Night,
Descended from her sphere to find
A mortal of superiour kind.

IN SICKNESS.

Written in IRELAND October 1714.

'TIS true—then why should I repine
To see my life so fast decline?
But why obscurely here alone,
Where I am neither lov'd nor known?
My state of health none care to learn;
My life is here no soul's concern:
And those with whom I now converse
Without a tear will tend my hearse.
Remov'd from kind Arbuthnot's aid,
Who knows his art, but not his trade,
Preferring his regard for me
Before his credit, or his fee.
Some formal visits, looks, and words,
What mere humanity affords,
I meet perhaps from three or four,
From whom I once expected more;
Which those who tend the sick for pay
Can act as decently as they:
But no obliging tender friend
To help at my approaching end.

My

My life is now a burden grown
To others, ere it be my own.

Ye formal weepers for the sick,
In your last offices be quick;
And spare my absent friends the grief
To hear, yet give me no relief;
Expir'd to day, intomb'd to morrow.
When known, will save a double sorrow.

THE FABLE OF THE BITCHES.

WRITTEN IN THE YEAR 1715.

ON AN ATTEMPT TO REPEAL THE TEST ACT.

A BITCH that was full pregnant grown,
By all the dogs and curs in town,
Finding her ripen'd time was come,
Her litter teeming from her womb,
Went here and there, and every where,
To find an easy place to lay-her.

At length to Musick's house * she came,
And begg'd like one both blind and lame;
"My only friend, my dear," said she,
"You see 'tis mere necessity,
"Hath sent me to your house to whelp:
"I die if you refuse your help."

With fawning whine, and rueful tone,
With artful sigh and feigned groan,

* The Church of England.

With couchant cringe, and flattering tale,
 Smooth Bawty * did so far prevail,
 That Musick gave her leave to litter;
 (But mark what follow'd—faith! she bit her)
 Whole baskets full of bits and scraps,
 And broth enough to fill her paps;
 For, well she knew, her numerous brood,
 For want of milk, would suck her blood.

But when she thought her pains were done,
 And now 'twas high time to be gone;
 In civil terms, — “My friend,” said she,
 “My house you've had on courtesy;
 “And now I earnestly desire,
 “That you would with your cubs retire;
 “For, should you stay but one week longer,
 “I shall be starved with cold and hunger.”

The guest reply'd — “My friend, your leave
 “I must a little longer crave;
 “Stay till my tender cubs can find
 “Their way — for now, you see, they're blind;
 “But, when we've gather'd strength, I swear,
 “We'll to our barn again repair.”

The time pass'd on; and Musick came,
 Her kennel once again to claim;
 But Bawty, lost to shame and honour,
 Set all her cubs at once upon her;
 Made her retire, and quit her right,
 And loudly cry'd — “A bite! a bite!”

THE MORAL.

Thus did the Grecian wooden horse
 Conceal a fatal armed force:
 No sooner brought within the walls,
 But Ilium's lost, and Priam falls.

* A Scotch name for a bitch; alluding to the kirk.

HORACE,

HORACE, BOOK III. ODE II.

TO THE EARL OF OXFORD,
LATE LORD TREASURER.

Sent to him when in the Tower, 1716.

HOW blest is he, who for his country dies,
Since death pursues the coward as he flies?
The youth in vain would fly from Fate's attack,
With trembling knees and Terroure at his back;
Though Fear should lend him pinions like the wind,
Yet swifter Fate will seize him from behind.

Virtue repuls'd, yet knows not to repine;
But shall with unattainted honour shine;
Nor stoops to take the staff*, nor lays it down,
Just as the rabble please to smile or frown.

Virtue, to crown her favourites, loves to try
Some new unbeaten passage to the sky;
Where Jove a seat among the gods will give
To those who die, for meriting to live.

Next faithful Silence hath a sure reward;
Within our breast be every secret barr'd!
He, who betrays his friend, shall never be
Under one roof, or in one ship, with me.
For who with traitors would his safety trust,
Lest with the wicked, Heaven involve the just?
And, though the villain 'scape a while, he feels
Slow Vengeance, like a bloodhound, at his heels.

PHYLLIS;

PHYLLIS;
OR,
THE PROGRESS OF LOVE. 1716.

DESPONDING Phyllis was endued
With every talent of a prude :
She trembled when a man drew near ;
Salute her, and she turn'd her ear ;
If o'er against her you were plac'd,
She durst not look above your waist :
She 'd rather take you to her bed,
Than let you see her dress her head :
In church you hear her, through the crowd,
Repeat the absolution loud :
In church, secure behind her fan,
She durst behold that monster man :
There practis'd how to place her head,
And bit her lips to make them red ;
Or, on the mat devoutly kneeling,
Would lift her eyes up to the cieling,
And heave her bosom unaware,
For neighbouring beaux to see it bare.

At length a lucky lover came,
And found admittance to the dame.
Suppose all parties now agreed,
The writings drawn, the lawyer feed,
The vicar and the ring bespoke :
Guess, how could such a match be broke ?
See then what mortals place their bliss in !
Next morn betimes the bride was missing :

The mother scream'd, the father chid;
 Where can this idle wench be hid?
 No news of Phyl! the bridegroom came,
 And thought his bride had skulk'd for shame;
 Because her father us'd to say,
 The girl had such a bashful way!

Now John the butler must be sent
 To learn the road that Phyllis went;
 The groom was wish'd to saddle Crop;
 For John must neither light nor stop,
 But find her, wheresoe'er she fled,
 And bring her back, alive or dead.

See here again the devil to do!
 For truly John was missing too:
 The horse and pillion both were gone!
 Phyllis, it seems, was fled with John.

Old Madam, who went up to find
 What papers Phyl had left behind,
 A letter on the toilet sees,
 To my much honour'd father — these —
 ('Tis always done, romances tell us,
 When daughters run away with fellows)
 Fill'd with the choicest commonplaces,
 By others us'd in the like cases.

“ That long ago a fortuneteller
 “ Exactly said what now befel her;
 “ And in a glass had made her see
 “ A serving-man of low degree.
 “ It was her fate, must be forgiven;
 “ For marriages were made in Heaven:
 “ His pardon begg'd: but, to be plain,
 “ She'd do't if 'twere to do again:
 “ Thank'd God, 'twas neither shame nor sin;
 “ For John was come of honest kin.

“ Love

" Love never thinks of rich and poor :
 " She 'd beg with John from door to door.
 " Forgive her, if it be a crime ;
 " She 'll never do 't another time.
 " She ne'er before in all her life
 " Once disobey'd him, maid nor wife.
 " One argument she summ'd up all in,
 " The thing was done, and past recalling ;
 " And therefore hop'd she should recover
 " His favour, when his passion's over.
 " She valued not what others thought her,
 " And was—his most obedient daughter."

Fair maidens, all attend the Muse,
 Who now the wandering pair pursues :
 Away they rode in homely sort,
 Their journey long, their money short ;
 The loving couple well bemir'd ;
 The horse and both the riders tir'd :
 Their victuals bad, their lodging worse ;
 Phyl cry'd ! and John began to curse :
 Phyl wish'd that she had strain'd a limb,
 When first she ventur'd out with him ;
 John wish'd, that he had broke a leg,
 When first for her he quitted Peg.

But what adventures more befel them,
 The Muse has now no time to tell them ;
 How Johnny wheedled, threaten'd, fawn'd,
 Till Phyllis all her trinkets pawn'd :
 How oft she broke her marriage vows
 In kindness to maintain her spouse,
 Till swains unwholesome spoil'd the trade ;
 For now the surgeons must be paid,
 To whom those perquisites are gone,
 In Christian justice due to John.

When food and raiment now grew scarce,
 Fate put a period to the farce,
 And with exact poetick justice;
 For John was landlord, Phyllis hostess;
 They keep, at Staines, the Old Blue Boar,
 Are cat and dog, and rogue and whore.

AD AMICUM ERUDITUM
 THOMAM SHERIDAN. 1717.

DELICIÆ Sheridan Musarum, dulcis amice,
 Sic tibi propitius Permessi ad flumen Apollo
 Occurrat, seu te mimum conviviâ rident,
 Æquivocosque sales spargis, seu ludere versu
 Malles; dic, Sheridan, quisnam fuit ille deorum,
 Quæ melior natura orto tibi tradidit artem
 Rimandi genium puerorum, atque ima cerebri
 Scrutandi? Tibi nascenti ad cunabula Pallas
 Astitit; & dixit, mentis præsaga futuræ,
 Heu, puer infelix! nostro sub sidere natus;
 Nam tu pectus eris sine corpore, corporis umbra;
 Sed levitate umbram superabis, voce cicadam:
 Musca femur, palmas tibi mus dedit, ardea crura.
 Corpore sed tenui tibi quod natura negavit,
 Hoc animi dotes supplebunt; teque docente,
 Nec longum tempus, surget tibi docta juvenus,
 Artibus egregiis animas instructa novellas.
 Grex hinc Pæonius venit, ecce, salutifer orbi;
 Ast, illi causas orant; his infula visa est
 Divinam capiti nodo constringere mitram.

Natalis

Natalis te horæ non fallunt signa, sed usque
 Conscius, expedias puero seu lætus Apollo
 Nascenti arrisit; siue illum frigidus horror
 Saturni premit, aut septem inflavere triones.

Quin tu altè penitusque latentia semina cernis,
 Quæque diu obtundendo olim sub luminis auras
 Erumpent, promis; quo ritu sæpè puella
 Sub cinere hesterno sopitos suscitât ignes.

Te dominum agnoscit quocunque sub aëre natus:
 Quos indulgentis nimium custodia matris
 Pessundat: nam sæpè vides in stipite matrem.

Aureus at ramus, venerandæ dona Sibyllæ,
 Æneæ sedes tantùm patefecit Avernas;
 Sæpè puer, tua quem tetigit semel aurea virga,
 Et cœlum, terrasque videt, noctemque profundam.

HORACE, BOOK IV. ODE IX.

ADDRESSED TO ABP. KING. 1718.

VIRTUE conceal'd within our breast
 Is inactivity at best:
 But never shall the Muse endure
 To let your virtues lie obscure;
 Or suffer Envy to conceal
 Your labours for the publick weal.
 Within your breast all wisdom lies,
 Either to govern or advise;
 Your steady soul preserves her frame,
 In good and evil times the same.

Pale Avarice and lurking Fraud,
Stand in your sacred presence aw'd ;
Your hand alone from gold abstains,
Which drags the slavish world in chains.

Him for a happy man I own,
Whose fortune is not overgrown ;
And happy he, who wisely knows
To use the gifts that Heaven bestows ;
Or, if it please the Powers Divine,
Can suffer want, and not repine.
The man, who infamy to shun
Into the arms of death would run ;
That man is ready to defend,
With life, his country or his friend.

TO MR. DELANY, Nov. 10, 1718,

TO you, whose virtues, I must own
With shame, I have too lately known ;
To you, by art and nature taught
To be the man I long have sought,
Had not ill Fate, perverse and blind,
Plac'd you in life too far behind :
Or, what I should repine at more,
Plac'd me in life too far before :
To you the Muse this verse bestows,
Which might as well have been in prose ;
No thought, no fancy, no sublime,
But simple topicks told in rhyme.

Talents for conversation fit
Are humour, breeding, sense, and wit :

The

The last, as boundless as the wind,
Is well conceiv'd, though not defin'd ;
For, sure, by wit is chiefly meant
Applying well what we invent.
What humour is, not all the tribe
Of logickmongers can describe ;
Here nature only acts her part,
Unhelp'd by practice, books, or art :
For wit and humour differ quite ;
That gives surprise, and this delight.
Humour is odd, grotesque, and wild,
Only by affectation spoil'd ;
'Tis never by invention got,
Men have it when they know it not.

Our conversation to refine,
Humour and wit must both combine :
From both we learn to rally well,
Wherein sometimes the French excel ;
Voiture, in various lights, displays
That irony which turns to praise :
His genius first found out the rule
For an obliging ridicule :
He flatters with peculiar air
The brave, the witty, and the fair :
And fools would fancy he intends
A satire, where he most commends.

But, as a poor pretending beau,
Because he fain would make a show,
Nor can arrive at silver lace,
Takes up with copper in the place :
So the pert dunces of mankind,
Whene'er they would be thought refin'd,
As if the difference lay abstruse
'Twixt raillery and gross abuse ;

To show their parts, will scold and rail,
 Like porters o'er a pot of ale.
 Such is that clan of boisterous bears,
 Always together by the ears;
 Shrewd fellows and arch wags, a tribe
 That meet for nothing but a gibe;
 Who first run one another down,
 And then fall foul on all the town;
 Skill'd in the horselaugh and dry rub,
 And call'd by excellence The Club.
 I mean your Butler, Dawson, Car,
 All special friends, and always jar.

The mettled and the vicious steed
 Differ as little in their breed;
 Nay, Voiture is as like Tom Leigh,
 As rudeness is to repartee.

If what you said I wish unspoke,
 'Twill not suffice it was a joke:
 Reproach not, though in jest, a friend
 For those defects he cannot mend;
 His lineage, calling, shape, or sense,
 If nam'd with scorn, gives just offence.

What use in life to make men fret,
 Part in worse humour than they met?
 Thus all society is lost,
 Men laugh at one another's cost;
 And half the company is teaz'd,
 That came together to be pleas'd:
 For all buffoons have most in view
 To please themselves, by vexing you.

You wonder now to see me write
 So gravely on a subject light;
 Some part of what I here design
 Regards a friend * of yours and mine;

* Dr. Sheridan.

Who,

Who, neither void of sense nor wit,
Yet seldom judges what is fit,
But sallies oft beyond his bounds,
And takes unmeasurable rounds.

When jests are carried on too far,
And the loud laugh begins the war,
You keep your countenance for shame,
Yet still you think your friend to blame:
For, though men cry they love a jest,
'Tis but when others stand the test;
And (would you have their meaning known)
They love a jest that is their own.

You must, although the point be nice,
Bestow your friend some good advice:
One hint from you will set him right,
And teach him how to be polite.
Bid him, like you, observe with care,
Whom to be hard on, whom to spare;
Nor indistinctly to suppose
All subjects like Dan Jackson's nose *.
To study the obliging jest,
By reading those who teach it best;
For prose I recommend Voiture's,
For verse (I speak my judgment) yours.
He'll find the secret out from thence,
To rhyme all day without offence;
And I no more shall then accuse
The flirts of his ill-manner'd Muse.

If he be guilty, you must mend him;
If he be innocent, defend him.

* Which was afterward the subject of several poems by Dr. Swift and others.

A LEFT-HANDED LETTER

TO DR. SHERIDAN*. 1718.

DELANY reports it, and he has a shrewd tongue,
That we both act the part of the clown and the cow-
dung;

We lye cramming ourselves, and are ready to burst,
Yet still are no wiser than we were at first.

Pudet hæc opprobria, I freely must tell ye,

Et dici potuisse, et non potuisse refelli.

Though Delany advis'd you to plague me no longer,
You reply and rejoin like Hoadly of Bangor;

I must now, at one sitting, pay off my old score;
How many to answer? One, two, three, or four.

But, because the three former are long ago past,
I shall, for method sake, begin with the last.

You treat me like a boy that knocks down his foe,
Who, ere t'other gets up, demands the rising blow.
Yet I know a young rogue, that, thrown flat on the field,

Would, as he lay under, cry out, sirrah! yield.

So the French, when our generals soundly did pay them,

Went triumphant to church, and sang stoutly Te Deum.

So the famous Tom Leigh, when quite run aground,
Comes off by outlaughing the company round.

In every vile pamphlet you'll read the same fancies,
Having thus overthrown all our farther advances.

My offers of peate you ill understood:

Friend Sheridan, when will you know your own good?

* The humour of this poem is partly lost, by the impossibility of printing it left-handed as it was written.

'Twas to teach you in moderate language your duty;
For, were you a dog, I could not be rude t' ye:
As a good quiet soul, who no mischief intends
To a quarrelsome fellow, cries, Let us be friends,
But we like Antæus and Hercules fight,
The oftener you fall, the oftener you write;
And I'll use you as he did that overgrown clown,
I'll first take you up, and then take you down:
And, 'tis your own case, for you never can wound
The worst dunce in your school, till he's heav'd from the ground.

I beg your pardon for using my left hand, but I was in great haste, and the other hand was employ'd at the same time in writing some letters of business.—I will send you the rest when I have leisure: but pray come to dinner with the company you met here last.

A MOTTO FOR MR. JASON HASARD,
WOOLLEN-DRAPER IN DUBLIN;
WHOSE SIGN WAS THE GOLDEN FLEECE.

JASON, the valiant prince of Greece,
From Colchos brought the Golden Fleece:
We comb the wool, refine the stuff,
For modern Jasons, that's enough.
O! could we tame yon watchful dragon*,
Old Jason would have less to brag on.

* England.

TO

TO DR. SHERIDAN. 1718.

WHATE'ER your predecessors taught us,
 I have a great esteem for Plautus;
 And think your boys may gather there-hence
 More wit and humour than from Terence;
 But as to comic Aristophanes,
 The rogue too vicious and too prophane is.
 I went in vain to look for Eupolis
 Down in the Strand *, just where the New Pole is;
 For I can tell you one thing, that I can,
 You will not find it in the Vatican.
 He and Cratinus us'd, as Horace says,
 To take his greatest grandees for asses.
 Poets, in those days, us'd to venture high;
 But these are lost full many a century.
 Thus you may see, dear friend, ex pede hence,
 My judgment of the old comedians.

Proceed to tragicks: first, Euripides
 (An author where I sometimes dip a-days)
 Is rightly censur'd by the Stagirite,
 Who says, his numbers do not fadge aright.
 A friend of mine that author despises
 So much, he swears the very best piece is,
 For aught he knows, as bad as Thespis's;
 And that a woman, in these tragedies,
 Commonly speaking, but a sad jade is.
 At least, I'm well assur'd, that no folk lays
 The weight on him they do on Sophocles.

* The fact may not be true; but the rhyme cost me some trouble. SWIFT.

But,

But, above all, I prefer Æschylus,
 Whose moving touches, when they please kill us.
 And now I find my Muse but ill able,
 To hold out longer in trissyllable.
 I chose those rhymes out for their difficulty;
 Will you return as hard ones if I call t' ye?

DR. SHERIDAN TO DR. SWIFT. 1719.

DEAR Dean, since in cruxes and puns you and I deal,
 Pray why is a woman a sieve and a riddle?
 'Tis a thought that came into my noddle this morning,
 In bed as I lay, Sir, a tossing and turning.
 You'll find, if you read but a few of your histories,
 All women, as Eve, all women are mysteries.
 To find out this riddle I know you'll be eager,
 And make every one of the sex a Belphegor.
 But that will not do, for I mean to commend them:
 I swear without jest I an honour intend them.
 In a sieve, sir, their ancient extraction I quite tell,
 In a riddle I give you their power and their title.
 This I told you before: do you know what I mean, sir?
 "Not I, by my troth, sir."—Then read it again, sir.
 The reason I send you these lines of rhymes double
 Is purely through pity, to save you the trouble
 Of thinking two hours for a rhyme as you did last,
 When your Pegasus canter'd in triple, and rid fast.
 As for my little nag, which I keep at Parnassus,
 With Phœbus's leave, to run with his asses,
 He goes slow and sure, and he never is jaded,
 While your fiery steed is whipp'd, spurr'd, bastinaded.

THE

THE DEAN'S ANSWER.

IN reading your letter alone in my hackney,
 Your damnable riddle my poor brains did rack nigh.
 And when with much labour the matter I crackt,
 I found you mistaken in matter of fact.

A woman's no sieve (for with that you begin)
 Because she lets out more than e'er she takes in.
 And that she's a riddle can never be right,
 For a riddle is dark, but a woman is light.
 But, grant her a sieve, I can say something archer;
 Pray what is a man? he's a fine linen searcher.

Now tell me a thing that wants interpretation,
 What name for a maid *, was the first man's damnation?

If your worship will please to explain me this rebus,
 I swear from henceforward you shall be my Phoebus.

From my hackney coach, Sept. 11,
 1719, past 12 at noon.

STELLA'S BIRTH DAY.

March 13, 1718-19.

STELLA this day is thirty-four,
 (We sha'n't dispute a year or more)
 However, Stella, be not troubled,
 Although thy size and years are doubled,

* A damsel, i. e. Adam's Hell.

Since first I saw thee at sixteen,
 The brightest virgin on the green :
 So little is thy form declin'd ;
 Made up so largely in thy mind.

O, would it please the gods to split
 Thy beauty, size, and years, and wit !
 No age could furnish out a pair
 Of nymphs so graceful, wise, and fair ;
 With half the lustre of your eyes,
 With half your wit, your years, and size.
 And then, before it grew too late,
 How should I beg of gentle Fate,
 (That either nymph might have her swain)
 To split my worship too in twain !

STELLA'S BIRTH DAY, 1719-20.

ALL travellers at first incline
 Wheree'er they see the fairest sign :
 And if they find the chambers neat,
 And like the liquor and the meat,
 Will call again, and recommend
 The Angel Inn to every friend.
 What though the painting grows decay'd,
 The house will never lose its trade :
 Nay, though the treacherous tapster Thomas,
 Hangs a new Angel two doors from us,
 As fine as dauber's hands can make it,
 In hopes that strangers may mistake it,
 We think it both a shame and sin
 To quit the true old Angel Inn.

Now

Now this is Stella's case in fact,
An angel's face a little crack'd,
Could poets or could painters fix
How angels look at thirty six :
This drew us in at first to find
In such a form an angel's mind ;
And every virtue now supplies
The fainting rays of Stella's eyes.
See at her levee crowding swains,
Whom Stella freely entertains
With breeding, humour, wit, and sense,
And puts them but to small expense ;
Their mind so plentifully fills,
And makes such reasonable bills,
So little gets for what she gives,
We really wonder how she lives !
And had her stock been less, no doubt
She must have long ago run out.

Then who can think we'll quit the place,
When Doll hangs out a newer face ?
Or stop and light at Cloe's head,
With scraps and leavings to be fed ?

Then, Cloe, still go on to prate
Of thirty-six, and thirty-eight ;
Pursue your trade of scandal-picking,
Your hints, that Stella is no chicken ;
Your innuendoes, when you tell us,
That Stella loves to talk with fellows :
And let me warn you to believe
A truth, for which your soul should grieve ;
That should you live to see the day,
When Stella's locks must all be gray,
When age must print a furrow'd trace
On every feature of her face ;

Though

Though you, and all your senseless tribe,
 Could art, or time, or nature bribe,
 To make you look like Beauty's Queen;
 And hold for ever at fifteen;
 No bloom of youth can ever blind
 The cracks and wrinkles of your mind:
 All men of sense will pass your door,
 And crowd to Stella's at fourscore.

TO STELLA.

Who collected and transcribed his POEMS, 1720:

AS, when a lofty pile is rais'd,
 We never hear the workmen prais'd,
 Who bring the lime, or place the stones,
 But all admire Inigo Jones:
 So, if this pile of scatter'd rhymes
 Should be approv'd in aftertimes;
 If it both pleases and endures,
 The merit and the praise are yours.

Thou, Stella, wert no longer young,
 When first for thee my harp was strung,
 Without one word of Cupid's darts,
 Of killing eyes, or bleeding hearts;
 With Friendship and Esteem possest,
 I ne'er admitted Love a guest.

In all the habitudes of life,
 The friend, the mistress, and the wife,
 Variety we still pursue,
 In pleasure seek for something new;

Or else, comparing with the rest,
Take comfort, that our own is best;
The best we value by the worst,
As tradesmen show their trash at first;
But his pursuits are at an end,
Whom Stella chooses for a friend.

A poet starving in a garret,
Conning all topicks like a parrot,
Invokes his Mistress and his Muse,
And stays at home for want of shoes:
Should but his Muse descending drop
A slice of bread and mutton-chop;
Or kindly, when his credit's out,
Surprise him with a pint of stout;
Or patch his broken stocking-soals,
Or send him in a peck of coals;
Exalted in his mighty mind,
He flies, and leaves the stars behind;
Counts all his labours amply paid,
Adores her for the timely aid.

Or, should a porter make inquiries
For Chloe, Sylvia, Phyllis, Iris;
Be told the lodging, lane, and sign,
The bowers that hold those nymphs divine;
Fair Chloe would perhaps be found
With footmen tippling under ground;
The charming Sylvia beating flax,
Her shoulders mark'd with bloody tracks;
Bright Phyllis mending ragged smocks;
And radiant Iris in the pox.
These are the goddesses enroll'd
In Curll's collection, new and old,
Whose scoundrel fathers would not know 'em,
If they should meet them in a poem.

True

True poets can depress and raise,
Are lords of infamy and praise;
They are not scurrilous in satire,
Nor will in panegyrick flatter.
Unjustly poets we asperse;
Truth shines the brighter clad in verse,
And all the fictions they pursue
Do but insinuate what is true.

Now, should my praises owe their truth,
To beauty, dress, or paint, or youth,
What stoicks call without our power,
They could not be ensur'd an hour:
'Twere grafting on an annual stock,
That must our expectation mock,
And, making one luxuriant shoot,
Die the next year for want of root:
Before I could my verses bring,
Perhaps you're quite another thing.

So Mævius, when he drain'd his skull
To celebrate some suburb trull,
His similes in order set,
And every crambo he could get,
Had gone through all the common places
Worn out by wits, who rhyme on faces,
Before he could his poem close,
The lovely nymph had lost her nose.

Your virtues safely I commend;
They on no accidents depend:
Let malice look with all her eyes,
She dares not say the poet lies.

Stella, when you these lines transcribe,
Lest you should take them for a bribe,
Resolv'd to mortify your pride,
I'll here expose your weaker side.

Your spirits kindle to a flame,
Mov'd with the lightest touch of blame;
And when a friend in kindness tries
To show you where your errour lies,
Conviction does but more incense;
Perverseness is your whole defence;
Truth, judgment, wit, give place to spite,
Regardless both of wrong and right;
Your virtues all suspended wait
Till time has open'd reason's gate;
And, what is worse, your passion bends
Its force against your nearest friends,
Which manners, decency, and pride,
Have taught you from the world to hide;
In vain; for see, your friend has brought
To publick light your only fault;
And yet a fault we often find
Mix'd in a noble generous mind;
And may compare to Ætna's fire,
Which, though with trembling, all admire;
The heat, that makes the summit glow,
Enriching all the vales below.
Those who in warmer climes complain
From Phœbus' rays they suffer pain,
Must own that pain is largely paid
By generous wines beneath a shade.

Yet, when I find your passions rise,
And anger sparkling in your eyes,
I grieve those spirits should be spent,
For nobler ends by nature meant.
One passion, with a different turn,
Makes wit inflame, or anger burn:
So the sun's heat, with different powers,
Ripens the grape, the liquor sours:

Thus

Thus Ajax, when with rage possest
By Pallas breath'd into his breast,
His valour would no more employ,
Which might alone have conquer'd Troy;
But, blinded by resentment, seeks
For vengeance on his friends the Greeks.

You think this turbulence of blood
From stagnating preserves the flood,
Which, thus fermenting by degrees,
Exalts the spirits, sinks the lees.

Stella, for once you reason wrong;
For, should this ferment last too long,
By time subsiding, you may find
Nothing but acid left behind;
From passion you may then be freed,
When peevishness and spleen succeed.
Say, Stella, when you copy next,
Will you keep strictly to the text?
Dare you let these reproaches stand,
And to your failing set your hand?
Or, if these lines your anger fire,
Shall they in baser flames expire?
Whene'er they burn, if burn they must,
They'll prove my accusation just.

TO STELLA.

VISITING ME IN MY SICKNESS, 1720*.

PALLAS, observing Stella's wit
Was more than for her sex was fit,
And that her beauty, soon or late,
Might breed confusion in the state,
In high concern for human kind,
Fix'd honour in her infant mind.

But (not in wranglings to engage With such a stupid vicious age)
If honour I would here define,
It answers faith in things divine.
As natural life the body warms,
And, scholars teach, the soul informs;
So honour animates the whole,
And is the spirit of the soul.

Those numerous virtues, which the tribe
Of tedious moralists describe,
And by such various titles call,
True honour comprehends them all.
Let melancholy rule supreme,
Choler preside, or blood, or phlegm,
It makes no difference in the case,
Nor is complexion honour's place.

But, lest we should for honour take,
The drunken quarrels of a rake;
Or think it seated in a scar,
Or on a proud triumphal car;

* See the verses on her Birthday, 1723-4.

Or in the payment of a debt
 We lose with sharpers at picquet;
 Or when a whore, in her vocation,
 Keeps punctual to an assignation;
 Or that on which his lordship swears,
 When vulgar knaves would lose their ears;
 Let Stella's fair example preach
 A lesson she alone can teach.

In points of honour to be try'd,
 All passions must be laid aside:
 Ask no advice, but think alone;
 Suppose the question not your own.
 How shall I act, is not the case;
 But how would Brutus in my place?
 In such a case would Cato bleed?
 And how would Socrates proceed?

Drive all objections from your mind,
 Else you relapse to human kind:
 Ambition, avarice, and lust,
 A factious rage, and breach of trust,
 And flattery tipt with nauseous flier,
 And guilty shame, and servile fear,
 Envy, and cruelty, and pride,
 Will in your tainted heart preside.

Heroes and heroines of old,
 By honour only were enroll'd
 Among their brethren in the skies,
 To which (though late) shall Stella rise.
 Ten thousand oaths upon record
 Are not so sacred as her word:
 The world shall in its atoms end,
 Ere Stella can deceive a friend.
 By honour seated in her breast
 She still determines what is best:

What indignation in her mind
Against enslavers of mankind !
Base kings, and ministers of state,
Eternal objects of her hate !

She thinks that nature ne'er design'd
Courage to man alone confin'd.
Can cowardice her sex adorn,
Which most exposes ours to scorn ?
She wonders where the charm appears
In Florimel's affected fears ;
For Stella never learn'd the art
At proper times to scream and start ;
Nor calls up all the house at night,
And swears she saw a thing in white,
Doll never flies to cut her lace,
Or throw cold water in her face,
Because she heard a sudden drum,
Or found an earwig in a plum.

Her hearers are amaz'd from whence
Proceeds that fund of wit and sense ;
Which, though her modesty would shroud,
Breaks like the sun behind a cloud ;
While gracefulness its art conceals,
And yet through every motion steals.

Say, Stella, was Prometheus blind,
And, forming you, mistook your kind ?
No ; 'twas for you alone he stole
The fire that forms a manly soul ;
Then, to complete it every way,
He moulded it with female clay :
To that you owe the nobler flame,
To this the beauty of your frame.

How would ingratitude delight,
And how would censure glut her spite,

If

If I should Stella's kindness hide
In silence, or forget with pride!
When on my sickly couch I lay,
Impatient both of night and day,
Lamenting in unmanly strains,
Call'd every power to ease my pains;
Then Stella ran to my relief,
With cheerful face and inward grief;
And, though by Heaven's severe decree
She suffers hourly more than me,
No cruel master could require,
From slaves employ'd for daily hire,
What Stella, by her friendship warm'd,
With vigour and delight perform'd:
My sinking spirits now supplies
With cordials in her hands and eyes;
Now with a soft and silent tread
Unheard she moves about my bed.
I see her taste each nauseous draught,
And so obligingly am caught;
I bless the hand from whence they came,
Nor dare distort my face for shame.

Best pattern of true friends! beware;
You pay too dearly for your care,
If, while your tenderness secures
My life, it must endanger yours;
For such a fool was never found,
Who pull'd a palace to the ground,
Only to have the ruins made
Materials for a house decay'd.

AN ELEGY

ON THE DEATH OF DEMAR, THE USURER;
WHO DIED THE SIXTH OF JULY, 1720.

KNOW all men by these presents, Death the tamer,
By mortgage has secur'd the corpse of Demar :
Nor can four hundred thousand sterling pound
Redeem him from his prison under ground.
His heirs might well, of all his wealth possess'd,
Bestow to bury him one iron chest.
Plutus the god of wealth will joy to know
His faithful steward in the shades below.
He walk'd the streets, and wore a threadbare cloak;
He din'd and supp'd at charge of other folk :
And by his looks, had he held out his palms,
He might be thought an object fit for alms.
So, to the poor if he refus'd his pelf,
He us'd them full as kindly as himself.

Where'er he went, he never saw his betters ;
Lords, knights, and squires, were all his humble
debtors ;

And under hand and seal the Irish nation
Were forc'd to own to him their obligation.

He that could once have half a kingdom bought,
In half a minute is not worth a groat.
His coffers from the coffin could not save,
Nor all his interest keep him from the grave.
A golden monument would not be right,
Because we wish the earth upon him light.

Oh London tavern * ! thou hast lost a friend,
Though in thy walls he ne'er did farthing spend :

* A tavern in Dublin, where Demar kept his office.

He touch'd the pence, when others touch'd the pot;
The hand that sign'd the mortgage paid the shot.

Old as he was, no vulgar known disease
On him could ever boast a power to seize;
“ * But, as he weigh'd his gold, grim Death in spight
“ Cast in his dart, which made three moidores light;
“ And, as he saw his darling money fail,
“ Blew his last breath, to sink the lighter scale.”
He who so long was current, 'twould be strange
If he should now be cry'd down since his change.

The sexton shall green sods on thee bestow;
Alas, the sexton is thy banker now!
A dismal banker must that banker be,
Who gives no bills but of mortality!

EPITAPH ON THE SAME.

BENEATH this verdant hillock lies
Demar †, the wealthy and the wise.
His heirs, that he might safely rest,
Have put his carcase in a chest;
The very chest, in which, they say,
His other self, his money, lay.
And, if his heirs continue kind
To that dear self he left behind,
I dare believe, that four in five
Will think his better half alive.

* These four lines were written by Stella.

† John D'Amory, esq. dying in 1720 without issue, his estates in Ireland went to John, the eldest son of his brother George; and his Dorsetshire estates to Joseph, a younger son, the immediate ancestor of the present earl of Dorchester.

TO MRS. HOUGHTON OF BOURMONT.

Upon praising her Husband to Dr. SWIFT.

YOU always are making a God of your Spouse;
 But this neither Reason nor Conscience allows:
 Perhaps you will say, 'tis in gratitude due,
 And you adore him, because he adores you.
 Your argument's weak, and so you will find;
 For you, by this rule, must adore all mankind.

 VERSES, WRITTEN ON A WINDOW,

AT THE DEANERY HOUSE, ST. PATRICK'S.

ARE the guests of this house still doom'd to be cheated?

Sure, the Fates have decreed they by halves should be treated.

In the days of good John *, if you came here to dine,
 You had choice of good meat, but no choice of good wine.

In Jonathan's reign, if you come here to eat,
 You have choice of good wine, but no choice of good meat.

O Jove! then how fully might all sides be blest,
 Would'st thou but agree to this humble request!
 Put both deans in one; or, if that's too much trouble,
 Instead of the deans, make the deanery double.

* Dean Sterne, lord bishop of Clogher, the predecessor of Swift in the deanery of St. Patrick's, was distinguished for his hospitality.

ON ANOTHER WINDOW*.

A BARD, on whom Phœbus his spirit bestow'd,
 Resolving t' acknowledge the bounty he ow'd,
 Found out a new method at once of confessing,
 And making the most of so mighty a blessing:
 To the God he'd be grateful; but mortals he'd chouse,
 By making his patron preside in his house;
 And wisely foresaw this advantage from thence,
 That the God would in honour bear most of th'
 expense :

So the bard he finds drink, and leaves Phœbus to treat
 With the thoughts he inspires, regardless of meat.
 Hence they, that come hither expecting to dine,
 Are always fobb'd off with sheer wit and sheer wine.

 APOLLO TO THE DEAN. 1720†.

RIGHT trusty, and so forth—we let you to know
 We are very ill us'd by you mortals below.
 For, first, I have often by chemists been told,
 Though I know nothing on 't, it is I that make gold;
 Which when you have got, you so carefully hide it,
 That, since I was born, I hardly have spy'd it.

* These lines were written by Dr. Delany, in conjunction with Stella, and preceded those which here follow them.

† See a poem occasioned by this, called "News from Par-nassus," probably by Dr. Delany, in vol. XVIII of this collection.

Then it must be allow'd, that, whenever I shine,
I forward the grass, and I ripen the vine ;
To me the good fellows apply for relief,
Without whom they could get neither claret nor beef :
Yet their wine and their victuals those curmudgeon
lubbards

Lock up from my sight in cellars and cupboards.
That I have an ill eye, they wickedly think,
And taint all their meat, and sour all their drink.
But, thirdly and lastly, it must be allow'd,
I alone can inspire the poetical crowd :
This is gratefully own'd by each boy in the college,
Whom if I inspire, it is not to my knowledge.
This every pretender to rhyme will admit,
Without troubling his head about judgment or wit.
These gentlemen use me with kindness and freedom,
And as for their works, when I please I may read 'em.
They lie open on purpose on counters and stalls,
And the titles I view, when I shine on the walls.
But a comrade of yours, that traitor Delany,
Whom I for your sake love better than any,
And, of my mere motion and special good grace,
Intended in time to succeed in your place,
On Tuesday the tenth seditiously came
With a certain false traitress, one Stella by name,
To the deanery house, and on the north glass,
Where for fear of the cold I never can pass,
Then and there, vi & armis, with a certain utensil,
Of value five shillings, in English a pencil,
Did maliciously, falsely, and traiterously write,
While Stella aforesaid stood by with a light.
My sister had lately depos'd upon oath,
That she stopt in her course to look at them both :

That

That Stella was helping, abetting, and aiding;
And still, as he writ, stood smiling and reading:
That her eyes were as bright as myself at noonday,
But her graceful black locks were all mingled with gray:

And by the description I certainly know,
'Tis the nymph that I courted some ten years ago;
Whom when I with the best of my talents endued
On her promise of yielding, she acted the prude:
That some verses were writ with felonious intent,
Direct to the north, where I never yet went:
That the letters appear'd revers'd through the pane,
But in Stella's bright eyes they were plac'd right
again:

Wherein she distinctly could read every line,
And presently guess'd that the fancy was mine.
She can swear to the person, whom oft she has seen
At night between Cavan street and College green.
Now you see why his verses so seldom are shown;
The reason is plain, they are none of his own:
And observe while you live, that no man is shy
To discover the goods he came honestly by.
If I light on a thought, he will certainly steal it,
And, when he has got it, find ways to conceal it:
Of all the fine things he keeps in the dark,
There's scarce one in ten but what has my mark;
And let them be seen by the world if he dare,
I'll make it appear that they're all stolen ware.
But as for the poem he writ on your sash,
I think I have now got him under my lash;
My sister transcrib'd it last night to his sorrow,
And the publick shall see it, if I live till to morrow.
Through the zodiack around, it shall quickly be spread
In all parts of the globe where your language is read.

He

He knows very well, I ne'er gave a refusal;
When he ask'd for my aid in the forms that are usual:

But the secret is this; I did lately intend
To write a few verses on you as my friend:
I studied a fortnight, before I could find,
As I rode in my chariot, a thought to my mind,
And resolv'd the next winter (for that is my time,
When the days are at shortest) to get it in rhyme;
Till then it was lock'd in my box at Parnassus;
When that subtle companion, in hopes to surpass us,
Conveys out my paper of hints by a trick,
(For I think in my conscience he deals with Old Nick)
And from my own stock provided with topicks,
He gets to a window beyond both the tropicks,
There out of my sight, just against the north zone,
Writes down my conceits, and then calls them his own;

And you, like a booby, the bubble can swallow:
Now who but Delany can write like Apollo?
High treason by statute! yet here you object,
He only stole hints, but the verse is correct;
Though the thought be Apollo's, 'tis finely express'd;
So a thief steals my horse, and has him well dress'd.
Now, whereas the sad criminal seems past repentance,
We Phœbus think fit to proceed to his sentence.
Since Delany has dar'd, like Prometheus his sire,
To climb to our region, and thence to steal fire;
We order a vulture, in shape of the spleen,
To prey on his liver, but not to be seen.
And we order our subjects of every degree
To believe all his verses were written by me:
And under the pain of our highest displeasure,
To call nothing his but the rhyme and the measure.

And

And lastly, for Stella, just out of her prime,
 I'm too much revenged already by time.
 In return to her scorn, I sent her diseases,
 But will now be her friend whenever she pleases:
 And the gifts I bestow'd her will find her a lover,
 Though she lives till she's gray as a badger all over.

THE RUN UPON THE BANKERS. 1720.

THE bold encroachers on the deep,
 Gain by degrees huge tracts of land,
 Till Neptune, with one general sweep,
 Turns all again to barren strand.

The multitude's capricious pranks,
 Are said to represent the seas;
 Which, breaking bankers and the banks,
 Resume their own whene'er they please.

Money, the life-blood of the nation,
 Corrupts and stagnates in the veins,
 Unless a proper circulation,
 Its motion and its heat maintains.

Because 'tis lordly not to pay,
 Quakers and aldermen in state,
 Like peers, have levees every day
 Of duns attending at their gate.

We want our money on the nail;
 The banker's ruin'd if he pays:
 They seem to act an ancient tale;
 The birds are met to strip the jays.

Riches, the wisest monarch sings,
“ Make pinions for themselves to fly :”
They fly like bats on parchment wings,
And geese their silver plumes supply.

No money left for squandering heirs!
Bills turn the lenders into debtors :
The wish of Nero now is theirs,
“ That they had never known their letters.”

Conceive the works of midnight hags,
Tormenting fools behind their backs :
Thus bankers, o'er their bills and bags,
Sit squeezing images of wax.

Conceive the whole enchantment broke ;
The witches left in open air,
With power no more than other folk,
Expos'd with all their magick ware.

So powerful are a banker's bills,
Where creditors demand their due ;
They break up counters, doors, and tills,
And leave the empty chests in view.

Thus when an earthquake lets in light
Upon the god of gold and Hell,
Unable to endure the sight,
He hides within his darkest cell.

As when a conjurer takes a lease
From Satan for a term of years,
The tenant's in a dismal case,
Whene'er the bloody bond appears.

A baited banker thus desponds,
From his own hand foresees his fall ;
They have his soul, who have his bonds ;
Tis like the writing on the wall.

How

How will the caitiff wretch be scar'd,
 When first he finds himself awake
 At the last trumpet, unprepar'd,
 And all his grand account to make!

For in that universal call,
 Few bankers will to Heaven be mounters;
 They'll cry, "Ye shops, upon us fall!
 "Conceal and cover us, ye counters!"

When other hands the scales shall hold,
 And they, in men's and angels' sight
 Produc'd with all their bills and gold,
 "Weigh'd in the balance, and found light!"

THE DESCRIPTION OF AN IRISH FEAST,

Translated almost literally out of the Original Irish, in the year 1720.

O'ROURK'S noble fare
 Will ne'er be forgot,
 By those who were there,
 Or those who were not.
 His revels to keep,
 We sup and we dine
 On seven score sheep,
 Fat bullocks, and swine.
 Usquebaugh to our feast
 In pails was brought up,
 A hundred at least,
 And a madder * our cup.

* A wooden vessel.

O there is the sport!
 We rise with the light
 In disorderly sort,
 From snoaring all night.

O how was I trick'd!
 My pipe it was broke,
 My pocket was pick'd,
 I lost my new cloak.

I'm rifled, quoth Nell,
 Of mantle and kercher*:
 Why then fare them well,
 The de'el take the searcher.

Come, harper, strike up;
 But, first, by your favour,
 Boy, give us a cup:

Ah! this hath some savour.

O'Rourk's jolly boys
 Ne'er dreamt of the matter,
 'Till, rous'd by the noise,
 And musical clatter.

They bounce from their nest,
 No longer will tarry,
 They rise ready drest,
 Without one Ave-Mary.

They dance in a round,
 Cutting capers and ramping;
 A mercy the ground
 Did not burst with their stamping.

The floor is all wet
 With leaps and with jumps,

* A covering of linen worn on the heads of the women.

While

While the water and sweat
Splish-splash in their pumps.

Bless you late and early,
Laughlin O'Enagin *!

By my hand †, you dance rarely,
Margery Grinagin ‡.

Bring straw for our bed,
Shake it down to the feet,

Then over us spread
The winnowing sheet.

To show I don't flinch,
Fill the bowl up again;

Then give us a pinch
Of your sneezing, a Yean §.

Good Lord! what a sight,
After all their good cheer,

For people to fight
In the midst of their beer!

They rise from their feast,
And hot are their brains,

A cubit at least
The length of their skeans ||.

What stabs and what cuts,
What clattering of sticks;

What strokes on the guts,
What bastings and kicks!

With cudgels of oak,
Well harden'd in flame,

* The name of an Irish man.

† An Irish oath.

‡ The name of an Irish woman.

§ Surname of an Irish woman.

|| Daggers or short swords.

A hundred heads broke,
A hundred struck lame.

You churl, I'll maintain
My father built Lusk,
The castle of Slane,
And Carrick Drumrusk :

The earl of Kildare,
And Moynalta his brother,
As great as they are,
I was nurst by their mother *.

Ask that of old madam ;
She'll tell you who's who,
As far up as Adam,
She knows it is true.

Come down with that beam,
If cudgels are scarce,
A blow on the weam,
Or a kick on the a—se.

AN EXCELLENT NEW SONG,
ON A SEDITIOUS PAMPHLET†, 1720.

To the Tune of "Packington's Pound."

BROCADOES and damasks, and tabbies, and gauzes,
Are by Robert Ballentine lately brought over,
With forty things more : now hear what the law says,
Whoe'er will not wear them, is not the king's lover.

* It is the custom in Ireland to call nurses, foster-mothers ; their husbands, foster-fathers ; and their children, foster-brothers or foster-sisters ; and thus the poorest claim kindred to the richest.

† Proposal for the universal Use of Irish Manufactures, for which Waters the printer was severely prosecuted.

Though

Though a printer and dean
Seditiously mean
Our true Irish hearts from old England to wean;
We'll buy English silks, for our wives and our daughters,
In spite of his deanship, and journeyman Waters.
In England the dead in woollen are clad,
The dean and his printer then let us cry fye on;
To be cloth'd like a carcase, would make a Teague mad,
Since a living dog better is than a dead lion.
Our wives they grow sullen
At wearing of woollen,
And all we poor shopkeepers must our horns pull in.
Then we'll buy English silks, for our wives and our
daughters,
In spite of his deanship, and journeyman Waters.
Whoever our trading with England would hinder,
To inflame both the nations do plainly conspire;
Because Irish linen will soon turn to tinder,
And wool it is greasy, and quickly takes fire,
Therefore I assure ye,
Our noble grand jury,
When they saw the dean's book, they were in a great fury :
They would buy English silks, for their wives and their daughters,
In spite of his deanship, and journeyman Waters.
This wicked rogue Waters, who always is sinning,
And before corum nobis so oft has been call'd,
Henceforward shall print neither pamphlets nor linen,
And, if swearing can do't, shall be swingingly
maul'd :

And as for the dean,
 You know whom I mean,
 If the printer will peach him, he'll scarce come off clean.
 Then we'll buy English silks, for our wives and our
 daughters,
 In spite of his deanship, and journeyman Waters.

THE PROGRESS OF BEAUTY. 1720.

WHEN first Diana leaves her bed,
 Vapours and steams her look disgrace,
 A frowzy dirty-colour'd red
 Sits on her cloudy wrinkled face:
 But, by degrees, when mounted high,
 Her artificial face appears
 Down from her window in the sky,
 Her spots are gone, her visage clears.
 'Twixt earthly females, and the moon,
 All parallels exactly run:
 If Celia should appear too soon,
 Alas, the nymph would be undone!
 To see her from her pillow rise,
 All reeking in a cloudy steam,
 Crack'd lips, foul teeth, and gummy eyes,
 Poor Strephon! how would he blaspheme!
 Three colours, black, and red, and white,
 So graceful in their proper place,
 Remove them to a different site,
 They form a frightful hideous face:

For

For instance, when the lily skips
Into the precincts of the rose,
And takes possession of the lips,
Leaving the purple to the nose:
So Celia went entire to bed,
All her complexion safe and sound;
But, when she rose, white, black, and red,
Though still in sight, had chang'd their ground.
The black, which would not be confin'd,
A more inferiour station seeks,
Leaving the fiery red behind,
And mingles in her muddy cheeks.
But Celia can with ease reduce,
By help of pencil, paint, and brush,
Each colour to its place and use,
And teach her cheeks again to blush.
She knows her early self no more,
But fill'd with admiration stands;
As other painters oft adore
The workmanship of their own hands.
Thus, after four important hours,
Celia's the wonder of her sex:
Say, which among the heavenly powers
Could cause such marvellous effects?
Venus, indulgent to her kind,
Gave women all their hearts could wish,
When first she taught them where to find
White lead and Lusitanian * dish.
Love with white lead cements his wings;
White lead was sent us to repair

* Portugal.

Two brightest, brittlest, earthly things,
A lady's face, and China-ware.

She ventures now to lift the sash ;
The window is her proper sphere :
Ah, lovely nymph ! be not too rash,
Nor let the beaux approach too near.

Take pattern by your sister star :
Delude at once and bless our sight ;
When you are seen, be seen from far,
And chiefly choose to shine by night.

But art no longer can prevail,
When the materials all are gone ;
The best mechanick hand must fail,
Where nothing's left to work upon.

Matter, as wise logicians say,
Cannot without a form subsist ;
And form, say I as well as they,
Must fail, if matter brings no grist.

And this is fair Diana's case ;
For all astrologers maintain,
Each night a bit drops off her face,
When mortals say she's in her wane :

While Partridge * wisely shows the cause
Efficient of the moon's decay,
That Cancer with his poisonous claws
Attacks her in the milky way :

But Gadbury *, in art profound,
From her pale cheeks pretends to show,
That swain Endymion is not found,
Or else that Mercury's her foe.

* Partridge and Gadbury wrote each an ephemeris.

But,

But, let the cause be what it will,
 In half a month she looks so thin,
 That Flamsteed * can, with all his skill,
 See but her forehead and her chin.

Yet, as she wastes, she grows discreet,
 Till midnight never shows her head;
 So rotting Celia strolls the street,
 When sober folks are all abed:

For sure, if this be Luna's fate,
 Poor Celia, but of mortal race,
 In vain expects a longer date
 To the materials of her face.

When Mercury her tresses mows,
 To think of black lead combs is vain;
 No painting can restore a nose,
 Nor will her teeth return again.

Ye powers, who over love preside!
 Since mortal beauties drop so soon,
 If ye would have us well supply'd,
 Send us new nymphs with each new moon!

THE PROGRESS OF POETRY.

THE farmer's goose, who in the stubble
 Has fed without restraint or trouble,
 Grown fat with corn and sitting still,
 Can scarce get o'er the barndoor sill;
 And hardly waddles forth to cool
 Her belly in the neighbouring pool;

* John Flamsteed, the celebrated astronomer royal.

Nor loudly cackles at the door;
For cackling shows the goose is poor.

But, when she must be turn'd to graze,
And round the barren common strays,
Hard exercise and harder fare,
Soon make my dame grow lank and spare:
Her body light, she tries her wings,
And scorns the ground, and upward springs;
While all the parish, as she flies,
Hear sounds harmonious from the skies.

Such is the poet fresh in pay,
The third night's profits of his play;
His morning draughts till noon can swill,
Among his brethren of the quill:
With good roast beef his belly full,
Grown lazy, foggy, fat, and dull,
Deep sunk in plenty and delight,
What poet e'er could take his flight?
Or, stuff'd with phlegm up to the throat,
What poet e'er could sing a note?
Nor Pegasus could bear the load
Along the high celestial road;
The steed, oppress'd, would break his girth,
To raise the lumber from the earth.

But view him in another scene,
When all his drink is Hippocrene,
His money spent, his patrons fail,
His credit out for cheese and ale;
His two-years coat so smooth and bare,
Through every thread it lets in air;
With hungry meals his body pin'd,
His guts and belly full of wind;
And like a jockey for a race,
His flesh brought down to flying case:

Now

Now his exalted spirit loathes
 Encumbrances of food and clothes;
 And up he rises, like a vapour,
 Supported high on wings of paper;
 He singing flies, and flying sings,
 While from below all Grub street rings.

THE SOUTH-SEA PROJECT. 1721.

“ Apparent rari nantes in gurgite vasto,
 “ Arma virum, tabulæque, et Troïa gaza per undas.”

VIRG.

YE wise philosophers, explain
 What magick makes our money rise,
 When dropt into the Southern main;
 Or do these jugglers cheat our eyes?
 Put in your money fairly told;
Presto! be gone — 'Tis here again:
 Ladies and gentlemen, behold,
 Here's every piece as big as ten.
 Thus in a basin drop a shilling,
 Then fill the vessel to the brim;
 You shall observe, as you are filling,
 The ponderous metal seems to swim:
 It rises both in bulk and height,
 Behold it swelling like a sop;
 The liquid medium cheats your sight;
 Behold it mounted to the top!

In stock three hundred thousand pounds;
I have in view a lord's estate;
My manors all contiguous round;
A coach and six, and serv'd in plate!

Thus, the deluded bankrupt raves;
Puts all upon a desperate bet;
Then plunges in the Southern waves,
Dipt over head and ears — in debt.

So, by a calenture misled,
The mariner with rapture sees,
On the smooth ocean's azure bed,
Enamell'd fields and verdant trees:

With eager haste he longs to rove
In that fantastick scene, and thinks
It must be some enchanted grove;
And in he leaps, and down he sinks.

Five hundred chariots just bespoke,
Are sunk in these devouring waves,
The horses drown'd, the harness broke,
And here the owners find their graves.

Like Pharaoh, by directors led;
They with their spoils went safe before;
His chariots, tumbling out the dead,
Lay shatter'd on the Red Sea shore.

Rais'd up on Hope's aspiring plumes,
The young adventurer o'er the deep
An eagle's flight and state assumes,
And scorns the middle way to keep.

On paper wings he takes his flight,
With wax the father bound them fast;
The wax is melted by the height,
And down the towering boy is cast.

A mo-

A moralist might here explain
The rashness of the Cretan youth ;
Describe his fall into the main,
And from a fable form a truth.

His wings are his paternal rent,
He melts the wax at every flame ;
His credit sunk, his money spent,
In Southern Seas he leaves his name.

Inform us, you that best can tell,
Why in that dangerous gulf profound,
Where hundreds and where thousands fell,
Fools chiefly float, the wise are drown'd ?

So have I seen from Severn's brink
A flock of geese jump down together :
Swim, where the bird of Jove would sink,
And, swimming, never wet a feather.

But, I affirm, 'tis false in fact,
Directors better knew their tools ;
We see the nation's credit crack'd,
Each knave has made a thousand fools.

One fool may from another win,
And then get off with money stor'd ;
But, if a sharper once comes in,
He throws at all, and sweeps the board.

As fishes on each other prey,
The great ones swallowing up the small ;
So fares it in the Southern Sea ;
The whale directors eat up all.

When stock is high, they come between,
Making by second-hand their offers ;
Then cunningly retire unseen,
With each a million in his coffers.

So,

So, when upon a moonshine night
An ass was drinking at a stream;
A cloud arose, and stopt the light,
By intercepting every beam:

The day of judgment will be soon,
Cries out a sage among the crowd;
An ass has swallow'd up the moon!
The moon lay safe behind the cloud.

Each poor subscriber to the sea
Sinks down at once, and there he lies;
Directors fall as well as they,
Their fall is but a trick to rise.

So fishes, rising from the main,
Can soar with moisten'd wings on high;
The moisture dry'd, they sink again,
And dip their fins again to fly.

Undone at play, the female troops
Come here their losses to retrieve;
Ride o'er the waves in spacious hoops,
Like Lapland witches in a sieve.

Thus Venus to the sea descends,
As poets feign; but where's the moral?
It shows the Queen of Love intends
To search the deep for pearl and coral.

The sea is richer than the land,
I heard it from my grannam's mouth,
Which now I clearly understand;
For by the sea she meant the South.

Thus by directors we are told,
“ Pray, gentlemen, believe your eyes;
“ Our ocean's cover'd o'er with gold,
“ Look round, and see how thick it lies :

“ We

“ We, gentlemen, are your assisters,
“ We’ll come, and hold you by the chin.—”

Alas ! all is not gold that glisters,
Ten thousand sink by leaping in.

O ! would those patriots be so kind,
Here in the deep to wash their hands,
Then, like Pactolus, we should find
The sea indeed had golden sands.

A shilling in the bath you fling,
The silver takes a nobler hue,
By magick virtue in the spring,
And seems a guinea to your view.

But, as a guinea will not pass
At market for a farthing more,
Shown through a multiplying glass,
Than what it always did before :

So cast it in the Southern seas,
Or view it through a jobber’s bill ;
Put on what spectacles you please,
Your guinea’s but a guinea still.

One night a fool into a brook
Thus from a hillock looking down,
The golden stars for guineas took,
And silver Cynthia for a crown.

The point he could no longer doubt ;
He ran, he leapt into the flood :
There sprawl’d a while, and scarce got out,
All cover’d o’er with slime and mud.

“ Upon the water cast thy bread,
“ And after many days thou’lt find it ;”
But gold, upon this ocean spread,
Shall sink, and leave no mark behind it :

There is a gulf, where thousands fell,
Here all the bold adventurers came,
A narrow sound, though deep as Hell
Change Alley is the dreadful name.

Nine times a day it ebbs and flows,
Yet he that on the surface lies,
Without a pilot seldom knows
The time it falls, or when 'twill rise.

Subscribers here by thousands float,
And jostle one another down;
Each paddling in his leaky boat,
And here they fish for gold, and drown.

“ * Now bury'd in the depth below,
“ Now mounted up to Heaven again,
“ They reel and stagger to and fro,
“ At their wits end, like drunken men.”

Mean time, secure on Garraway † cliffs,
A savage race by shipwrecks fed,
Lie waiting for the founder'd skiffs,
And strip the bodies of the dead.

But these, you say, are factious lies,
From some malicious tory's brain;
For, where directors get a prize,
The Swiss and Dutch whole millions drain.

Thus, when by rooks a lord is ply'd,
Some cully often wins a bet,
By venturing on the cheating side,
Though not into the secret let.

* Psalm cvii.

† A coffee house in Change alley.

While some build castles in the air,
Directors build them in the seas;
Subscribers plainly see them there,
For fools will see as wise men please.

Thus oft by mariners are shown
(Unless the men of Kent are liars)
Earl Godwin's castles overflown,
And palace roofs, and steeple spires.

Mark where the sly directors creep,
Nor to the shore approach too nigh!
The monsters nestle in the deep,
To seize you in your passing by.

Then, like the dogs of Nile, be wise,
Who, taught by instinct how to shun
The crocodile, that lurking lies,
Run as they drink, and drink and run.

Antæus could, by magick charms,
Recover strength whene'er he fell;
Alcides held him in his arms,
And sent him up in air to Hell.

Directors, thrown into the sea,
Recover strength and vigour there;
But may be tam'd another way,
Suspended for a while in air.

Directors! for 'tis you I warn,
By long experience we have found
What planet rul'd when you were born;
We see you never can be drown'd.

Beware, nor overbulky grow,
Nor come within your cullies' reach;
For, if the sea should sink so low
To leave you dry upon the beach,

You'll owe your ruin to your bulk:
 Your foes already waiting stand,
 To tear you like a founder'd hulk,
 While you lie helpless on the sand

Thus, when a whale has lost the tide,
 The coasters crowd to seize the spoil;
 The monster into parts divide,
 And strip the bones, and melt the oil.

O! may some western tempest sweep
 These locusts whom our fruits have fed,
 That plague, directors, to the deep,
 Driv'n from the South Sea to the Red.

May he, whom Nature's laws obey,
 Who lifts the poor, and sinks the proud,
 "Quiet the raging of the sea,
 "And still the madness of the crowd!"

But never shall our isle have rest,
 Till those devouring swine run down,
 (The devils leaving the posset)
 And headlong in the waters drown.

The nation then too late will find,
 Computing all their cost and trouble,
 Directors promises but wind,
 South Sea at best a mighty bubble.

TO A FRIEND,

WHO HAD BEEN MUCH ABUSED IN MANY DIFFERENT LIBELS.

THE greatest monarch may be stabb'd by night,
And fortune help the murderer in his flight;
The vilest ruffian may commit a rape,
Yet safe from injur'd innocence escape;
And Calumny, by working under ground,
Can, unreveng'd, the greatest merit wound.

What's to be done? Shall Wit and Learning choose
To live obscure, and have no fame to lose?
By Censure frighted out of Honour's road,
Nor dare to use the gifts by Heaven bestow'd?
Or fearless enter in through Virtue's gate,
And buy distinction at the dearest rate?

EPIGRAM.

GREAT folks are of a finer mould;
Lord! how politely they can scold!
While a coarse English tongue will itch,
For whore and rogue; and dog and bitch.

P R O L O G U E *

TO A PLAY FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE DISTRESSED WEAVERS.

BY DR. SHERIDAN.

Spoken by Mr. ELRINGTON. 1721.

GREAT cry and little wool—is now become
The plague and proverb of the weaver's loom:
No wool to work on, neither west nor warp;
Their pockets empty, and their stomachs sharp.
Provok'd, in loud complaints to you they cry:
Ladies, relieve the weavers: or they die!
Forsake your silks for stuffs; nor think it strange,
To shift your clothes, since you delight in change.
One thing with freedom I'll presume to tell—
The men will like you every bit as well.

See I am dress'd from top to toe in stuff;
And, by my troth, I think I'm fine enough:
My wife admires me more, and swears she never,
In any dress, beheld me look so clever.
And if a man be better in such ware,
What great advantage must it give the fair!
Our wool from lambs of innocence proceeds:
Silks come from maggots, calicoes from weeds:
Hence 'tis by sad experience that we find
Ladies in silks to vapours much inclin'd —
And what are they but maggots in the mind?

* An answer to this Prologue and Epilogue is printed in the Works of Concanen.

For which I think it reason to conclude
 That clothes may change our temper like our food.
 Chintses are gawdy, and engage our eyes
 Too much about the partycolour'd dyes :
 Although the lustre is from you begun,
 We see the rainbow, and neglect the sun.

How sweet and innocent's the country maid,
 With small expense in native wool array'd ;
 Who copies from the fields her homely green,
 While by her shepherd with delight she's seen !
 Should our fair ladies dress like her in wool,
 How much more lovely, and how beautiful,
 Without their Indian drapery, they'd prove !
 While wool would help to warm us into love !
 Then, like the famous Argonauts of Greece,
 We'd all contend to gain the Golden Fleece !

EPILOGUE, BY THE DEAN.

SPOKEN BY MR. GRIFFITH.

WHO dares affirm this is no pious age,
 When charity begins to tread the stage ?
 When actors, who, at best, are hardly savers,
 Will give a night of benefit to weavers ?
 Stay—let me see, how finely will it sound !
Imprimis, From his grace * a hundred pound.
 Peers, clergy, gentry, all are benefactors ;
 And then comes in the item of the actors.
Item, The actors freely give a day—
 The poet had no more who made the play

* Abp. King.

But whence this wondrous charity in players?
 They learn it not at sermons, or at prayers:
 Under the rose, since here are none but friends,
 (To own the truth) we have some private ends.
 Since waiting-women, like exacting jades,
 Hold up the prices of their old brocades;
 We'll dress in manufactures made at home;
 Equip our kings and generals at the Comb*.
 We'll rig from Meath street Ægypt's haughty queen,
 And Antony shall court her in ratteen.
 In blue shalloon shall Hannibal be clad,
 And Scipio trail an Irish purple plaid.
 In drugget drest, of thirteen pence a yard,
 See Philip's son amid his Persian guard;
 And proud Roxana, fir'd with jealous rage,
 With fifty yards of crape shall sweep the stage.
 In short, our kings and princesses within
 Are all resolv'd this project to begin;
 And you, our subjects, when you here resort,
 Must imitate the fashion of the court.

O! could I see this audience clad in stuff,
 Though money's scarce, we should have trade enough:
 But chints, brocades, and lace, take all away,
 And scarce a crown is left to see the play.
 Perhaps you wonder whence this friendship springs
 Between the weavers and us playhouse kings;
 But wit and weaving had the same beginning;
 Pallas first taught us poetry and spinning:
 And, next, observe how this alliance fits,
 For weavers now are just as poor as wits:
 Their brother quillmen, workers for the stage,
 For sorry stuff can get a crown a page;

* A street famous for woollen manufactures.

But

But weavers will be kinder to the players,
 And sell for twenty pence a yard of theirs.
 And, to your knowledge, there is often less in
 The poet's wit, than in the player's dressing.

THE COUNTRY LIFE.

PART OF A SUMMER SPENT AT GAULSTOWN HOUSE,
 THE SEAT OF GEORGE ROCHFORD, ESQ.

THALIA, tell in sober lays,
 How George *, Nim †, Dan ‡, Dean §, pass their days;
 And, should our Gaulstown's art grow fallow,
 Yet Neget quis carmina Gallo?
 Here (by the way) by Gallus mean I 5
 Not Sheridan, but friend Delany.
 Begin, my Muse. First from our bowers
 We sally forth at different hours;
 At seven the Dean, in night-gown drest,
 Goes round the house to wake the rest; 10
 At nine, grave Nim and George facetious
 Go to the Dean, to read Lucretius;
 At ten, my Lady comes and hectors,
 And kisses George, and ends our lectures;
 And when she has him by the neck fast, 15
 Hals him, and scolds us down to breakfast.
 We squander there an hour or more,
 And then all hands, boys, to the oar;

* Mr. Rochfort.

† His brother, Mr. John Rochfort; who was called Nimrod, from his great attachment to the chace.

‡ Rev. Daniel Jackson.

§ Dr. Swift.

All,

All, heteroclite Dan except,
 Who neither time nor order kept, 20
 But, by peculiar whimsies drawn,
 Peeps in the ponds to look for spawn;
 O'ersees the work, or Dragon * rows,
 Or mars a text, or mends his hose;
 Or—but proceed we in our journal — 25
 At two, or after, we return all:
 From the four elements assembling,
 Warn'd by the bell, all folks come trembling †:
 From airy garrets some descend,
 Some from the lake's remotest end: 30
 My lord ‡ and dean the fire forsake,
 Dan leaves the earthy spade and rake:
 The loiterers quake, no corner hides them,
 And lady Betty soundly chides them.
 Now water's brought, and dinner's done: 35
 With "Church and King" the ladies gone:
 Not reckoning half an hour we pass
 In talking o'er a moderate glass.
 Dan, growing drowsy, like a thief
 Steals off to dose away his beef; 40
 And this must pass for reading Hamond —
 While George and Dean go to backgammon.
 George, Nim, and Dean, set out at four,
 And then again, boys, to the oar.
 But when the sun goes to the deep 45
 (Not to disturb him in his sleep,

* A small boat so called.

† The dean has been censured, on an idle supposition of this passage being an allusion to the day of judgment.

‡ Mr. Rochfort's father was lord chief baron of the exchequer in Ireland,

Or

Or make a rumbling o'er his head,
 His candle out, and he abed)
 We watch his motions to a minute,
 And leave the flood when he goes in it. 50

Now stinted in the shortening day,
 We go to prayers, and then to play,
 Till supper comes; and after that
 We sit an hour to drink and chat.

'Tis late — the old and younger pairs, 55
 By Adam * lighted, walk up stairs.

The weary Dean goes to his chamber;
 And Nim and Dan to garret clamber.
 So when the circle we have run,
 The curtain falls, and all is done. 60

I might have mention'd several facts,
 Like episodes between the acts;
 And tell who loses and who wins,
 Who gets a cold, who breaks his shins;
 How Dan caught nothing in his net, 65
 And how the boat was overset.

For brevity I have retrench'd
 How in the lake the dean was drench'd:
 It would be an exploit to brag on,
 How valiant George rode o'er the Dragon; 70
 How steady in the storm he sat,
 And sav'd his oar, but lost his hat:

How Nim (no hunter e'er could match him)
 Still brings us hares, when he can catch 'em:
 How skilfully Dan mends his nets; 75
 How fortune fails him when he sets;
 Or how the Dean delights to vex
 The ladies, and lampoon their sex:

* The butler.

I might have told how oft dean Percival
 Displays his pedantry unmerciful, 80
 How haughtily he cocks his nose,
 To tell what every schoolboy knows :
 And with his finger and his thumb,
 Explaining, strikes opposers dumb :
 But now there needs no more be said on 't, 85
 Nor how his wife, that female pedant,
 Shows all her secrets of housekeeping ;
 For candles how she trucks her dripping ;
 Was forc'd to send three miles for yeast,
 To brew her ale, and raise her paste ; 90
 Tells every thing that you can think of,
 How she cur'd Charly of the chin cough ;
 What gave her bráts and pigs the measles,
 And how her doves were kill'd by weasles ;
 How Jowler howl'd, and what a fright 95
 She had with dreams the other night.

But now, since I have gone so far on,
 A word or two of lord chief baron ;
 And tell how little weight he sets
 On all whig papers and gazettes ; 100
 But for the politicks of Pue,
 Thinks every syllable is true.
 And since he owns the king of Sweden
 Is dead at last, without evading,
 Now all his hopes are in the czar : 105
 " Why, Muscovy is not so far :
 " Down the Black Sea, and up the Straits,
 " And in a month he 's at your gates ;
 " Perhaps, from what the packet brings,
 " By Christmas we shall see strange things." 110

* See the dean's letter to Mr. Cope, Oct. 9, 1722.

Why should I tell of ponds and drains,
 What carps we met with for our pains;
 Of sparrows tam'd, and nuts innumerable
 To choke the girls, and to consume a rabble?
 But you, who are a scholar, know 115
 How transient all things are below,
 How prone to change is human life!
 Last night arriv'd Clem* and his wife —
 This grand event has broke our measures;
 Their reign began with cruel seizures: 120
 The dean must with his quilt supply
 The bed in which those tyrants lie:
 Nim lost his wig block, Dan his jordan,
 (My lady says, she can't afford one)
 George is half scar'd out of his wits, 125
 For Clem gets all the dainty bits.
 Henceforth expect a different survey,
 This house will soon turn topsyturvy:
 They talk of farther alterations,
 Which causes many speculations. 130

GEORGE-NIM-DAN-DEAN'S ANSWER.

DEAR Sheridan! a gentle pair
 Of Gaulstown lads (for such they are)
 Beside a brace of grave divines,
 Adore the smoothness of thy lines:
 Smooth as our basin's silver flood,
 Ere George had robb'd it of its mud;

* Dr. James Stopford, afterward bishop of Cloyne.

Smoother than Pegasus' old shoe,
 Ere Vulcan comes to make him new.
 The board on which we set our a—s
 Is not so smooth as are thy verses;
 Compar'd with which (and that's enough)
 A smoothing iron itself is rough.
 Nor praise I less that circumcision,
 By modern poets call'd elision,
 With which, in proper station plac'd,
 Thy polish'd lines are firmly brac'd.
 Thus a wise tailor is not pinching,
 But turns at every seam an inch in;
 Or else, be sure, your broad-cloth breeches
 Will ne'er be smooth, nor hold their stitches.
 Thy verse, like bricks, defy the weather,
 When smooth'd by rubbing them together;
 Thy words so closely wedg'd and short are
 Like walls, more lasting without mortar;
 By leaving out the needless vowels,
 You save the charge of lime and trowels.
 One letter still another locks,
 Each groov'd and dovetail'd like a box;
 Thy Muse is tuckt up and succinct;
 In chains thy syllables are linkt;
 Thy words together ty'd in small hanks,
 Close as the Macedonian phalanx;
 Or like the umbo of the Romans,
 Which fiercest foes could break by no means.
 The critick to his grief will find,
 How firmly these indentures bind.
 So, in the kindred painter's art,
 The shortening is the nicest part.
 Philologers of future ages,
 How will they pore upon thy pages!

Nor

Nor will they dare to break the joints,
 But help thee to be read with points :
 Or else, to show their learned labour, you
 May backward be perus'd like Hebrew,
 In which they need not lose a bit
 Or of thy harmony or wit.
 To make a work completely fine,
 Number and weight and measure join ;
 Then all must grant your lines are weighty,
 Where thirty weigh as much as eighty ;
 All must allow your numbers more,
 Where twenty lines exceed fourscore ;
 Nor can we think your measure short,
 Where less than forty fill a quart,
 With Alexandrian in the close,
 Long, long, long, long, like Dan's long nose.

GEORGE-NIM-DAN-DEAN'S * INVITATION TO THOMAS SHERIDAN.

Gaulstown, Aug. 2, 1721.

DEAR Tom, this verse, which however the beginning may appear, yet in the end's good metre, Is sent to desire that, when your August vacation comes, your friends you'd meet here.

For

* In 1721, Dr. Swift, Dr. Delany, Dr. Sheridan, Dr. Stopford, the reverend Dan Jackson, and some other company, spent a great part of the summer at Gaulstown, in the county of Westmeath, the seat of George Rochfort, esq. father to the present earl of Belvidere. Many of the gentlemen assembled in this

For why should you stay in the filthy hole, I mean the city so smoky,

When you have not one friend left in town, or at least not one that's witty, to joke w' ye?

For as for honest John*, though I'm not sure on't, yet I'll be hang'd, lest he

Be gone down to the county of Wexford with that great peer the lord Anglesey.

O! but I forgot; perhaps, by this time, you may have one come to town, but I don't know whether he be friend or foe, Delany:

But, however, if he be come, bring him down, and you shall go back in a fortnight, for I know there's no delaying ye.

O! I forgot too; I believe there may be one more,
I mean that great fat joker, friend Helsham, he
That wrote the prologue†, and if you stay with him, depend on't, in the end, he'll sham ye.

Bring down Long Shanks Jim‡ too; but, now I think on't, he's not yet come from Courtown§,
I fancy;

For I heard, a month ago, that he was down there a courting sly Nancy.

this groupe had a genius for poetry, and a taste for the polite arts. In this retirement they passed their hours very agreeably, and frequently amused themselves with poetical jest and whimsies
of the brain, of which some slight specimens are here preserved.
See Dr. Delany's humourous description of Gaulstown House, in vol. XVIII. of this collection.

* Supposed to mean Dr. Walmsley.

† One spoken by young Putland, in 1720, before Hippolytus; in which Dr. Sheridan (who had written a prologue for the occasion) was most unexpectedly and egregiously laughed at.

‡ Dr. James Stopford, bishop of Cloyne.

§ The seat of ——— Hussay, esq. in the county of Kildare.

However, bring down yourself, and you bring down
all; for, to say it we may venture,
In thee Delany's spleen, John's mirth, Helsham's jokes, and the soft soul of amorous Jemmy, centre*.

POSTSCRIPT.

I had forgot to desire you to bring down what I say you have, and you'll believe me as sure as a gun, and own it;

I mean, what no other mortal in the universe can boast of, your own spirit of pun, and own wit.

And now I hope you'll excuse this rhyming, which I must say is (though written somewhat at large) trim and clean;

And so I conclude, with humble respects as usual,
Your most dutiful and obedient

GEORGE-NIM-DAN-DEAN.

* This Invitation seems to have been the joint composition of George Rochfort, John Rochfort (who was called Nim, or Nimrod, by Dr. Swift, because he was fond of hunting), Dan Jackson, and Dr. Swift, in a vein of whim and merriment; and, in all probability, was sent off directly by the post to Sheridan. A letter from Dr. Sheridan, July 15, 1721, addressed to George-Nim-Dan-Dean, esq. seems to have suggested the hint.

TO GEORGE-NIM-DAN-DEAN, ESQ.

UPON HIS INCOMPARABLE VERSES, &c.

BY DR. DELANY, IN SHERIDAN'S NAME *.

HAIL, human compound quadrifarious,
Invincible as wight Briareus !

Hail ! doubly-doubled mighty merry one,
Stronger than triple-body'd Geryon !

O may your vastness deign t' excuse
The praises of a puny Muse.

Unable, in her utmost flight,
To reach thy huge colossian height.

T' attempt to write like thee were frantick,
Whose lines are, like thyself, gigantick.

Yet let me bless, in humbler strain,
Thy vast, thy bold Cambysian vein,
Pour'd out t' enrich thy native isle,
As Egypt wont to be with Nile.

O, how I joy to see thee wander,
In many a winding loose meander,
In circling mazes, smooth and supple,
And ending in a clink quadruple ;

Loud, yet agreeable withal,
Like rivers rattling in their fall !

Thine, sure, is poetry divine,
Where wit and majesty combine ;

Where every line, as huge as seven,
If stretch'd in length, would reach to Heaven :
Here all comparing would be slandering,
The least is more than Alexandrine.

* These were written all in circles.

Against thy verse Time sees with pain,
He whets his envious sithe in vain;
For, though from thee he much may pare,
Yet much thou still wilt have to spare.

Thou hast alone the skill to feast
With Roman elegance of taste,
Who hast of rhymes as vast resources
As Pompey's caterer of courses.

O thou, of all the Nine inspir'd!
My languid soul, with teaching tir'd,
How is it raptur'd, when it thinks
On thy harmonious set of clinks;
Each answering each in various rhymes,
Like Echo to St. Patrick's chimes!

Thy Muse, majestick in her rage,
Moves like Statira on the stage;
And scarcely can one page sustain
The length of such a flowing train:
Her train, of variegated die,
Shows like Thaumantia's in the sky;
Alike they glow, alike they please,
Alike imprest by Phœbus' rays.

Thy verse—(Ye Gods! I cannot bear it)
To what, to what shall I compare it?
'Tis like, what I have oft heard spoke on,
The famous statue of Laocoon.
'Tis like, — O yes, 'tis very like it,
The long, long string, with which you fly kite.
'Tis like what you, and one or two more,
Roar to your Echo* in good humour;
And every couplet thou hast writ
Concludes like Rattah-whittah-whit†.

* At Gaulstown, there is a remarkably famous echo.

† An allusion to the sound produced by the echo.

TO MR. THOMAS SHERIDAN.

UPON HIS VERSES WRITTEN IN CIRCLES.

BY DR. SWIFT.

IT never was known that circular letters,
 By humble companions, were sent to their betters:
 And, as to the subject, our judgment, meberc'le,
 Is this, that you argue like fools in a circle.
 But now for your verses; we tell you, imprimis,
 The segment so large 'twixt your reason and rhyme is,
 That we walk all about, like a horse in a pound,
 And, before we find either, our noddles turn round, Sufficient it were, one would think, in your mad
 rant,

To give us your measures of line by a quadrant,
 But we took our dividers, and found your d—n'd metre,

In each single verse, took up a diameter.
 But how, Mr. Sheridan, came you to venture George, Dan, Dean, and Nim, to place in the centre * ?

'Twill appear, to your cost, you are fairly trepann'd,
 For the chord of your circle is now in their hand.
 The chord, or the radius, it matters not whether,
 By which your jade Pegasus, fixt in a tether,
 As her betters are us'd, shall be lash'd round the ring,
 Three fellows with whips, and the dean holds the string.

Will Hancock declares, you are out of your compass,
 To encroach on his art by writing of bombast;

* Their figures were in the centre of the verses.

And has taken just now a firm resolution
To answer your style without circumlocution.

Lady Betty* presents you her service most humble,
And is not afraid your worship will grumble,
That she makes of your verses a hoop for miss Tam†,
Which is all at present; and so I remain —

“ Make

" Make one work immortal : 'tis all I request."
 Apollo look'd pleas'd ; and, resolving to jest,
 Reply'd, " Honest friend, I've consider'd thy case :
 " Nor dislike thy well-meaning and humourous face.
 " Thy petition I grant : the boon is not great ;
 " Thy works shall continue ; and here's the receipt.
 " On rondeaus hereafter thy fiddlestrings spend :
 " Write verses in circles : they never shall end."

ON DAN JACKSON'S PICTURE, CUT IN SILK AND PAPER.

TO fair lady Betty* Dan sat for his picture,
 And defy'd her to draw him so oft as he piqu'd her.
 He knew she'd no pencil or colouring by her,
 And therefore he thought he might safely defy her.
 Come sit, says my lady ; then whips up her scissar,
 And cuts out his coxcomb in silk in a trice, sir.
 Dan sat with attention, and saw with surprise
 How she lengthen'd his chin, how she hollow'd his eyes ;
 But flatter'd himself with a secret conceit,
 That his thin lantern jaws all her art would defeat.
 Lady Betty observ'd it, then pulls out a pin,
 And varies the grain of the stuff to his grin :
 And, to make roasted silk to resemble his raw bone,
 She rais'd up a thread to the jet of his jaw bone ;
 Till at length in exactest proportion he rose,
 From the crown of his head to the arch of his nose ;

* The wife of George Rochfort, esq.

And if lady Betty had drawn him with wig and all,
'Tis certain the copy had outdone the original.

Well, that's but my outside, says Dan with a vapour,

Say you so, says my lady; I've lin'd it with paper.

PATR. DELANY, sculp.

ON THE SAME PICTURE.

CLARISSA draws her scissars from the case
To draw the lines of poor Dan Jackson's face.
One sloping cut made forehead, nose, and chin,
A nick produc'd a mouth, and made him grin,
Such as in tailor's measure you have seen. }
But still were wanting his grimalkin eyes,
For which gray worsted stocking paint supplies.
Th' unravel'd thread through needle's eye convey'd
Transferr'd itself into his pasteboard head.
How came the scissars to be thus outdone?
The needle had an eye, and they had none.
O wondrous force of art! now look at Dan —
You'll swear the pasteboard was the better man.
“The devil! says he, the head is not so full!”
Indeed it is—behold the paper skull.

THO. SHERIDAN, sculp.

ON THE SAME PICTURE.

DAN'S evil genius in a trice
 Had stripp'd him of his coin at dice.
 Chloe, observing this disgrace,
 On Pam cut out his rueful face.
 By G—, says Dan, 'tis very hard,
 Cut out at dice, cut out at card !

G. ROCHFORD, sculp.

ON THE SAME PICTURE.

WHILST you three merry poets traffick
 To give us a description graphick
 Of Dan's large nose in modern sapphick ;
 I spend my time in making sermons,
 Or writing libels on the Germans,
 Or murmuring at whigs' preferments.
 But when I would find rhyme for Rochfort,
 And look in English, French, and Scotch for 't,
 At last I'm fairly forc'd to botch for 't.
 Bid lady Betty recollect her,
 And tell, who was it could direct her
 To draw the face of such a spectre ?
 I must confess, that as to me, sirs,
 Though I ne'er saw her hold the scissars,
 I now could safely swear it is hers.

'Tis

'Tis true, no nose could come in better;
'Tis a vast subject stuff'd with matter,
Which all may handle, none can flatter.

Take courage, Dan; this plainly shows,
That not the wisest mortal knows
What fortune may befall his nose.

Show me the brightest Irish toast,
Who from her lover e'er could boast
Above a song or two at most;

For thee three poets now are drudging all,
To praise the cheeks, chin, nose, the bridge and all,
Both of the picture and original.

Thy nose's length and fame extend
So far, dear Dan, that every friend
Tries, who shall have it by the end.

And future poets, as they rise,
Shall read with envy and surprise
Thy nose outshining Cælia's eyes.

JON. SWIFT.

DAN JACKSON'S DEFENCE.

"My verse little better you'll find than my face is,
"A word to the wise—ut pictura poësis."

THREE merry lads, with envy stung,
Because Dan's face is better hung,
Combin'd in verse to rhyme it down,
And in its place set up their own;

As

As if they 'd run it down much better
By number of their feet in metre,
Or that its red did cause their spite,
Which made them draw in black and white.
Be that as 'twill, this is most true,
They were inspir'd by what they drew.
Let then such criticks know, my face
Gives them their comeliness and grace :
While every line of face does bring
A line of grace to what they sing.
But yet, methinks, though with disgrace
Both to the picture and the face,
I should name them who do rehearse
The story of the picture farce ;
The squire, in French as hard as stone,
Or strong as rock, that's all as one,
On face on cards is very brisk, sirs.
Because on them you play at whisk, sirs,
But much I wonder, why my crany
Should envy'd be by De-el-any :
And yet much more, that half-namesake
Should join a party in the freak,
For sure I am it was not safe
Thus to abuse his better half,
As I shall prove you, Dan, to be,
Divisim and conjunctively.
For if Dan love not Sherry, can
Sherry be any thing to Dan ?
This is the case whene'er you see
Dan makes nothing of Sherry ;
Or should Dan be by Sherry o'erta'en,
Then Dan would be poor Sherridane ;
'Tis hard then he should be decry'd
By Dan with Sherry by his side.

But,

But, if the case must be so hard,
 That faces suffer by a card,
 Let criticks censure, what care I?
 Backbiters only we defy,
 Faces are free from injury.

MR. ROCHFORD'S REPLY.

YOU say your face is better hung
 Than ours—by what? by nose or tongue?
 In not explaining, you are wrong to us, sir.

Because we thus must state the case,
 That you have got a hanging face,
 Th' untimely end's a damn'd disgrace of noose, sir.

But yet be not cast down: I see
 A weaver will your hangman be;
 You'll only hang in tapestry with many:

And then the ladies, I suppose,
 Will praise your longitude of nose,
 For latent charms within your clothes,
 dear Danny.

Thus will the fair of every age
 From all parts make their pilgrimage,
 Worship thy nose with pious rage of love, sir:

All

All their religion will be spent
About thy woven monument,
And not one orison be sent to Jove, sir.

You the fam'd idol will become,
As gardens grac'd in ancient Rome,
By matrons worship'd in the gloom of night :

O happy Dan ! thrice happy sure !
Thy fame for ever shall endure,
Who after death can love secure at sight.

So far I thought it was my duty
To dwell upon thy boasted beauty ;
Now I 'll proceed a word or two t' ye in answer

To that part where you carry on
This paradox, that rock and stone
In your opinion are all one :
How can, sir,

A man of reasoning so profound
So stupidly be run aground,
As things so different to confound
t' our senses ?

Except you judg'd them by the knock
Of near an equal hardy block :
Such an experimental stroke convinces.

Then might you be, by dint of reason,
A proper judge on this occasion ;
'Gainst feeling there's no disputation,
is granted :

Therefore

Therefore to thy superiour wit,
 Who made the trial, we submit;
 Thy head to prove the truth of it
 we wanted.

In one assertion you're to blame,
 Where Dan and Sherry's made the same,
 Endeavouring to have your name
 refin'd, sir:

You'll see most grossly you mistook,
 If you consult your spelling-book,
 (The better half you say you took) you'll find, sir;

S, H, E, she — and R, I, ri,
 Both put together make Sherry,
 D, A, N, Dan — makes up the three syllables;

Dan is but one, and Sherri two,
 Then, sir, your choice will never do;
 Therefore I've turn'd, my friend, on you the tables.

DR. DELANY'S REPLY.

ASSIST me, my Muse, while I labour to limn
 him:

Credite, Pisones, isti tabulæ persimilem.

You look and you write with so different a grace,
 That I envy your verse, though I did not your face.
 And to him that thinks rightly, there's reason enough,
 'Cause one is as smooth, as the other is rough.

But

But much I'm amaz'd you should think my design
Was to rhyme down your nose, or your harlequin grin,

Which you yourself wonder the de'el should malign.

And if 'tis so strange, that your monstership's crany
Should be envy'd by him, much less by Delany;

Though I own to you, when I consider it stricter,
I envy the painter, although not the picture.

And justly she's envy'd, since a fiend of Hell

Was never drawn right but by her and Raphael.

Next, as to the charge, which you tell us is true,
That we were inspir'd by the subject we drew.

Inspir'd we were, and well, sir, you knew it,

Yet not by your nose, but the fair one that drew it:

Had your nose been the Muse, we had ne'er been inspir'd,

Tho' perhaps it might justly 've been said we were fir'd.

As to the division of words in your staves,

Like my countryman's horn comb, into three halves,

I meddle not with 't, but presume to make merry,

You call'd Dan one half, and 'tother half Sherry:

Now if Dan's a half, as you call 't o'er and o'er,

Then it can't be deny'd that Sherry's two more.

For pray give me leave to say, sir, for all you,

That Sherry's at least of double the value.

But perhaps, sir, you did it to fill up the verse:

So crowds in a concert (like actors in a farce)

Play two parts in one, when scrapers are scarce.

But be that as 'twill, you'll know more anon, sir,

When Sheridan sends to Merry Dan answer.

SHE-

SHERIDAN'S REPLY.

THREE merry lads you own we are ;

'Tis very true, and free from care,

But envious we cannot bear,

believe, sir :

For, were all forms of beauty thine,

Were you like Nereus soft and fine,

We should not in the least repine,

or grieve, sir.

Then know from us, most beauteous Dan,

That roughness best becomes a man ;

'Tis women should be pale and wan,

and taper ;

And all your trifling beaux and fops,

Who comb their brows, and sleek their chops,

Are but the offspring of toyshops, mere vapour.

We know your morning hours you pass

To cull and gather out a face ;

Is this the way you take your glass ?

Forbear it :

Those loads of paint upon your toilet,

Will never mend your face, but spoil it,

It looks as if you did parboil it :

Drink claret.

Your cheeks, by sleeking, are so lean,

That they 're like Cynthia in the wane,

Or breast of goose when 'tis pick'd clean,

or pullet :

See

See what by drinking you have done:
 You've made your phiz a skeleton,
 From the long distance of your crown,
 t' your gullet.

THREE A REJOINDER.

BY THE DEAN, IN JACKSON'S NAME.

WEARIED with saying grace and prayer,
 I hasten'd down to country air,
 To read your answer, and prepare reply to 't:

But your fair lines so grossly flatter,
 Pray, do they praise me, or bespatter?
 I must suspect you mean the latter—

Ah! slyboot!

It must be so! what else, alas!
 Can mean by culling of a face,
 And all that stuff of toilet, glass,
 and box-comb?

But be't as 'twill, this you must grant,
 That you're a dawb, whilst I but paint;
 Then which of us two is the quainter coxcomb?

I value not your jokes of noose,
 Your gibes, and all your foul abuse,
 More than the dirt beneath my shoes,

nor fear it:

Yet one thing vexes me, I own,
 Thou sorry scarecrow of skin and bone;
 To be call'd lean by a skeleton,
 who 'd bear it?

'Tis true indeed, to curry friends,
 You seem to praise, to make amends,
 And yet, before your stanza ends,
 you flout me,

'Bout latent charms beneath my clothes
 For every one that knows me knows
 That I have nothing like my nose about me:

I pass now where you fleer and laugh,

'Cause I call Dan my better half!

O there you think you have me safe!

But hold, sir:

Is not a penny often found

To be much greater than a pound?

By your good leave, my most profound and bold sir,

Dan's noble mettle, Sherry base;

So Dan's the better, though the less,

An ounce of gold's worth ten of brass,

dull pedant!

As to your spelling, let me see,

If SHE makes sher, and RI makes ry,

Good spelling-master! your crany has lead on't.

ANOTHER REJOINDER,
BY THE DEAN, IN JACKSON'S NAME.

THREE days for answer I have waited,
I thought an ace you'd ne'er have bated,
And art thou forc'd to yield, ill fated poetaster?

Henceforth acknowledge, that a nose
Of thy dimension's fit for prose,
But every one that knows Dan, knows thy master.

Blush for ill spelling, for ill lines,
And fly with hurry to ramines;
Thy fame, thy genius now declines, proud boaster.

I hear with some concern you roar,
And flying think to quit the score,
By clapping billets on your door and posts, sir.

Thy ruin, Tom, I never meant,
I'm griev'd to hear your banishment,
But pleas'd to find you do relent and cry on.

I maul'd you, when you look'd so bluff,
But now I'll secret keep your stuff;
For know, prostration is enough to th' lion.

SHERIDAN'S SUBMISSION.

BY THE DEAN.

“ Cedo jam, miseræ cognoscens præmia rixæ,

“ Si rixa est, ubi tu pulsas ego vapulo tantum.”

Poor Sherry, inglorious,

To Dan the victorious,

Presents, as 'tis fitting,

Petition and greeting.

TO you, victorious and brave,

Your now subdued and suppliant slave

Most humbly sues for pardon;

Who when I fought still cut me down,

And when I vanquish'd fled the town,

Pursued and laid me hard on.

Now lowly crouch'd I cry peccavi,And prostrate supplicate pour ma vie,

Your mercy I rely on;

For you, my conqueror and my king,

In pardoning, as in punishing,

Will show yourself a lion.

Alas! sir, I had no design,

But was unwarily drawn in;

For spite I ne'er had any;

'Twas the damn'd 'squire with the hard name;

The de'el too that ow'd me a shame,

The devil and Delany;

They tempted me t'attack your highness,

And then, with wonted wile and slyness,

They

They left me in the lurch :
 Unhappy wretch ! for now, I ween,
 I've nothing left to vent my spleen
 But ferula and birch :

And they, alas ! yield small relief,
 Seem rather to renew my grief,
 My wounds bleed all anew :
 For every stroke goes to my heart,
 And at each lash I feel the smart
 Of lash laid on by you.

TO THE REV. DANIEL JACKSON;
TO BE HUMBL Y PRESENTED BY MR. SHERIDAN
IN PERSON, WITH RESPECT, CARE, AND SPEED.

DEAR DAN,

HERE I return my trust, nor ask,
 One penny for remittance ;
 If I have well perform'd my task,
 Pray send me an acquittance.
 Too long I bore this weighty pack,
 As Hercules the sky ;
 Now take him you, Dan Atlas, back,
 Let me be stander-by.
 Not all the witty things you speak
 In compass of a day,
 Not half the puns you make a week,
 Should bribe his longer stay.

With me you left him out at nurse,
Yet are you not my debtor;
For, as he hardly can be worse,
I ne'er could make him better.

He rhymes and puns, and puns and rhymes,
Just as he did before;
And, when he's lash'd a hundred times,
He rhymes and puns the more.

When rods are laid on schoolboys bums,
The more they frisk and skip:
The schoolboy's top but louder hums,
The more they use the whip.

Thus, a lean beast beneath a load
(A beast of Irish breed)

Will, in a tedious, dirty road,

Outgo the prancing steed.

You knock him down and down in vain,

And lay him flat before ye,

For, soon as he gets up again,

He'll strut, and cry, Victoria!

At every stroke of mine, he fell,

'Tis true he roar'd and cry'd;

But his impenetrable shell

Could feel no harm beside.

The tortoise thus, with motion slow,

Will clamber up a wall;

Yet, senseless to the hardest blow,

Gets nothing but a fall.

Dear Dan, then, why should you, or I,

Attack his pericrany?

And, since it is in vain to try,

We'll send him to Delany.

POST-

POSTSCRIPT.

LEAN TOM, when I saw him, last week, on his horse awry,
 Threaten'd loudly to turn me to stone with his sorcery.
 But, I think, little Dan, that, in spite of what our foe says,
 He will find I read Ovid and his Metamorphosis.
 For omitting the first (where I make a comparison,
 With a sort of allusion to Putland * or Harrison)
 Yet, by my description, you'll find he in short is
 A pack and a garran, a top and a tortoise.
 So I hope from henceforward you ne'er will ask, can
 I maul
 This teasing, conceited, rude, insolent animal?
 And, if this rebuke might turn to his benefit,
 (For I pity the man) I should be glad then of it.

 TO DR. SHERIDAN.

ON HIS "ART OF PUNNING."

HAD I ten thousand mouths and tongues,
 Had I ten thousand pair of lungs,
 Ten thousand skulls with brains to think,
 Ten thousand standishes of ink,
 Ten thousand hands and pens to write
 Thy praise, I'd study day and night.

O may thy work for ever live!
 (Dear Tom, a friendly zeal forgive)

* Alluding to the Prologue, mentioned above, p. 209.

May no vile miscreant saucy cook
 Presume to tear thy learned book,
 To singe his fowl for nicer guest,
 Or pin it on the turkey's breast.
 Keep it from pasty bak'd or flying,
 From broiling stake, or fritters frying,
 From lighting pipe, or making snuff,
 Or casing up a feather muff,
 From all the several ways the grocer
 (Who to the learned world 's a foe, sir)
 Has found in twisting, folding, packing,
 His brains and ours at once a racking.
 And may it never curl the head,
 Of either living block or dead!
 Thus, when all dangers they have past,
 Your leaves, like leaves of brass, shall last,
 No blast shall from a critick's breath,
 By vile infection, cause their death,
 Till they in flames at last expire,
 And help to set the world on fire,

TO DR. SHEPHERD

STELLA TO DR. SWIFT.

On his Birthday, Nov. 30, 1721.

ST. Patrick's Dean, your country's pride,
 My early and my only guide,
 Let me among the rest attend,
 Your pupil and your humble friend,
 To celebrate in female strains
 The day that paid your mother's pains;

Descend

Descend to take that tribute due
In gratitude alone to you.

When men began to call me fair,
You interpos'd your timely care;
You early taught me to despise
The ogling of a coxcomb's eyes;
Show'd where my judgment was misplac'd;
Refin'd my fancy and my taste.

Behold that beauty just decay'd,
Invoking art to nature's aid:
Forsook by her admiring train,
She spreads her tatter'd nets in vain;
Short was her part upon the stage;
Went smoothly on for half a page;
Her bloom was gone, she wanted art,
As the scene chang'd, to change her part;
She, whom no lover could resist,
Before the second act was hiss'd.
Such is the fate of female race
With no endowments but a face;
Before the thirtieth year of life,
A maid forlorn, or hated wife.

Stella to you, her tutor, owes
That she has ne'er resembled those;
Nor was a burden to mankind
With half her course of years behind.
You taught how I might youth prolong,
By knowing what was right and wrong;
How from my heart to bring supplies
Of lustre to my fading eyes;
How soon a beauteous mind repairs
The loss of chang'd or falling hairs;
How wit and virtue from within
Send out a smoothness o'er the skin:

Your

Your lectures could my fancy fix,
 And I can please at thirty-six.
 The sight of Chloe at fifteen
 Coquetting, gives not me the spleen;
 The idol now of every fool
 Till time shall make their passions cool;
 Then tumbling down time's steepy hill,
 While Stella holds her station still,
 O! turn your precepts into laws,
 Redeem the women's ruin'd cause,
 Retrieve lost empire to our sex,
 That men may bow their rebel necks.

Long be the day that gave you birth
 Sacred to friendship, wit, and mirth;
 Late dying may you cast a shred
 Of your rich mantle o'er my head;
 To bear with dignity my sorrow,
 One day alone, then die to morrow.

TO STELLA.

ON HER BIRTHDAY, 1721-2.

WHILE, Stella, to your lasting praise
 The Muse her annual tribute pays,
 While I assign myself a task
 Which you expect, but scorn to ask;
 If I perform this task with pain,
 Let me of partial fate complain;
 You every year the debt enlarge,
 I grow less equal to the charge:

In

In you each virtue brighter shines,
 But my poetick vein declines ;
 My harp will soon in vain be strung,
 And all your virtues left unsung.
 For none among the upstart race
 Of poets dare assume my place ;
 Your worth will be to them unknown,
 They must have Stellas of their own ;
 And thus, my stock of wit decay'd,
 I dying leave the debt unpaid,
 Unless Delany, as my heir,
 Will answer for the whole arrear.

STELLA'S BIRTHDAY:

A GREAT BOTTLE OF WINE, LONG BURIED,

BEING THAT DAY DUG UP. 1722-3.

RESOLV'D my annual verse to pay,
 By duty bound, on Stella's day,
 Furnish'd with paper, pens, and ink,
 I gravely sat me down to think :
 I bit my nails, and scratch'd my head,
 But found my wit and fancy fled :
 Or, if with more than usual pain,
 A thought came slowly from my brain ;
 It cost me lord knows how much time
 To shape it into sense and rhyme :
 And, what was yet a greater curse,
 Long thinking made my fancy worse.

Forsaken

Forsaken by th' inspiring Nine,
 I waited at Apollo's shrine :
 I told him what the world would say,
 If Stella were unsung to day :
 How I should hide my head for shame,
 When both the Jacks and Robin came ;
 How Ford would frown, how Jim would leer,
 How Sheridan the rogue would sneer,
 And swear it does not always follow,
 That semel in anno ridet Apollo.
 I have assur'd them twenty times,
 That Phœbus help'd me in my rhymes ;
 Phœbus inspir'd me from above,
 And he and I were hand and glove.
 But, finding me so dull and dry since,
 They'll call it all poetick licence ;
 And when I brag of aid divine,
 Think Eusden's right as good as mine.
 Nor do I ask for Stella's sake ;
 'Tis my own credit lies at stake :
 And Stella will be sung, while I
 Can only be a stander by.

Apollo, having thought a little,
 Return'd this answer to a tittle.

Though you should live like old Methusalem,
 I furnish hints, and you shall use all 'em,
 You yearly sing as she grows old,
 You'd leave her virtues half untold.
 But, to say truth, such dulness reigns,
 Through the whole set of Irish deans,
 I'm daily stunn'd with such a medley,
 Dean W—, dean D—, and dean Smedley,
 That, let what dean soever come,
 My orders are, I'm not at home ;

And

And if your voice had not been loud,
You must have pass'd among the crowd.

But now, your danger to prevent,
You must apply to Mrs. Brent;
For she, as priestess, knows the rites
Wherein the god of earth delights.

First, nine ways looking, let her stand
With an old poker in her hand;
Let her describe a circle round
In Saunders' cellar on the ground:
A spade let prudent Archy hold,
And with discretion dig the mould:
Let Stella look with watchful eye,
Rebecca, Ford, and Grattans by.

Behold the bottle, where it lies
With neck elated toward the skies!
The god of winds and god of fire
Did to its wondrous birth conspire;
And Bacchus for the poet's use
Pour'd in a strong inspiring juice.
See! as you raise it from its tomb,
It drags behind a spacious womb,
And in the spacious womb contains
A sovereign medicine for the brains.

You'll find it soon, if fate consents;
If not, a thousand Mrs. Brents,
Ten thousand Archys, arm'd with spades,
May dig in vain to Pluto's shades.

From thence a plenteous draught infuse,
And boldly then invoke the Muse;
But first let Robert on his knees,
With caution drain it from the lees:
The Muse will at your call appear,
With Stella's praise to crown the year.

A SATIRICAL ELEGY.

ON THE DEATH OF A LATE FAMOUS GENERAL.

1722.

HIS Grace ! impossible ! what dead !
 Of old age too, and in his bed !
 And could that mighty warrior fall,
 And so inglorious, after all !
 Well, since he's gone, no matter how,
 The last loud trump must wake him now :
 And, trust me, as the noise grows stronger,
 He'd wish to sleep a little longer.
 And could he be indeed so old
 As by the newspapers we're told ?
 Threescore, I think, is pretty high ;
 'Twas time in conscience he should die !
 This world he cumber'd long enough ;
 He burnt his candle to the snuff ;
 And that's the reason, some folks think,
 He left behind so great a stink.
 Behold his funeral appears,
 Nor widows' sighs, nor orphans' tears,
 Wont at such times each heart to pierce,
 Attend the progress of his hearse.
 But what of that ? his friends may say,
 He had those honours in his day.
 True to his profit and his pride,
 He made them weep before he died.

Come hither, all ye empty things !
 Ye bubbles rais'd by breath of kings !
 Who float upon the tide of state ;
 Come hither, and behold your fate !

Let

Let Pride be taught by this rebuke,
 How very mean a thing's a duke;
 From all his ill-got honours flung,
 Turn'd to that dirt from whence he sprung.

DEAN SMEDLEY'S PETITION

TO THE DUKE OF GRAFTON.

"Non domus aut fundus —" HOR.

IT was, my lord, the dextrous shift
 Of t'other Jonathan, viz. Swift,
 But now St. Patrick's saucy dean,
 With silver verge and surplice clean,
 Of Oxford, or of Ormond's grace,
 In looser rhyme to beg a place.
 A place he got, yclept a stall,
 And eke a thousand pound withal;
 And, were he a less witty writer,
 He might as well have got a mitre.

Thus I, the Jonathan of Clogher,
 In humble lays, my thanks to offer,
 Approach your grace with grateful heart,
 My thanks and verse both void of art,
 Content with what your bounty gave,
 No larger income do I crave:
 Rejoicing that, in better times,
 Grafton requires my loyal lines.
 Proud! while my patron is polite,
 I likewise to the patriot write!

Proud!

Proud ! that at once I can commend
 King George's and the Muses' friend !
 Endear'd to Britain ; and to thee
 (Disjoin'd, Hibernia, by the sea)
 Endear'd by twice three anxious years,
 Employ'd in guardian toils and cares ;
 By love, by wisdom, and by skill ;
 For he has sav'd thee 'gainst thy will.

But where shall Smedley make his nest,
 And lay his wandering head to rest ?
 Where shall he find a decent house,
 To treat his friends, and cheer his spouse ?
 O ! tack, my lord, some pretty cure ;
 In wholesome soil, and ether pure ;
 The garden stor'd with artless flowers,
 In either angle shady bowers.
 No gay parterre, with costly green,
 Within the ambient hedge be seen :
 Let Nature freely take her course,
 Nor fear from me ungrateful force ;
 No sheers shall check her sprouting vigour,
 Nor shape the yews to antick figure :
 A limpid brook shall trout supply,
 In May, to take the mimick fly ;
 Round a small orchard may it run,
 Whose apples redden to the sun.
 Let all be snug, and warm, and neat ;
 For fifty turn'd a safe retreat.
 A little Euston * may it be,
 Euston I'll carve on every tree.
 But then, to keep it in repair,
 My lord—twice fifty pounds a year

* The name of the duke's seat, in Suffolk.

Will barely do ; but if your grace
 Could make them hundreds—charming place!
 Thou then wouldst show another face.

Clogher ! far north, my lord, it lies,
 'Midst snowy hills, inclement skies ;
 One shivers with the arctick wind,
 One hears the polar axis grind.
 Good John * indeed, with beef and claret,
 Makes the place warm that one may bear it.
 He has a purse to keep a table,
 And eke a soul as hospitable.
 My heart is good ; but assets fail,
 To fight with storms of snow and hail.
 Besides, the country's thin of people,
 Who seldom meet but at the steeple :
 The strapping dean, that's gone to Down,
 Ne'er nam'd the thing without a frown,
 When, much fatigu'd with sermon study,
 He felt his brain grow dull and muddy ;
 No fit companion could be found,
 To push the lazy bottle round :
 Sure then, for want of better folks
 To pledge, his clerk was orthodox.

Ah ! how unlike to Gerard street,
 Where beaux and belles in parties meet ;
 Where gilded chairs and coaches throng,
 And jostle as they troll along ;
 Where tea and coffee hourly flow,
 And gapedoes in plenty grow ;
 And Griz (no clock more certain) cries,
 Exact at seven, " Hot mutton-pies !"
 There lady Luna in her sphere
 Once shone, when Paunceforth was not near ;

* Bp. Sterne.

But now she wanes, and, as 'tis said,
Keeps sober hours, and goes to bed.
There — but 'tis endless to write down
All the amusements of the town;
And spouse will think herself quite undone,
To trudge to Connor * from sweet London;
And care we must our wives to please,
Or else — we shall be ill at ease.

You see, my lord, what 'tis I lack,
'Tis only some convenient tack,
Some parsonage house, with garden sweet,
To be my late, my last retreat;
A decent church, close by its side,
There, preaching, praying, to reside;
And, as my time securely rolls,
To save my own and other souls.

THE DUKE'S ANSWER.

BY DR. SWIFT.

DEAR Smed, I read thy brilliant lines,
Where wit in all its glory shines;
Where compliments, with all their pride,
Are by their numbers dignified:
I hope, to make you yet as clean
As that same Viz, St. Patrick's dean.
I'll give thee surplice, verge, and stall,
And may be something else withal;

* The bishoprick of Connor is united to that of Down; but there are two deans.

And,

And, were you not so good a writer,
I should present you with a mitre.
Write worse, then, if you can—be wise—
Believe me, 'tis the way to rise.
Talk not of making of thy nest:
Ah! never lay thy head to rest!
That head so well with wisdom fraught,
That writes without the toil of thought!
While others rack their busy brains,
You are not in the least at pains.
Down to your dean'ry new repair,
And build a castle in the air.
I'm sure a man of your fine sense
Can do it with a small expense.
There your dear spouse and you together
May breathe your bellies full of ether.
When lady Luna is your neighbour,
She'll help your wife when she's in labour;
Well skill'd in midwife artifices,
For she herself oft falls in pieces.
There you shall see a rareeshow
Will make you scorn this world below,
When you behold the milky way,
As white as snow, as bright as day;
The glittering constellations roll
About the grinding arctic pole;
The lovely tingling in your ears,
Wrought by the musick of the spheres—
Your spouse shall then no longer hector,
You need not fear a curtain-lecture;
Nor shall she think that she is undone
For quitting her beloved London.
When she's exalted in the skies,
She'll never think of mutton pies;

When you're advanc'd above dean Viz
 You'll never think of goody Griz.
 But ever, ever, live at ease,
 And strive, and strive, your wife to please;
 In her you'll centre all your joys,
 And get ten thousand girls and boys:
 Ten thousand girls and boys you'll get,
 And they like stars shall rise and set.
 While you and spouse, transform'd, shall soon
 Be a new sun and a new moon:
 Nor shall you strive your horns to hide,
 For then your horns shall be your pride.

VERSES BY STELLA.

IF it be true, celestial powers,
 That you have form'd me fair,
 And yet, in all my vainest hours,
 My mind has been my care:
 Then, in return, I beg this grace,
 As you were ever kind,
 What envious Time takes from my face,
 Bestow upon my mind!

JEALOUSY. BY THE SAME*.

O Shield me from his rage, celestial powers!
 This tyrant, that embitters all my hours!
 Ah! Love! you've poorly play'd the hero's part:
 You conquer'd, but you can't defend my heart.
 When first I bent beneath your gentle reign,
 I thought this monster banish'd from your train;
 But you would raise him to support your throne;
 And now he claims your empire as his own.
 Or tell me, tyrants! have you both agreed,
 That where one reigns, the other shall succeed?

 DR. DELANY'S VILLA†.

WOULD you that Delville I describe?
 Believe me, sir, I will not gibe:
 For who would be satirical
 Upon a thing so very small?
 You scarce upon the borders enter,
 Before you're at the very centre.
 A single crow can make it night,
 When o'er your farm she takes her flight:
 Yet, in this narrow compass, we Observe a vast variety;
 Both walks, walls, meadows, and parterres,
 Windows and doors, and rooms and stairs,
 And hills and dales, and woods and fields,
 And hay, and grass, and corn, it yields;

* On the publication of "Cadenus and Vanessa."

† This was not Swift's, but written by Dr. Sheridan.

All to your haggard brought so cheap in,
 Without the mowing or the reaping :
 A razor, though to say 't I'm loth,
 Would shave you and your meadows both.

Though small's the farm, yet here's a house
 Full large to entertain a mouse ;
 But where a rat is dreaded more
 Than savage Caledonian boar ;
 For, if it's enter'd by a rat,
 There is no room to bring a cat.

A little rivulet seems to steal
 Down through a thing you call a vale,
 Like tears adown a wrinkled cheek,
 Like rain along a blade of leek ;
 And this you call your sweet meander,
 Which might be suck'd up by a gander,
 Could he but force his nether bill
 To scoop the channel of the rill.
 For sure you'd make a mighty clutter,
 Were it as big as city gutter.

Next come I to your kitchen garden,
 Where one poor mouse would fare but hard in ;
 And round this garden is a walk,
 No longer than a tailor's chalk ;
 Thus I compare what space is in it,
 A snail creeps round it in a minute.
 One lettuce makes a shift to squeeze
 Up through a tuft you call your trees :
 And, once a year, a single rose
 Peeps from the bud, but never blows ;
 In vain then you expect its bloom !
 It cannot blow for want of room.

In short, in all your boasted seat,
 There's nothing but yourself that's GREAT.

ON ONE OF THE WINDOWS AT DELVILLE.

A BARD, grown desirous of saving his pelf,
Built a house he was sure would hold none but himself.
This enrag'd god Apollo, who Mercury sent,
And bid him go ask what his votary meant?

“ Some foe to my empire has been his adviser :

“ ’Tis of dreadful portent when a poet turns miser !

“ Tell him, Hermes, from me, tell that subject of “ mine,

“ I have sworn by the Styx, to defeat his design ;

“ For wherever he lives, the Muses shall reign ;

“ And the Muses, he knows, have a numerous train.”

IN COMITATU CORGAGENS I. 1723.

ECCE ingens fragmen scopuli, quod vertice summo
Desuper impendet, nullo fundamine nixum
Decidit in fluctus : maria undique & undique saxa
Horrisono stridore tonant, & ad æthera murmur
Erigitur ; trepidatque suis Neptunus in undis.
Nam, longâ venti rabie, atque aspergine crebrâ
Æquorei laticis, specus imâ rupe cavatur :
Jam fultura ruit, jam summa cacumina nutant ;
Jam cadit in præceps moles, & verberat undas.
Attonitus credas, hinc dejecisse Tonantem
Montibus impositos montes, & Pelion altum
In capita anguipedum cœlo jaculâsse gigantum.

Sæpe etiam spelunca immani aperitur hiatu
 Exesa è scopulis, & utrinque foramina pandit,
 Hinc atque hinc a ponto ad pontum pervia Phœbo.
 Cautibus enormè junctis laquearia tecti
 Formantur; moles olim ruitura supernè.
 Fornice sublimi nidos posuere palumbes,
 Inque imo stagni posuere cubilia phocæ.

Sed, cum sævit hyems, & venti, carcere rupto,
 Immensos volvunt fluctus ad culmina montis;
 Non obsessæ arces, non fulmina vindice dextrâ
 Missa Jovis, quoties inimicas sævit in urbes,
 Exæquant sonitum undarum, veniente procellâ:
 Littora littoribus reboant; vicinia latè,
 Gens assueta mari, & pedibus percurrere rupes,
 Terretur tamen, & longè fugit, arva relinquens.

Gramina dum carpunt pendentes rupe capellæ,
 Vi salientis aquæ de summo præcipitantur,
 Et dulces animas imo sub gurgite linqunt.

Piscator terrâ non audet vellere funem;
 Sed latet in portu tremebundus, & aëra sudum
 Haud sperans, Nereum precibus votisque fatigat.

CARBERRY ROCKS.

TRANSLATED BY DR. DUNKIN.

LO! from the top of yonder cliff, that shrouds
 Its airy head amid the azure clouds,
 Hangs a huge fragment; destitute of props,
 Prone on the wave the rocky ruin drops;
 With hoarse rebuff the swelling seas rebound,
 From shore to shore the rocks return the sound:

The

The dreadful murmurs Heaven's high convex cleaves,
And Neptune shrinks beneath his subject waves :
For, long the whirling winds and beating tides
Had scoop'd a vault into its nether sides.
Now yields the base, the summits nod, now urge
Their headlong course, and lash the sounding surge.
Not louder noise could shake the guilty world,
When Jove heap'd mountains upon mountains hurl'd;
Retorting Pelion from his dread abode,
To crush Earth's rebel sons beneath the load.

Oft too with hideous yawn the cavern wide
Presents an orifice on either side,
A dismal orifice, from sea to sea
Extended, pervious to the God of Day :
Uncouthly join'd, the rocks stupendous form
An arch, the ruin of a future storm :
High on the cliff their nests the woodquests make,
And seacalves stable in the oozy lake.

But when bleak Winter with his sullen train
Awakes the winds to vex the watery plain ;
When o'er the craggy steep without control,
Big with the blast, the raging billows roll ;
Not towns beleaguer'd, not the flaming brand,
Darted from Heaven by Jove's avenging hand,
Oft as on impious men his wrath he pours,
Humbles their pride, and blasts their gilded towers,
Equal the tumult of this wild uproar :
Waves rush o'er waves, rebellows shore to shore.
The neighbouring race, though wont to brave the shocks
Of angry seas, and run along the rocks,
Now pale with terrour, while the ocean foams,
Fly far and wide, nor trust their native homes.

The,

The goats, while pendent from the mountain top
 The wither'd herb improvident they crop,
 Wash'd down the precipice with sudden sweep,
 Leave their sweet lives beneath th' unfathom'd deep.

The frightened fisher, with desponding eyes,
 Though safe, yet trembling in the harbour lies,
 Nor hoping to behold the skies serene,
 Wearies with vows the monarch of the main.

UPON THE HORRID PLOT

DISCOVERED BY HARLEQUIN,

THE BISHOP OF ROCHESTER'S FRENCH DOG*.

In a Dialogue between a WHIG and a TORY. 1723.

I ASK'D a whig the other night,
 How came this wicked plot to light?
 He answer'd, that a dog of late
 Inform'd a minister of state.
 Said I, from thence I nothing know;
 For are not all informers so?
 A villain who his friend betrays,
 We style him by no other phrase;
 And so a perjur'd dog denotes
 Porter, and Pendergast, and Oates,
 And forty others I could name.

WHIG. But you must know, this dog was lame.

TORY. A weighty argument indeed!

Your evidence was lame:—proceed:

* See Bp. Atterbury's Epistolary Correspondence, 1799, vol. IV, p. 406.

Come,

Come, help your lame dog o'er the stile.

WHIG. Sir, you mistake me all this while:
I mean a dog (without a joke)
Can howl, and bark, but never spoke.

TORY. I'm still to seek, which dog you mean;
Whether our Plunkett, or whelp Skean,
An English or an Irish hound;
Or t'other puppy, that was drown'd;
Or Mason, that abandon'd bitch:
Then pray be free, and tell me which:
For every stander by was marking
That all the noise they made was barking.
You pay them well, the dogs have got
Their dogs-heads in a porridge pot:
And 'twas but just; for wise men say,
That every dog must have his day.
Dog Walpole laid a quart of nog on 't,
He 'd either make a hog or dog on 't;
And look'd, since he has got his wish,
As if he had thrown down a dish.
Yet this I dare foretel you from it,
He'll soon return to his own vomit.

WHIG. Besides, this horrid plot was found
By Neynoe, after he was drown'd.

TORY. Why then the proverb is not right,
Since you can teach dead dogs to bite.

WHIG. I prov'd my proposition full:
But jacobites are strangely dull.
Now, let me tell you plainly, sir,
Our witness is a real cur,
A dog of spirit for his years,
Has twice two legs, two hanging ears;
His name is Harlequin, I wot,
And that's a name in every plot:

Resolv'd

Resolv'd to save the British nation,
 Though French by birth and education;
 His correspondence plainly dated
 Was all decipher'd and translated:
 His answers were exceeding pretty
 Before the secret wise committee;
 Confest as plain as he could bark:
 Then with his forefoot set his mark.

TORY. Then all this while have I been bubbled,
 I thought it was a dog in doublet:
 The matter now no longer sticks;
 For statesmen never want dog tricks.
 But since it was a real cur,
 And not a dog in metaphor,
 I give you joy of the report,
 That he's to have a place at court.

WHIG. Yes, and a place he will grow rich in;
 A turnspit in the royal kitchen.
 Sir, to be plain, I tell you what,
 We had occasion for a plot:
 And when we found the dog begin it,
 We guess'd the bishop's foot was in it.

TORY. I own it was a dangerous project;
 And you have prov'd it by dog-logick.
 Sure such intelligence between
 A dog and bishop ne'er was seen,
 Till you began to change the breed;
 Your bishops all are dogs indeed!

STELLA

STELLA AT WOOD PARK,

A HOUSE OF CHARLES FORD, ESQ.

NEAR DUBLIN. 1723.

“ — Cuicumque nocere volebat,

“ Vestimenta dabat pretiosa.”

DON Carlos, in a merry spite,
 Did Stella to his house invite :
 He entertain'd her half a year
 With generous wines and costly cheer.
 Don Carlos made her chief director,
 That she might o'er the servants hector.
 In half a week the dame grew nice,
 Got all things at the highest price :
 Now at the table head she sits,
 Presented with the nicest bits :
 She look'd on partridges with scorn,
 Except they tasted of the corn :
 A haunch of venison made her sweat,
 Unless it had the right fumette.
 Don Carlos earnestly would beg,
 Dear madam, try this pigeon's leg ;
 Was happy, when he could prevail
 To make her only touch a quail.
 Through candlelight she view'd the wine
 To see that every glass was fine.
 At last, grown prouder than the devil
 With feeding high and treatment civil,
 Don Carlos now began to find
 His malice work as he design'd.

The

The winter sky began to frown ;
 Poor Stella must pack off to town :
 From purling streams and fountains bubbling,
 To Liffy's stinking tide at Dublin :
 From wholesome exercise and air,
 To sossing in an easy chair :
 From stomach sharp, and hearty feeding,
 To piddle like a lady breeding :
 From ruling there the household singly,
 To be directed here by Dingley * :
 From every day a lordly banquet,
 To half a joint, and God be thanked :
 From every meal Pontack in plenty,
 To half a pint one day in twenty :
 From Ford attending at her call,
 To visits of — — —
 From Ford, who thinks of nothing mean,
 To the poor doings of the Dean :
 From growing richer with good cheer,
 To running out by starving here.

But now arrives the dismal day ;
 She must return to Ormond Quay †.
 The coachman stopt ; she look'd, and swore
 The rascal had mistook the door :
 At coming in, you saw her stoop ;
 The entry brush'd against her hoop :
 Each moment rising in her airs,
 She curst the narrow winding stairs :
 Began a thousand faults to spy ;
 The ceiling hardly six feet high ;

* The constant companion of Stella.

† Where the two ladies lodged.

The smutty wainscot full of cracks ;
And half the chairs with broken backs :
Her quarter's out at Ladyday ;
She vows she will no longer stay
In lodgings like a poor Grizette,
While there are houses to be let.

Howe'er, to keep her spirits up,
She sent for company to sup :
When all the while you might remark,
She strove in vain to ape Wood Park.
Two bottles call'd for (half her store
The cupboard could contain but four)
A supper worthy of herself,
Five nothings in five plates of delf.

Thus for a week the farce went on ;
When, all her country savings gone,
She fell into her former scene,
Small beer, a herring, and the Dean.

Thus far in jest : though now, I fear,
You think my jesting too severe ;
But poets, when a hint is new,
Regard not whether false or true :
Yet raillery gives no offence,
Where truth has not the least pretence ;
Nor can be more securely plac'd
Than on a nymph of Stella's taste.
I must confess, your wine and vittles
I was too hard upon a little :

Your table neat, your linen fine ;
And though in miniature, you shine :
Yet, when you sigh to leave Wood Park,
The scene, the welcome, and the spark,
To languish in this odious town,
And pull your haughty stomach down ;

We

We think you quite mistake the case,
 The virtue lies not in the place :
 For, though my raillery were true,
 A cottage is Wood Park with you.

COPY OF THE BIRTHDAY VERSES
 ON MR. FORD*.

COME, be content, since out it must,
 For Stella has betray'd her trust ;
 And, whispering, charg'd me not to say
 That Mr. Ford was born to day ;
 Or, if at last I needs must blab it,
 According to my usual habit,
 She bid me, with a serious face,
 Be sure conceal the time and place ;
 And not my compliment to spoil,
 By calling this your native soil ;
 Or vex the ladies, when they knew
 That you are turning forty-two :
 But, if these topicks shall appear
 Strong arguments to keep you here,
 I think, though you judge hardly of it,
 Good manners must give place to profit.

* Dr. Swift had been used to celebrate the birthday of his friend Charles Ford, esq. which was on the first day of January. See also the preceding poem, "Stella at Wood Park." Dr. Delany mentions, among the dean's intimate friends, "Matthew Ford, esq. a man of family and fortune, a fine gentleman, "and the best lay scholar of his time and nation."

The

The nymphs, with whom you first began,
Are each become a harridan ;
And Montague so far decay'd,
Her lovers now must all be paid ;
And every belle that since arose,
Has her contemporary beaux.

Your former comrades, once so bright,
With whom you toasted half the night,
Of rheumatism and pox complain,
And bid adieu to dear champaign.

Your great protectors, once in power,
Are now in exile or the Tower.

Your foes triumphant o'er the laws,
Who hate your person and your cause,

If once they get you on the spot,

You must be guilty of the plot :

For, true or false, they'll ne'er inquire,

But use you ten times worse than Prior.

In London ! what would you do there ?

Can you, my friend, with patience bear

(Nay, would it not your passion raise

Worse than a pun, or Irish phrase ?)

To see a scoundrel strut and hector,

A footboy to some rogue director,

To look on vice triumphant round,

And virtue trampled on the ground ?

Observe where bloody  stands

With torturing engines in his hands,

Hear him blaspheme, and swear, and rail,

Threatening the pillory and jail :

If this you think a pleasing scene,

To London straight return again ;

Where, you have told us from experience,

Are swarms of bugs and presbyterians.

I thought my very spleen would burst,
 When Fortune hither drove me first;
 Was full as hard to please as you,
 Nor persons names nor places knew:
 But now I act as other folk,
 Like prisoners when their gall is broke.

If you have London still at heart,
 We'll make a small one here by art;
 The difference is not much between
 St. James's Park and Stephen's Green:
 And Dawson street will serve as well
 To lead you thither as Pall-Mall.
 Nor want a passage through the palace,
 To choque your sight, and raise your malice.
 The Deanery-house may well be match'd,
 Under correction, with the Thatch'd*.
 Nor shall I, when you hither come,
 Demand a crown a quart for stum.
 Then, for a middle-aged charmer,
 Stella may vie with your Monthermer†;
 She's now as handsome every bit,
 And has a thousand times her wit.
 The Dean and Sheridan, I hope,
 Will half supply a Gay and Pope.
 Corbet‡, though yet I know his worth not,
 No doubt, will prove a good Arbuthnot.
 I throw into the bargain Tim;
 In London can you equal him?
 What think you of my favourite clan,
 Robin§, and Jack, and Jack and Dan;

* A famous tavern in St. James's street.

† Mary duchess of Montague and marchioness of Monthermer, youngest daughter of John duke of Marlborough.

‡ Dr. Corbet, afterward dean of St. Patrick's.

§ R. and J. Grattan, and J. and D. Jackson.

Fellows of modest worth and parts,
With cheerful looks and honest hearts ?
Can you on Dublin look with scorn ?
Yet here were you and Ormond born.
O ! were but you and I so wise,
To see with Robert Grattan's eyes !
Robin adores that spot of earth,
That literal spot which gave him birth ;
And swears, " Belcamp is, to his taste,
" At fine as Hampton-court at least."
When to your friends you would enhance
The praise of Italy or France,
For grandeur, elegance, and wit,
We gladly hear you, and submit :
But then, to come and keep a clutter,
For this or that side of a gutter,
To live in this or t'other isle,
We cannot think it worth your while ;
For, take it kindly or amiss,
The difference but amounts to this,
We bury on our side the channel
In linen ; and on your's in flannel.
You for the news are ne'er to seek ;
While we, perhaps, may wait a week :
You happy folks are sure to meet
A hundred whores in every street ;
While we may trace all Dublin o'er
Before we find out half a score.

You see my arguments are strong,
I wonder you held out so long :
But, since you are convinc'd at last,
We'll pardon you for what is past.
So — let us now for whist prepare ;
Twelve pence a corner, if you dare.

JOAN CUDGELS NED. 1723.

JOAN cudgels Ned, yet Ned's a bully;
 Will cudgels Bess, yet Will's a cully.
 Die Ned and Bess; give Will to Joan,
 She dares not say her life's her own.
 Die Joan and Will; give Bess to Ned,
 And every day she combs his head.

A QUIBBLING ELEGY,
 ON JUDGE BOAT. 1723.

TO mournful ditties, Clio, change thy note,
 Since cruel fate has sunk our justice Boat.
 Why should he sink, where nothing seem'd to press,
 His lading little, and his ballast less?
 Tost in the waves of this tempestuous world,
 At length, his anchor fixt and canvas furl'd,
 To Lazy hill * retiring from his court,
 At his Ring's end † he founders in the port.
 With water ‡ fill'd, he could no longer float,
 The common death of many a stronger boat.

A post so fill'd on nature's laws entrenches:
 Benches on boats are plac'd, not boats on benches.
 And yet our Boat (how shall I reconcile it?)
 Was both a Boat, and in one sense a pilot.

* A street in Dublin leading to the harbour.

† A village near the sea.

‡ It was said he died of a dropsy.

With every wind he sail'd, and well could tack :
 Had many pendants, but abhorr'd a Jack *.
 He's gone, although his friends began to hope,
 That he might yet be lifted by a rope.

Behold the awful bench, on which he sat !
 He was as hard and ponderous wood as that :
 Yet, when his sand was out, we find at last,
 That death has overset him with a blast.
 Our Boat is now sail'd to the Stygian ferry,
 There to supply old Charon's leaky wherry :
 Charon in him will ferry souls to Hell ;
 A trade our Boat † has practis'd here so well :
 And Cerberus has ready in his paws
 Both pitch and brimstone, to fill up his flaws.
 Yet, spite of death and fate, I here maintain
 We may place Boat in his old post again.
 The way is thus ; and well deserves your thanks :
 Take the three strongest of his broken planks,
 Fix them on high, conspicuous to be seen,
 Form'd like the triple tree near Stephen's green ‡ ;
 And, when we view it thus with thief at end on 't,
 We'll cry ; Look, here's our Boat, and there's the pendant.

THE EPITAPH.

HERE lies judge Boat within a coffin ;
 Pray, gentlefolks, forbear your scoffing.
 A Boat a judge ! yes ; where's the blunder ?
 A wooden judge is no such wonder.

* A cant word for a Jacobite.

† In condemning malefactors, as a judge.

‡ Where the Dublin gallows stands.

And in his robes, you must agree,
 No boat was better deckt than he,
 'Tis needless to describe him fuller;
 In short, he was an able sculler.

PETHOX* THE GREAT. 1723.

FROM Venus born, thy beauty shows;
 But who thy father, no man knows;
 Nor can the skilful herald trace
 The founder of thy ancient race;
 Whether thy tempter, full of fire,
 Discovers Vulcan for thy sire,
 The god who made Scamander boil,
 And round his margin sing'd the soil;
 (From whence, philosophers agree,
 An equal power descends to thee)
 Whether from dreadful Mars you claim
 The high descent from whence you came,
 And, as a proof, show numerous scars
 By fierce encounters made in wars,
 Those honourable wounds you bore
 From head to foot, and all before,
 And still the bloody field frequent,
 Familiar in each leader's tent;
 Or whether, as the learn'd contend,
 You from the neighbouring Gaul descend;
 Or from Parthenope the proud,
 Where numberless thy votaries crowd;

* This name is plainly an anagram.

Whether

Whether thy great forefathers came
From realms that bear Vespuccio's name,
For so conjectures would obtrude
And from thy painted skin conclude;
Whether, as Epicurus shows,
The world from justling seeds arose,
Which, mingling with prolific strife
In chaos, kindled into life:
So your production was the same,
And from contending atoms came.

Thy fair indulgent mother crown'd
Thy head with sparkling rubies round:
Beneath thy decent steps the road
Is all with precious jewels strow'd.
The bird of Pallas knows his post,
Thee to attend, where'er thou goest.

Byzantians boast, that on the clod
Where once their Sultan's horse hath trod,
Grows neither grass, nor shrub, nor tree:
The same thy subjects boast of thee.

The greatest lord, when you appear,
Will deign your livery to wear,
In all the various colours seen
Of red and yellow, blue and green.

With half a word, when you require,
The man of business must retire.

The haughty minister of state,
With trembling must thy leisure wait;
And, while his fate is in thy hands,
The business of the nation stands.

Thou dar'st the greatest prince attack,
Canst hourly set him on the rack;
And, as an instance of thy power,
Enclose him in a wooden tower,

With pungent pains on every side :
So Regulus in torments dy'd.

From thee our youth all virtues learn,
Dangers with prudence to discern ;
And well thy scholars are endued
With temperance and with fortitude ;
With patience, which all ills supports ;
And secresy, the art of courts.

The glittering beau could hardly tell,
Without your aid, to read or spell ;
But, having long convers'd with you,
Knows how to write a billet-doux.

With what delight, methinks, I trace
Your blood in every noble race !
In whom thy features, shape, and mien,
Are to the life distinctly seen !
The Britons, once a savage kind,
By you were brighten'd and refin'd,
Descendants to the barbarous Huns,
With limbs robust, and voice that stuns ;
But you have moulded them afresh,
Remov'd the tough superfluous flesh,
Taught them to modulate their tongues,
And speak without the help of lungs.

Proteus on you bestow'd the boon
To change your visage like the moon ;
You sometimes half a face produce,
Keep t'other half for private use.

How fam'd thy conduct in the fight
With Hermes, son of Pleias bright !
Outnumber'd, half encompass'd round,
You strove for every inch of ground ;
Then, by a soldierly retreat,
Retir'd to your imperial seat.

The

The victor, when your steps he trac'd,
 Found all the realms before him waste:
 You, o'er the high triumphal arch
 Pontifick, made your glorious march;
 The wondrous arch behind you fell,
 And left a chasm profound as Hell;
 You, in your capitol secur'd,
 A siege as long as Troy endur'd.

MARY THE COOK MAID'S
 LETTER TO DR. SHERIDAN. 1723.

WELL, if ever I saw such another man since my mother bound my head!
 You a gentleman! marry come up! I wonder where you were bred.
 I'm sure such words do not become a man of your cloth;
 I would not give such language to a dog, faith and troth.
 Yes, you call'd my master a knave: fie, Mr. Sheridan! 'tis a shame
 For a parson, who should know better things, to come out with such a name.
 Knave in your teeth, Mr. Sheridan! 'tis both a shame and a sin;
 And the dean my master is an honestest man than you and all your kin:
 He has more goodness in his little finger than you have in your whole body:
 My master is a parsonable man, and not a spindle-shank'd hoddy doddy.

And

And now, whereby I find you would fain make an excuse,

Because my master one day, in anger, call'd you goose:

Which, and I am sure I have been his servant four years since October,

And he never call'd me worse than sweetheart, drunk
or sober:

Not that I know his reverence was ever concern'd to my knowledge,

Though you and your come-rogues keep him out so late in your college.

You say you will eat grass on his grave: a christian eat grass!

Whereby you now confess yourself to be a goose or an ass:

But that's as much as to say, that my master should die before ye;

Well, well, that's as God pleases; and I don't believe that's a true story:

And so say I told you so, and you may go tell my master; what care I?

And I don't care who knows it; 'tis all one to Mary.
Every body knows that I love to tell truth, and shame
the devil;

I am but a poor servant; but I think gentlefolks should be civil.

Besides, you found fault with our victuals one day
that you was here;

I remember it was on a Tuesday of all days in the year.

And Saunders the man says you are always jesting and mocking:

Mary, said he, (one day as I was mending my master's stocking;)

My

My master is so fond of that minister that keeps the school —

I thought my master a wise man, but that man makes him a fool.

Saunders, said I, I would rather than a quart of ale
He would come into our kitchen, and I would pin a dishclout to his tail.

And now I must go, and get Saunders to direct this letter ;

For I write but a bad scrawl ; but my sister Marget, she writes better.

Well, but I must run and make the bed, before my master comes from prayers ;

And see now, it strikes ten, and I hear him coming up stairs ;

Whereof I could say more to your verses, if I could write written hand :

And so I remain, in a civil way, your servant to command,

MARY.

A NEW-YEAR'S-GIFT
FOR BEC*. 1723-4.

RETURNING Janus now prepares,
For Bec, a new supply of cares,
Sent in a bag to doctor Swift,
Who thus displays the New-year's gift.

First, this large parcel brings you tidings
Of our good dean's eternal chidings ;

* Mrs. Rebecca Dingley, Stella's friend and companion.

Of

Of Nelly's pertness, Robin's leasings,
 And Sheridan's perpetual teazings.
 This box is cramm'd on every side
 With Stella's magisterial pride.
 Behold a cage with sparrows fill'd,
 First to be fondled, then be kill'd.
 Now to this hamper I invite you,
 With six imagin'd cares to fright you.
 Here in this bundle Janus sends
 Concerns by thousands for your friends:
 And here 's a pair of leathern pokes,
 To hold your cares for other folks.
 Here from this barrel you may broach
 A peck of troubles for a coach.
 This ball of wax your ears will darken,
 Still to be curious, never hearken.
 Lest you the town may have less trouble in,
 Bring all your Quilca's * cares to Dublin,
 For which he sends this empty sack;
 And so take all upon your back.

DINGLEY AND BRENT†.

A SONG.

To the Tune of, "Ye Commons and Peers."

DINGLEY and Brent,
 Wherever they went,
 Ne'er minded a word that was spoken;

* Country house of Dr. Sheridan.

† Dr. Swift's housekeeper.

Whatever

Whatever was said,
 They ne'er troubled their head,
 But laugh'd at their own silly joking.

Should Solomon wise
 In majesty rise,
 And show them his wit and his learning;
 They never would hear,
 But turn the deaf ear,
 As a matter they had no concern in.

You tell a good jest,
 And please all the rest;
 Comes Dingley, and asks you, what was it?
 And, curious to know,
 Away she will go
 To seek an old rag in the closet.

TO STELLA. March 13, 1723-4.

WRITTEN ON THE DAY OF HER BIRTH,
 BUT NOT ON THE SUBJECT,
 WHEN I WAS SICK IN BED.

TORMENTED with incessant pains,
 Can I devise poetick strains?
 Time was, when I could yearly pay
 My verse on Stella's native day:
 But now, unable grown to write,
 I grieve she ever saw the light.
 Ungrateful! since to her I owe
 That I these pains can undergo.

She

She tends me like an humble slave;
And, when indecently I rave,
When out my brutish passions break,
With gall in every word I speak,
She, with soft speech, my anguish cheers,
Or melts my passions down with tears:
Although 'tis easy to descry
She wants assistance more than I;
Yet seems to feel my pains alone,
And is a stoick in her own.
When, among scholars, can we find
So soft, and yet so firm a mind?
All accidents of life conspire
To raise up Stella's virtue higher;
Or else to introduce the rest
Which had been latent in her breast.
Her firmness who could e'er have known,
Had she not evils of her own?
Her kindness who could ever guess,
Had not her friends been in distress?
Whatever base returns you find
From me, dear Stella, still be kind.
In your own heart you'll reap the fruit,
Though I continue still a brute.
But, when I once am out of pain,
I promise to be good again:
Meantime, your other juster friends
Shall for my follies make amends:
So may we long continue thus,
Admiring you, you pitying us.

THOSE dreams, that on the silent night intrude,
And with false flitting shades our minds delude,
Jove never sends us downward from the skies:
Nor can they from infernal mansions rise;
But are all mere productions of the brain,
And fools consult interpreters in vain.

For, when in bed we rest our weary limbs,
The mind unburden'd sports in various whims;
The busy head with mimic art runs o'er
The scenes and actions of the day before.

The drowsy tyrant, by his minions led,
To regal rage devotes some patriot's head.
With equal terrours, not with equal guilt,
The murderer dreams of all the blood he spilt.

The soldier smiling hears the widow's cries,
And stabs the son before the mother's eyes.
With like remorse his brother of the trade,
The butcher, fells the lamb beneath his blade.

The statesman rakes the town to find a plot,
And dreams of forfeitures by treason got.
Nor less Tom-t—d-man, of true statesman mould,
Collects the city filth in search of gold.

Orphans around his bed the lawyer sees,
And takes the plaintiff's and defendant's fees.
His fellow pick-purse, watching for a job,
Fancies his finger's in the cully's fob.

The

The kind physician grants the husband's prayers,
Or gives relief to long-expecting heirs.
The sleeping hangman ties the fatal noose,
Nor unsuccessful waits for dead men's shoes.

The grave divine, with knotty points perplex,
As if he was awake, nods o'er his text :
While the sly mountebank attends his trade,
Harangues the rabble, and is better paid.

The hireling senator of modern days
Bedaubs the guilty great with nauseous praise :
And Dick the scavenger with equal grace
Flirts from his cart the mud in 's face.

WHITSHED'S* MOTTO ON HIS COACH.

1724.

LIBERTAS et natale solum :

Fine words ! I wonder where you stole 'em.

Could nothing but thy chief reproach

Serve for a motto on thy coach ?

But let me now the words translate :

Natale solum, my estate ;

My dear estate, how well I love it !

My tenants, if you doubt, will prove it,

They swear I am so kind and good,

I hug them, till I squeeze their blood.

Libertas bears a large import :

First, how to swagger in a court ;

* The chief justice who prosecuted the Drapier.

And,

And, secondly, to show my fury
 Against an uncomplying jury;
 And, thirdly, 'tis a new invention,
 To favour Wood, and keep my pension;
 And, fourthly, 'tis to play an odd trick,
 Get the great seal, and turn out Broderick;
 And, fifthly, (you know whom I mean)
 'To humble that vexatious dean;
 And, sixthly, for my soul, to barter it
 For fifty times its worth to Carteret*.

Now, since your motto thus you construe,
 I must confess you 've spoken once true.

Libertas et natale solum:

You had good reason, when you stole 'em.

SENT BY DR. DELANY TO DR. SWIFT,

IN ORDER TO BE ADMITTED TO SPEAK TO HIM,

WHEN HE WAS DEAF, 1724.

DEAR sir, I think 'tis doubly hard,
 Your ears and doors should both be barr'd.
 Can any thing be more unkind?
 Must I not see, 'cause you are blind?
 Methinks a friend at night should cheer you,
 A friend that loves to see and hear you.
 Why am I robb'd of that delight,
 When you can be no loser by 't?
 Nay, when 'tis plain (for what is plainer?)
 That, if you heard, you'd be no gainer?

* Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

For sure you are not yet to learn,
That hearing is not your concern.
Then be your doors no longer barr'd:
Your business, sir, is to be heard.

THE ANSWER.

THE wise pretend to make it clear,
'Tis no great loss to lose an ear.
Why are we then so fond of two,
When by experience one would do?
'Tis true, say they, cut off the head,
And there's an end; the man is dead;
Because, among all human race,
None e'er was known to have a brace:
But confidently they maintain,
That where we find the members twain,
The loss of one is no such trouble,
Since t'other will in strength be double.
The limb surviving, you may swear,
Becomes his brother's lawful heir:
Thus, for a trial, let me beg of
Your reverence but to cut one leg off,
And you shall find, by this device,
The other will be stronger twice;
For every day you shall be gaining
New vigour to the leg remaining.
So, when an eye has lost its brother,
You see the better with the other.
Cut off your hand, and you may do
With t'other hand the work of two:

Because

Because the soul her power contracts,
And on the brother limb reacts.

But yet the point is not so clear in Another case, the sense of hearing:
For, though the place of either ear
Be distant, as one head can bear;
Yet Galen most acutely shews you,
(Consult his book de partium usu)
That from each ear, as he observes,
There creep two auditory nerves,
Not to be seen without a glass,
Which near the os petrosum pass;
Thence to the neck; and moving thorough there
One goes to this, and one to t'other ear;
Which made my grandam always stuff her ears,
Both right and left, as fellow sufferers.
You see my learning; but, to shorten it,
When my left ear was deaf a fortnight,
To t'other ear I felt it coming on:
And thus I solve this hard phenomenon.

'Tis true, a glass will bring supplies
To weak, or old, or clouded eyes:
Your arms, though both your eyes were lost,
Would guard your nose against a post:
Without your legs, two legs of wood
Are stronger, and almost as good:
And as for hands, there have been those
Who, wanting both, have us'd their toes*.
But no contrivance yet appears
To furnish artificial ears.

* There have been instances of a man's writing with his foot.

A QUIET LIFE AND A GOOD NAME.

TO A FRIEND WHO MARRIED A SHREW. 1724.

NELL scolded in so loud a din,
 That Will durst hardly venture in :
 He mark'd the conjugal dispute ;
 Nell roar'd incessant, Dick sat mute ;
 But, when he saw his friend appear,
 Cry'd bravely, Patience, good my dear !
 At sight of Will, she bawl'd no more,
 But hurry'd out, and clapt the door.

Why Dick ! the Devil's in thy Nell,
 (Quoth Will) thy house is worse than Hell :
 Why what a peal the jade has rung !
 D—n her, why don't you slit her tongue ?
 For nothing else will make it cease.
 Dear Will, I suffer this for peace :
 I never quarrel with my wife ;
 I bear it for a quiet life.
 Scripture, you know, exhorts us to it ;
 Bids us to seek peace, and ensue it.

Will went again to visit Dick ;
 And entering in the very nick,
 He saw virago Nell belabour,
 With Dick's own staff, his peaceful neighbour :
 Poor Will, who needs must interpose,
 Receiv'd a brace or two of blows.
 But now, to make my story short,
 Will drew out Dick to take a quart.
 Why, Dick, thy wife has devilish whims ;
 Ods-buds ! why don't you break her limbs ?

If

If she were mine, and had such tricks,
I'd teach her how to handle sticks :
Z—ds ! I would ship her to Jamaica,
Or truck the carrion for tobacco :
I'd send her far enough away —
Dear Will ; but what would people say ?
Lord ! I should get so ill a name,
The neighbours round would cry out shame.

Dick suffer'd for his peace and credit ;
But who believ'd him when he said it ?
Can he, who makes himself a slave,
Consult his peace, or credit save ?
Dick found it by his ill success,
His quiet small, his credit less.
She serv'd him at the usual rate ;
She stunn'd, and then she broke his pate :
And, what he thought the hardest case,
The parish jeer'd him to his face ;
Those men, who wore the breeches least,
Call'd him a cuckold, fool, and beast.
At home he was pursu'd with noise ;
Abroad was pester'd by the boys :
Within, his wife would break his bones ;
Without, they pelted him with stones ;
The 'prentices procur'd a riding *,
To act his patience, and her chiding.
False patience and mistaken pride !
There are ten thousand Dicks beside ;
Slaves to their quiet and good name,
Are us'd like Dick, and bear the blame.

* A well-known humourous cavalcade, in ridicule of a scolding wife and henpecked husband.

THE BIRTH OF MANLY VIRTUE.

INSCRIBED TO LORD CARTERET, 1724.

“ Grator & pulchro veniens in corpore Virtus.” VIRG.

ONCE on a time, a righteous sage,
 Griev'd at the vices of the age,
 Applied to Jove with fervent prayer :

“ O Jove, if Virtue be so fair
 “ As it was deem'd in former days,
 “ By Plato and by Socrates,
 “ Whose beauties mortal eyes escape,
 “ Only for want of outward shape :
 “ Make then its real excellence,
 “ For once, the theme of human sense ;
 “ So shall the eye, by form confin'd,
 “ Direct and fix the wandering mind ;
 “ And long deluded mortals see,
 “ With rapture, what they us'd to flee !”

Jove grants the prayer, gives Virtue birth,
 And bids him bless and mend the earth.
 Behold him blooming fresh and fair,
 Now made — ye gods — a son and heir :
 An heir : and, stranger yet to hear,
 An heir, an orphan of a peer ;
 But prodigies are wrought, to prove
 Nothing impossible to Jove.

Virtue was for this sex design'd,
 In mild reproof to womankind ;
 In manly form to let them see,
 The loveliness of modesty,

The

The thousand decencies that shone
With lessen'd lustre in their own ;
Which few had learn'd enough to prize,
And some thought modish to despise.

To make his merit more discern'd,
He goes to school—he reads—is learn'd ;
Rais'd high, above his birth, by knowledge,
He shines distinguish'd in a college ;
Resolv'd nor honour, nor estate,
Himself alone should make him great.
Here soon for every art renown'd,
His influence is diffus'd around ;
Th' inferiour youth, to learning led,
Less to be fam'd than to be fed,
Behold the glory he has won,
And blush to see themselves outdone ;
And now, inflam'd with rival rage,
In scientifick strife engage,
Engage ; and, in the glorious strife,
The arts new kindle into life.

Here would our hero ever dwell,
Fix'd in a lonely learned cell ;
Contented to be truly great,
In Virtue's best belov'd retreat ;
Contented he—but Fate ordains,
He now shall shine in nobler scenes,
Rais'd high, like some celestial fire,
To shine the more, still rising higher ;
Completely form'd in every part,
To win the soul, and glad the heart.
The powerful voice, the graceful mien,
Lovely alike, or heard, or seen ;
The outward form and inward vie,
His soul bright beaming from his eye,

Ennobling every act and air,
With just, and generous, and sincere.
Accomplish'd thus, his next resort
Is to the council and the court,
Where Virtue is in least repute,
And interest the one pursuit ;
Where right and wrong are bought and sold,
Barter'd for beauty, and for gold ;
Here Manly Virtue, even here,
Pleas'd in the person of a peer,
A peer ; a scarcely bearded youth,
Who talk'd of justice and of truth,
Of innocence the surest guard,
Tales here forgot, or yet unheard ;
That he alone deserv'd esteem,
Who was the man he wish'd to seem ;
Call'd it unmanly and unwise,
To lurk behind a mean disguise ;
(Give fraudulent Vice the mask and screen,
'Tis Virtue's interest to be seen ;)
Call'd want of shame a want of sense,
And found, in blushes, eloquence.

Thus, acting what he taught so well,
He drew dumb Merit from her cell,
Led with amazing art along
The bashful dame, and loos'd her tongue ;
And, while he made her value known,
Yet more display'd and rais'd his own.

Thus young, thus proof to all temptations,
He rises to the highest stations ;
For where high honour is the prize,
True Virtue has a right to rise :
Let courtly slaves low bend the knee
To Wealth and Vice in high degree :

Exalted

Exalted Worth disdains to owe
Its grandeur to its greatest foe.

Now rais'd on high, see Virtue shows
The godlike ends for which he rose;
For him, let proud Ambition know
The height of glory here below,
Grandeur, by goodness made complete!
To bless, is truly to be great!
He taught how men to honour rise,
Like gilded vapours to the skies,
Which, howsoever they display
Their glory from the god of day,
Their noblest use is to abate
His dangerous excess of heat,
To shield the infant fruits and flowers,
And bless the earth with genial showers.

Now change the scene; a nobler care
Demands him in a higher sphere*:
Distress of nations calls him hence,
Permitted so by Providence;
For models, made to mend our kind,
To no one clime should be confin'd;
And Manly Virtue, like the sun,
His course of glorious toils should run;
Alike diffusing in his flight
Congenial joy, and life, and light.
Pale Envy sickens, Errour flies,
And Discord in his presence dies;
Oppression hides with guilty dread,
And Merit rears her drooping head;
The arts revive, the vallies sing,
And winter softens into spring:

* Lord Carteret had the honour of mediating peace for Sweden with Denmark and with the czar.

The wondering world, where'er he moves,
 With new delight looks up and loves;
 One sex consenting to admire,
 Nor less the other to desire;
 While he, though seated on a throne,
 Confines his love to one alone;
 The rest condemn'd, with rival voice
 Repining, do applaud his choice.

Fame now reports, the Western Isle
 Is made his mansion for a while,
 Whose anxious natives, night and day,
 (Happy beneath his righteous sway)
 Weary the gods with ceaseless prayer,
 To bless him, and to keep him there;
 And claim it as a debt from Fate,
 Too lately found, to lose him late.

VERSES ON THE UPRIGHT JUDGE,

WHO CONDEMNED THE DRAPIER'S PRINTER.

THE church I hate, and have good reason;
 For there my grandsire cut his weasand:
 He cut his weasand at the altar;
 I keep my gullet for the halter.

ON THE SAME.

IN church your grandsire cut his throat:
 To do the job, too long he tarry'd:
 He should have had my hearty vote,
 To cut his throat before he marry'd

ON THE SAME.

(THE JUDGE SPEAKS.)

I'M not the grandson of that ass * Quin;
 Nor can you prove it, Mr. Pasquin.
 My grand dame had gallants by twenties,
 And bore my mother by a 'prentice.
 This when my grandsire knew, they tell us he
 In Christ church cut his throat for jealousy.
 And, since the alderman was mad you say,
 Then I must be so too, ex traduce.

R I D D L E S.

BY DR. SWIFT AND HIS FRIENDS:

Written in or about the Year 1724.

I.

IN youth exalted high in air,
 Or bathing in the waters fair,
 Nature to form me took delight,
 And clad my body all in white,

* An alderman.

My

My person tall, and slender waist,
On either side with fringes grac'd;
Till me that tyrant man espy'd,
And dragg'd me from my mother's side:
No wonder now I look so thin;
The tyrant stript me to the skin:
My skin he flay'd, my hair he cropt:
At head and foot my body lopt:
And then, with heart more hard than stone,
He pick'd my marrow from the bone.
To vex me more, he took a freak
To slit my tongue, and make me speak:
But, that which wonderful appears,
I speak to eyes, and not to ears.
He oft employs me in disguise,
And makes me tell a thousand lies:
To me he chiefly gives in trust
To please his malice or his lust.
From me no secret he can hide;
I see his vanity and pride:
And my delight is to expose
His follies to his greatest foes.

All languages I can command,
Yet not a word I understand.
Without my aid, the best divine
In learning would not know a line:
The lawyer must forget his pleading;
The scholar could not show his reading.

Nay; man my master is my slave;
I give command to kill or save,
Can grant ten thousand pounds a year,
And make a beggar's brat a peer.

But, while I thus my life relate,
I only hasten on my fate.

My

My tongue is black, my mouth is furr'd,
 I hardly now can force a word.
 I die unpitied and forgot,
 And on some dunghill left to rot.

II.

ALL-ruling tyrant of the earth,
 To vilest slaves I owe my birth.
 How is the greatest monarch blest,
 When in my gawdy livery drest !
 No haughty nymph has power to run
 From me ; or my embraces shun.
 Stabb'd to the heart, condemn'd to flame,
 My constancy is still the same.
 The favourite messenger of Jove,
 And Lemnian God, consulting strove
 To make me glorious to the sight
 Of mortals, and the Gods delight,
 Soon would their altars' flame expire,
 If I refus'd to lend them fire.

III.

BY fate exalted high in place,
 Lo, here I stand with double face ;
 Superiour none on earth I find ;
 But see below me all mankind.
 Yet, as it oft attends the great,
 I almost sink with my own weight.
 At every motion undertook,
 The vulgar all consult my look.

I sometimes give advice in writing,
But never of my own inditing.

I am a courtier in my way;
For those who rais'd me, I betray;
And some give out that I entice
To lust, and luxury, and dice;
Who punishments on me inflict,
Because they find their pockets pickt.

By riding post, I lose my health;
And only to get others wealth.

IV.

BECAUSE I am by nature blind,
I wisely choose to walk behind;
However, to avoid disgrace,
I let no creature see my face.
My words are few, but spoke with sense;
And yet my speaking gives offence:
Or, if to whisper I presume,
The company will fly the room.
By all the world I am oppress;
And my oppression gives them rest.

Through me, though sore against my will,
Instructors every art instil.
By thousands I am sold and bought,
Who neither get nor lose a groat;
For none, alas! by me can gain,
But those who give me greatest pain.
Shall man presume to be my master,
Who's but my caterer and taster?
Yet, though I always have my will,
I'm but a meer dependers still:

An humble hanger on at best ;
 Of whom all people make a jest.
 In me detractors seek to find
 Two vices of a different kind :
 I'm too profuse, some censurers cry,
 And all I get, I let it fly :
 While others give me many a curse,
 Because too close I hold my purse.
 But this I know, in either case
 They dare not charge me to my face.
 'Tis true, indeed, sometimes I save,
 Sometimes run out of all I have ;
 But, when the year is at an end,
 Computing what I get and spend,
 My goings-out, and comings-in,
 I cannot find I lose or win ;
 And therefore all that know me say,
 I justly keep the middle way.
 I'm always by my betters led ;
 I last get up, and first abed ;
 Though, if I rise before my time,
 The learn'd in sciences sublime
 Consult the stars, and thence foretell
 Good luck to those with whom I dwell.

 V.

THE joy of man, the pride of brutes,
 Domestick subject for disputes,
 Of plenty thou the emblem fair,
 Adorn'd by nymphs with all their care !
 I saw thee rais'd to high renown,
 Supporting half the British crown ;

An l

And often have I seen thee grace
The chaste Diana's infant face;
And whensoever you please to shine,
Less useful is her light than thine:
Thy numerous fingers know their way,
And oft in Cælia's tresses play.

To place thee in another view,
I'll show the world strange things and true;
What lords and dames of high degree
May justly claim their birth from thee!
The soul of man with spleen you vex:
Of spleen you cure the female sex.
Thee for a gift the courtier sends
With pleasure to his special friends:
He gives, and with a generous pride,
Contrives all means the gift to hide:
Nor oft can the receiver know,
Whether he has the gift or no.
On airy wings you take your flight,
And fly unseen both day and night;
Conceal your form with various tricks;
And few know how or where you fix:
Yet some, who ne'er bestow'd thee, boast
That they to others give thee most.
Mean time, the wise a question start,
If thou a real being art;
Or but a creature of the brain,
That gives imaginary pain?
But the sly giver better knows thee;
Who feels true joys when he bestows thee.

VI.

THOUGH I, alas ! a prisoner be,
My trade is prisoners to set free.
No slave his lord's commands obeys
With such insinuating ways.
My genius piercing, sharp, and bright,
Wherein the men of wit delight.
The clergy keep me for their ease,
And turn and wind me as they please.
A new and wondrous art I show
Of raising spirits from below ;
In scarlet some, and some in white ;
They rise, walk round, yet never fright.
In at each mouth the spirits pass,
Distinctly seen as through a glass :
O'er head and body make a rout,
And drive at last all secrets out :
And still, the more I show my art,
The more they open every heart.

A greater chemist none than I,
Who, from materials hard and dry,
Have taught men to extract with skill
More precious juice than from a still.

Although I'm often out of case,
I'm not asham'd to show my face.
Though at the tables of the great
I near the sideboard take my seat ;
Yet the plain 'squire, when dinner's done,
Is never pleas'd till I make one :
He kindly bids me near him stand ;
And often takes me by the hand.

I twice a day a hunting go ;
 Nor ever fail to seize my foe ;
 And when I have him by the pole,
 I drag him upward from his hole ;
 Though some are of so stubborn kind,
 I'm forc'd to leave a limb behind.

I hourly wait some fatal end ;
 For I can break, but scorn to bend.

VII.

THE GULF OF ALL HUMAN POSSESSIONS.

COME hither, and behold the fruits,
 Vain man ! of all thy vain pursuits.
 Take wise advice, and look behind,
 Bring all past actions to thy mind.
 Here you may see, as in a glass,
 How soon all human pleasures pass.
 How will it mortify thy pride,
 To turn the true impartial side !
 How will your eyes contain their tears,
 When all the sad reverse appears !

This cave within its womb confines
 The last result of all designs :
 Here lie deposited the spoils
 Of busy mortals' endless toils :
 Here, with an easy search, we find
 The foul corruptions of mankind.
 The wretched purchase here behold
 Of traitors, who their country sold.

This gulf insatiate imbibes
 The lawyer's fees, the statesman's bribes.

Here,

Here, in their proper shape and mien,
Fraud, perjury, and guilt, are seen.

Necessity, the tyrant's law,
All human race must hither draw ;
All prompted by the same desire,
The vigorous youth, and aged sire.
Behold, the coward and the brave,
The haughty prince, the humble slave,
Physician, lawyer, and divine,
All make oblations at this shrine.
Some enter boldly, some by stealth,
And leave behind their fruitless wealth.
For, while the bashful sylvan maid,
As half asham'd, and half afraid,
Approaching finds it hard to part
With that which dwelt so near her heart ;
The courtly dame, unmov'd by fear,
Profusely pours her offerings here.

A treasure here of learning lurks,
Huge heaps of never-dying works :
Labours of many an ancient sage,
And millions of the present age.

In at this gulf all offerings pass,
And lie an undistinguish'd mass.
Deucalion, to restore mankind,
Was bid to throw the stones behind ;
So those who here their gifts convey
Are forc'd to look another way ;
For few, a chosen few, must know
The mysteries that lie below.

Sad charnelhouse ! a dismal dome,
For which all mortals leave their home !
The young, the beautiful, and brave,
Here bury'd in one common grave !

Where each supply of dead renews
Unwholesome damps, offensive dews :
And lo ! the writing on the walls
Points out where each new victim falls ;
The food of worms and beasts obscene,
Who round the vault luxuriant reign.

See where those mangled corpses lie,
Condemn'd by female hands to die ;
A comely dame, once clad in white,
Lies there consign'd to endless night ;
By cruel hands her blood was spilt,
And yet her wealth was all her guilt.

And here six virgins in a tomb,
All-beauteous offspring of one womb,
Oft in the train of Venus seen,
As fair and lovely as their queen :
In royal garments each was drest,
Each with a gold and purple vest ;
I saw them of their garments stript,
Their throats were cut, their bellies ript,
Twice were they bury'd, twice were born,
Twice from their sepulchres were torn ;
But now dismember'd here are cast,
And find a resting-place at last.

Here oft the curious traveller finds
The combat of opposing winds :
And seeks to learn the secret cause,
Which alien seems from nature's laws ;
Why at this cave's tremendous mouth,
He feels at once both north and south :
Whether the winds, in caverns pent,
Through clefts oppugnant force a vent :
Or whether, opening all his stores,
Fierce Æolus in tempest roars.

Yet,

Yet, from this mingled mass of things,
 In time a new creation springs.
 These crude materials once shall rise.
 To fill the earth, and air, and skies :
 In various forms appear again,
 Of vegetables, brutes, and men.
 So Jove pronounc'd among the gods,
 Olympus trembling as he nods.

VIII.

LOUISA* TO STREPHON.

AH! Strephon, how can you despise
 Her, who without thy pity dies?
 To Strephon I have still been true,
 And of as noble blood as you;
 Fair issue of the genial bed,
 A virgin in thy bosom bred;
 Embrac'd thee closer than a wife;
 When thee I leave, I leave my life.
 Why should my shepherd take amiss,
 That oft I wake thee with a kiss?
 Yet you of every kiss complain;
 Ah! is not love a pleasing pain?
 A pain which every happy night
 You cure with ease and with delight;
 With pleasure, as the poet sings,
 Too great for mortals less than kings.

Chloe, when on thy breast I lie,
 Observes me with revengeful eye:

* This riddle is solved by an anagram.

If Chloe o'er thy heart prevails,
 She'll tear me with her desperate nails;
 And with relentless hands destroy
 The tender pledges of our joy.
 Nor have I bred a spurious race;
 They all were born from thy embrace.

Consider, Strephon, what you do;
 For, should I die for love of you,
 I'll haunt thy dreams, a bloodless ghost;
 And all my kin (a numerous host,
 Who down direct our lineage bring
 From victors o'er the Memphian king;
 Renown'd in sieges and campaigns,
 Who never fled the bloody plains;
 Who in tempestuous seas can sport,
 And scorn the pleasures of a court;
 From whom great Sylla found his doom,
 Who scourg'd to death that scourge of Rome)
 Shall on thee take a vengeance dire;
 Thou, like Alcides, shalt expire,
 When his envenom'd shirt he wore,
 And skin and flesh in pieces tore.
 Nor less that shirt, my rival's gift,
 Cut from the piece that made her shift,
 Shall in thy dearest blood be dy'd,
 And make thee tear thy tainted hide.

IX.

DEPRIV'D of root, and branch, and rind,
 Yet flowers I bear of every kind;
 And such is my prolifick power,
 They bloom in less than half an hour;

Yet

Yet standers by may plainly see
 They get no nourishment from me.
 My head with giddiness goes round;
 And yet I firmly stand my ground:
 All over naked I am seen,
 And painted like an Indian queen.
 No couple-beggar in the land
 E'er join'd such numbers hand in hand;
 I join'd them fairly with a ring;
 Nor can our parson blame the thing:
 And, though no marriage words are spoke,
 They part not till the ring is broke;
 Yet hypocrite fanaticks cry,
 I'm but an idol rais'd on high:
 And once a weaver in our town,
 A damn'd Cromwellian, knock'd me down.
 I lay a prisoner twenty years,
 And then the jovial cavaliers
 To their old post restor'd all three,
 I mean the church, the king, and me.

X.

I WITH borrow'd silver shine,
 What you see is none of mine.
 First I show you but a quarter,
 Like the bow that guards the Tartar;
 Then the half, and then the whole,
 Ever dancing round the pole.
 And, what will raise your admiration,
 I am not one of God's creation,
 But sprung (and I this truth maintain)
 Like Pallas from my father's brain.

And, after all, I chiefly owe
 My beauty to the shades below.
 Most wondrous forms you see me wear,
 A man, a woman, lion, bear,
 A fish, a fowl, a cloud, a field,
 All figures Heaven or earth can yield;
 Like Daphne sometimes in a tree:
 Yet am not one of all you see.

XI.

I'M up and down, and round about,
 Yet all the world can't find me out,
 Though hundreds have employ'd their leisure,
 They never yet could find my measure.
 I'm found almost in every garden,
 Nay in the compass of a farthing.
 There's neither chariot, coach, nor mill,
 Can move an inch except I will.

XII.

I AM jet black, as you may see,
 The son of pitch, and gloomy night:
 Yet all that know me will agree,
 I'm dead except I live in light.
 Sometimes in panegyrick high,
 Like lofty Pindar, I can soar:
 And raise a virgin to the sky,
 Or sink her to a pocky whore.

My

My blood this day is very sweet,
To morrow of a bitter juice ;
Like milk, 'tis cry'd about the street,
And so apply'd to different use.

Most wondrous is my magick power :
For with one colour I can paint ;
I'll make the devil a saint this hour,
Next make a devil of a saint.

Through distant regions I can fly,
Provide me but with paper wings ;
And fairly show a reason why
There should be quarrels among kings.

And, after all, you'll think it odd,
When learned doctors will dispute,
That I should point the word of God,
And show where they can best confute.

Let lawyers bawl and strain their throats :
'Tis I that must the lands convey,
And strip the clients to their coats ;
Nay, give their very souls away.

XIII.

ALL of us in one you'll find,
Brethren of a wondrous kind ;
Yet among us all no brother
Knows one tittle of the other ;
We in frequent councils are,
And our marks of things declare,
Where, to us unknown, a clerk
Sits, and takes them in the dark.

He's

He's the register of all
 In our ken, both great and small ;
 By us forms his laws and rules,
 He's our master ; we his tools ;
 Yet we can with greatest ease
 Turn and wind him where we please.

One of us alone can sleep,
 Yet no watch the rest will keep,
 But the moment that he closes,
 Every brother else reposes.

If wine's bought, or victuals drest,
 One enjoys them for the rest.

Pierce us all with wounding steel,
 One for all of us will feel.

Though ten thousand cannons roar,
 Add to them ten thousand more,
 Yet but one of us is found
 Who regards the dreadful sound.

Do what is not fit to tell,
 There's but one of us can smell.

XIV.

FONTINELLA TO FLORINDA.

WHEN on my bosom thy bright eyes,
 Florinda, dart their heavenly beams,
 I feel not the least love surprise,
 Yet endless tears flow down in streams ;
 There's nought so beautiful in thee,
 But you may find the same in me,

The

The lilies of thy skin compare ;
 In me you see them full as white.

The roses of your cheeks, I dare
 Affirm, can't glow to more delight.

Then, since I show as fine a face,
 Can you refuse a soft embrace ?

Ah ! lovely nymph, thou'rt in thy prime !

And so am I while thou art here ;
 But soon will come the fatal time,
 When all we see shall disappear.

'Tis mine to make a just reflection,
 And yours to follow my direction.

Then catch admirers while you may ;

Treat not your lovers with disdain ;
 For time with beauty flies away,
 And there is no return again.

To you the sad account I bring,
 Life's autumn has no second spring.

XV.

NEVER sleeping, still awake,

Pleasing most when most I speak ;

The delight of old and young,

Though I speak without a tongue.

Nought but one thing can confound me,

Many voices joining round me ;

Then I fret, and rave, and gabble,

Like the labourers of Babel.

Now I am a dog, or cow,

I can bark, or I can low,

I can

I can bleat, or I can sing,
 Like the warblers of the spring.
 Let the lo esick bard complain,
 And I mourn the cruel pain;
 Let the happy swain rejoice,
 And I join my helping voice;
 Both are welcome, grief or joy,
 I with either sport and toy.
 Though a lady, I am stout,
 Drums and trumpets bring me out:
 Then I clash, and roar, and rattle,
 Join in all the din of battle.
 Jove, with all his loudest thunder,
 When I'm vex't, can't keep me under;
 Yet so tender is my ear,
 That the lowest voice I fear;
 Much I dread the courtier's fate,
 When his merit's out of date,
 For I hate a silent breath,
 And a whisper is my death.

 XVI.

BY something form'd, I nothing am,
 Yet every thing that you can name;
 In no place have I ever been,
 Yet every where I may be seen;
 In all things false, yet always true,
 I'm still the same—but never new.
 Lifeless, life's perfect form I wear,
 Can show a nose, eye, tongue, or ear,
 Yet neither smell, see, taste, or hear.

 All

All shapes and features I can boast,
 No flesh, no bones, no blood—no ghost:
 All colours, without paint, put on,
 And change like theameleon.
 Swiftly I come, and enter there,
 Where not a chink lets in the air;
 Like thought, I'm in a moment gone,
 Nor can I ever be alone;
 All things on earth I imitate,
 Faster than nature can create;
 Sometimes imperial robes I wear,
 Anon in beggar's rags appear;
 A giant now, and straight an elf,
 I'm every one, but ne'er myself;
 Ne'er sad I mourn, ne'er glad rejoice,
 I move my lips, but want a voice;
 I ne'er was born, nor ne'er can die,
 Then prithee tell me what am I.

 XVII.

MOST things by me do rise and fall,
 And as I please they're great and small;
 Invading foes without resistance,
 With ease I make to keep their distance;
 Again, as I'm dispos'd, the foe
 Will come, though not a foot they go.
 Both mountains, woods, and hills, and rocks,
 And gamesome goats, and fleecy flocks,
 And lowing herds, and piping swains,
 Come dancing to me o'er the plains.
 The greatest whale that swims the sea
 Does instantly my power obey.

In

In vain from me the sailor flies,
 The quickest ship I can surprise,
 And turn it as I have a mind,
 And move it against tide and wind.
 Nay, bring me here the tallest man,
 I'll squeeze him to a little span;
 Or bring a tender child and pliant,
 You'll see me stretch him to a giant;
 Nor shall they in the least complain,
 Because my magick gives no pain.

 XVIII.

EVER eating, never cloying,
 All devouring, all destroying,
 Never finding full repast,
 Till I eat the world at last.

 XIX.

THERE is a gate, we know full well,
 That stands 'twixt Heaven, and earth, and Hell.
 Where many for a passage venture,
 Yet very few are fond to enter:
 Although 'tis open night and day,
 They for that reason shun this way:
 Both dukes and lords abhor its wood,
 They can't come near it for their blood.
 What other way they take to go,
 Another time I'll let you know.
 Yet commoners with greatest ease
 Can find an entrance when they please.

The

The poorest hither march in state
 (Or they can never pass the gate)
 Like Roman generals triumphant,
 And then they take a turn and jump on 't.
 If gravest parsons here advance,
 They cannot pass before they dance ;
 There 's not a soul that does resort here,
 But strips himself to pay the porter.

 XX.

WE are little airy creatures,
 All of different voice and features ;
 One of us in glass is set,
 One of us you 'll find in jet.
 T' other you may see in tin,
 And the fourth a box within.
 If the fifth you should pursue,
 It can never fly from you.

 XXI.

FROM Heaven I fall, though from earth I begin,
 No lady alive can show such a skin.
 I'm bright as an angel, and light as a feather,
 But heavy and dark, when you squeeze me together.
 Though candour and truth in my aspect I bear,
 Yet many poor creatures I help to ensnare.
 Though so much of Heaven appears in my make,
 The foulest impressions I easily take.
 My parent and I produce one another,
 The mother the daughter, the daughter the mother.

XXII.

XXII.

BEGOTTEN, and born, and dying with noise,
 The terrour of women, and pleasure of boys,
 Like the fiction of poets concerning the wind,
 I'm chiefly unruly when strongest confin'd.
 For silver and gold I don't trouble my head,
 But all I delight in is pieces of lead;
 Except when I trade with a ship or a town,
 Why then I make pieces of iron go down.
 One property more I would have you remark,
 No lady was ever more fond of a spark;
 The moment I get one, my soul's all a-fire,
 And I roar out my joy, and in transport expire.

XXIII.

WE are little brethren twain,
 Arbiters of loss and gain,
 Many to our counters run,
 Some are made, and some undone:
 But men find it to their cost,
 Few are made, but numbers lost.
 Though we play them tricks for ever,
 Yet they always hope our favour.

XXIV.

XXIV.

TO LADY CARTERET.

OF all inhabitants on earth,
 To man alone I owe my birth,
 And yet the cow, the sheep, the bee,
 Are all my parents more than he :
 I, a virtue, strange and rare,
 Make the fairest look more fair ;
 And myself, which yet is rarer,
 Growing old, grow still the fairer.
 Like sots, alone I'm dull enough,
 When dos'd with smoak, and smear'd with snuff;
 But, in the midst of mirth and wine,
 I with double lustre shine.
 Emblem of the Fair am I,
 Polish'd neck, and radiant eye ;
 In my eye my greatest grace,
 Emblem of the Cyclops' race,
 Metals I like them subdue,
 Slave like them to Vulcan too.
 Emblem of a monarch old,
 Wise, and glorious to behold ;
 Wasted he appears, and pale,
 Watching for the publick weal :
 Emblem of the bashful dame,
 That in secret feeds her flame,
 Often aiding to impart
 All the secrets of her heart :
 Various is my bulk and hue,
 Big like Bess, and small like Sue :

Now brown and burnish'd like a nut,
 At other times a very slut;
 Often fair, and soft, and tender,
 Taper, tall, and smooth, and slender;
 Like Flora, deck'd with fairest flowers,
 Like Phœbus, guardian of the hours:
 But, whatever be my dress,
 Greater be my size or less,
 Swelling be my shape or small,
 Like thyself I shine in all.
 Clouded if my face is seen,
 My complexion wan and green,
 Languid like a lovesick maid,
 Steel affords me present aid.
 Soon or late, my date is done,
 As my thread of life is spun;
 Yet to cut the fatal thread
 Oft revives my drooping head;
 Yet I perish in my prime,
 Seldom by the death of time;
 Die like lovers as they gaze,
 Die for those I live to please;
 Pine unpitied to my urn,
 Nor warm the fair for whom I burn;
 Unpitied, unlamented too,
 Die like all that look on you.

XXV.

TO LADY CARTERET.

BY DR. DELANY.

I REACH all things near me, and far off to boot,
 Without stretching a finger, or stirring a foot;
 I take them all in too, to add to your wonder,
 Though many and various, and large and asunder.
 Without jostling or crowding they pass side by side,
 Through a wonderful wicket, not half an inch wide:
 Then I lodge them at ease in a very large store,
 Of no breadth or length, with a thousand things more.
 All this I can do without witchcraft or charm,
 Though sometimes, they say, I bewitch and do harm;
 Though cold, I inflame; and though quiet, invade;
 And nothing can shield from my spell but a shade.
 A thief that has robb'd you, or done you disgrace,
 In magical mirrour, I'll show you his face:
 Nay, if you'll believe what the poets have said,
 They'll tell you I kill, and can call back the dead.
 Like conjurers safe in my circle I dwell,
 I love to look black too, it heightens my spell;
 Though my magick is mighty in every hue,
 Who see all my power must see it in You.

ANSWERED BY DR. SWIFT.

WITH half an eye your riddle I spy,
 I observe your wicket hemm'd in by a thicket,
 And whatever passes is strained through glasses.
 You say it is quiet: I flatly deny it.

It wanders about, without stirring out;
No passion so weak but gives it a tweak;
Love, joy, and devotion, set it always in motion.
And as for the tragick effects of its magick,
When you say it can kill, or revive at its will,
The dead are all sound, and the live above ground:
After all you have writ, it cannot be wit;
Which plainly does follow, since it flies from Apollo.
Its cowardice such, it cries at a touch;
'Tis a perfect milksop, grows drunk with a drop.
Another great fault, it cannot bear salt:
And a hair can disarm it of every charm.

XXVI.

TO LADY CARTERET.

BY DR. SWIFT.

FROM India's burning clime I'm brought,
With cooling gales like zephyrs fraught.
Nor Iris, when she paints the sky,
Can show more different hues than I;
Nor can she change her form so fast,
I'm now a sail, and now a mast.
I here am red, and there am green,
A beggar there, and here a queen.
I sometimes live in house of hair,
And oft in hand of lady fair.
I please the young, I grace the old,
And am at once both hot and cold.
Say what I am then, if you can,
And find the rhyme, and you're the man.

AN-

ANSWERED BY DR. SHERIDAN.

YOUR house of hair, and lady's hand
At first did put me to a stand.
I have it now—'tis plain enough—
Your hairy business is a muff.
Your engine fraught with cooling gales,
At once so like your masts and sails;
And for the rhyme to you're the man,
What fits it better than a fan?

A RECEIPT

TO RESTORE STELLA'S YOUTH. 1724-5.

THE Scottish hinds, too poor to house
In frosty nights their starving cows,
While not a blade of grass or hay
Appears from Michaelmas to May,
Must let their cattle range in vain
For food along the barren plain.
Meagre and lank with fasting grown,
And nothing left but skin and bone;
Expos'd to want, and wind, and weather,
They just keep life and soul together,
Till summer showers and evening's dew
Again the verdant glebe renew;
And, as the vegetables rise,
The famish'd cow her want supplies:
Without an ounce of last year's flesh;
Whate'er she gains is young and fresh;

Grows plump and round, and full of mettle,
 As rising from Medea's kettle,
 With youth and beauty to enchant
 Europa's counterfeit gallant.

Why, Stella, should you knit your brow,
 If I compare you to a cow?

'Tis just the case; for you have fasted

So long, till all your flesh is wasted;

And must against the warmer days

Be sent to Quilca down to graze;

Where mirth, and exercise, and air,

Will soon your appetite repair:

The nutriment will from within,

Round all your body, plump your skin;

Will agitate the lazy flood,

And fill your veins with sprightly blood:

Nor flesh nor blood will be the same,

Nor aught of Stella but the name;

For what was ever understood,

By humankind, but flesh and blood?

And if your flesh and blood be new,

You'll be no more the former you;

But for a blooming nymph will pass,

Just fifteen, coming summer's grass,

Your jetty locks with garlands crown'd:

While all the 'squires for nine miles round,

Attended by a brace of curs,

With jockey boots and silver spurs,

No less than justices o' quorum,

Their cow-boys bearing cloaks before 'em,

Shall leave deciding broken pates,

To kiss your steps at Quilca gates.

But, lest you should my skill disgrace,

Come back before you're out of case;

For

For if to Michaelmas you stay,
 The new-born flesh will melt away;
 The 'squire in scorn will fly the house
 For better game, and look for grouse;
 But here, before the frost can mar it,
 We'll make it firm with beef and claret.

STELLA'S BIRTH-DAY. 1724-5.

AS, when a beauteous nymph decays,
 We say, she's past her dancing days;
 So poets lose their feet by time,
 And can no longer dance in rhyme.
 Your annual bard had rather chose
 To celebrate your birth in prose:
 Yet merry folks, who want by chance
 A pair to make a country dance,
 Call the old housekeeper, and get her
 To fill a place, for want of better;
 While Sheridan is off the hooks,
 And friend Delany at his books,
 That Stella may avoid disgrace,
 Once more the dean supplies their place.

Beauty and wit, too sad a truth!
 Have always been confin'd to youth;
 The god of wit and beauty's queen,
 He twenty-one, and she fifteen.
 No poet ever sweetly sung,
 Unless he were, like Phoebus, young;
 Nor ever nymph inspir'd to rhyme,
 Unless, like Venus, in her prime,

At fifty-six, if this be true,
 Am I a poet fit for you?
 Or, at the age of forty three,
 Are you a subject fit for me?
 Adieu! bright wit, and radiant eyes!
 You must be grave, and I be wise.
 Our fate in vain we would oppose:
 But I'll be still your friend in prose:
 Esteem and friendship to express,
 Will not require poetick dress;
 And, if the Muse deny her aid
 To have them sung, they may be said.

But, Stella, say, what evil tongue
 Reports you are no longer young;
 That Time sits, with his sithe to mow
 Where erst sat Cupid with his bow;
 That half your locks are turn'd to gray?
 I'll ne'er believe a word they say.
 'Tis true, but let it not be known,
 My eyes are somewhat dimmish grown:
 For nature, always in the right,
 To your decays adapts my sight;
 And wrinkles undistinguish'd pass,
 For I'm asham'd to use a glass;
 And till I see them with these eyes,
 Whoever says you have them, lyes.

No length of time can make you quit
 Honour and virtue, sense and wit:
 Thus you may still be young to me,
 While I can better hear than see.
 O, ne'er may Fortune show her spight,
 To make me deaf, and mend my sight!

AN EPIGRAM

ON WOOD'S BRASS MONEY.

CARTERET was welcom'd to the shore
 First with the brazen cannons roar;
 To meet him next the soldier comes,
 With brazen trumps and brazen drums;
 Approaching near the town, he hears
 The brazen bells salute his ears:
 But, when Wood's brass began to sound,
 Guns, trumpets, drums, and bells, were drown'd.

A SIMILE,

ON OUR WANT OF SILVER.

AND THE ONLY WAY TO REMEDY IT. 1725.

AS when of old some sorceress threw
 O'er the moon's face a sable hue,
 To drive unseen her magick chair,
 At midnight through the darken'd air;
 Wise people, who believ'd with reason
 That this eclipse was out of season,
 Affirm'd the moon was sick, and fell
 To cure her by a counter spell.
 Ten thousand cymbals now begin
 To rend the skies with brazen din;
 The cymbals' rattling sounds dispel
 The cloud, and drive the hag to Hell.

The

The moon, deliver'd from her pain,
 Displays her silver face again.
 Note here, that in the chemick style,
 The moon is silver all this while.

So (if my simile you minded,
 Which I confess is too longwinded)
 When late a feminine magician*,
 Join'd with a brazen politician,
 Expos'd to blind the nation's eyes,
 A parchment † of prodigious size;
 Conceal'd behind that ample screen,
 There was no silver to be seen.
 But to this parchment let the Drapier
 Oppose his countercharm of paper,
 And ring Wood's copper in our ears
 So loud till all the nation hears;
 That sound will make the parchment shrivel,
 And drive the conjurers to the Devil:
 And when the sky is grown serene,
 Our silver will appear again.

WOOD AN INSECT. 1725.

BY long observation I have understood,
 That two little vermin are kin to Will Wood.
 The first is an insect they call a wood-louse,
 That folds up itself in itself for a house,
 As round as a ball, without head, without tail,
 Inclos'd cap à pié in a strong coat of mail.

* A great lady was said to have been bribed by Wood.

† The patent for coining halfpence.

And thus William Wood to my fancy appears
 In fillets of brass roll'd up to his ears :
 And over these fillets he wisely has thrown,
 To keep out of danger, a doublet of stone *.
 The louse of the wood for a medicine is us'd,
 Or swallow'd alive, or skilfully bruis'd.

And, let but our mother Hibernia contrive
 To swallow Will Wood either bruis'd or alive,
 She need be no more with the jaundice possest,
 Or sick of obstructions, and pains in her chest.

The next is an insect we call a wood-worm,
 That lies in old wood like a hare in her form ;
 With teeth or with claws it will bite or will scratch,
 And chambermaids christen this worm a deathwatch ;
 Because like a watch it always cries click ;
 Then woe be to those in the house who are sick :
 For, as sure as a gun, they will give up the ghost,
 If the maggot cries click when it scratches the post.
 But a kettle of scalding hot water injected
 Infallibly cures the timber affected :
 The omen is broken, the danger is over ;
 The maggot will die, and the sick will recover.
 Such a worm was Will Wood, when he scratch'd at the door

Of a governing statesman or favourite whore :
 The death of our nation he seem'd to foretell,
 And the sound of his brass we took for our knell.
 But now, since the Drapier has heartily maul'd him,
 I think the best thing we can do is to scald him.
 For which operation there's nothing more proper
 Than the liquor he deals in, his own melted copper ;

* He was in gaol for debt.

Unless,

Unless, like the Dutch, you rather would boil
 This coiner of raps * in a cauldron of oil.
 Then choose which you please, and let each bring a faggot,
 For our fear's at an end with the death of the maggot.

ON WOOD THE IRONMONGER.

1725.

SALMONEUS, as the Grecian tale is,
 Was a mad coppersmith of Elis;
 Up at his forge by morning peep,
 No creature in the lane could sleep;
 Among a crew of roystering fellows
 Would sit whole evenings at the alehouse:
 His wife and children wanted bread,
 While he went always drunk to bed.
 This vapouring scab must needs devise
 To ape the thunder of the skies:
 With brass two fiery steeds he shod,
 To make a clattering as they trod.
 Of polish'd brass his flaming car
 Like lightning dazzled from afar;
 And up he mounts into the box,
 And he must thunder, with a pox.
 Then furious he begins his march,
 Drives rattling o'er a brazen arch:
 With squibs and crackers arm'd, to throw
 Among the trembling crowd below.
 All ran to prayers, both priests and laity,
 To pacify this angry deity:

* Counterfeit halfpence.

When

When Jove, in pity to the town,
 With real thunder knock'd him down.
 Then what a huge delight were all in,
 To see the wicked varlet sprawling;
 They search'd his pockets on the place,
 And found his copper all was base;
 They laugh'd at such an Irish blunder,
 To take the noise of brass for thunder.

The moral of this tale is proper,
 Apply'd to Wood's adulterate copper:
 Which, as he scatter'd, we like dolts
 Mistook at first for thunderbolts,
 Before the Drapier shot a letter,
 (Nor Jove himself could do it better)
 Which, lighting on th' impostor's crown,
 Like real thunder knock'd him down.

WILL WOOD'S PETITION TO THE PEOPLE OF IRELAND.

BEING AN EXCELLENT NEW SONG, SUPPOSED TO BE MADE AND SUNG IN THE STREETS OF DUBLIN,
 BY WILLIAM WOOD,
 IRONMONGER AND HALFPENNYMONGER.

1725.

MY dear Irish folks,
 Come leave off your jokes,
 And buy up my halfpence so fine;
 So fair and so bright,
 They'll give you delight;
 Observe how they glisten and shine!

They'll

They 'll sell, to my grief,
As cheap as neckbeef,
For counters at cards to your wife:
And every day
Your children may play
Spanfarthing, or toss on the knife.

Come hither, and try;
I 'll teach you to buy
A pot of good ale for a farthing:
Come; threepence a score,
I ask you no more,
And a fig for the Drapier and Harding*.

When tradesmen have gold,
The thief will be bold,
By day and by night for to rob him:
My copper is such,
No robber will touch,
And so you may daintily bob him.

The little blackguard,
Who gets very hard
His halfpence for cleaning your shoes:
When his pockets are cramm'd
With mine and be d—'d,
He may swear he has nothing to lose.

Here 's halfpence in plenty,
For one you 'll have twenty,
Though thousands are not worth a pudden.
Your neighbours will think,
When your pocket cries chink,
You are grown plaguy rich on a sudden.

* The Drapier's printer.

You

You will be my thankers,
 I'll make you my bankers,
 As good as Ben Burton or Fade * :
 For nothing shall pass
 But my pretty brass,
 And then you'll be all of a trade.
 I'm a son of a whore
 If I have a word more
 To say in this wretched condition.
 If my coin will not pass,
 I must die like an ass ;
 And so I conclude my petition.

A NEW SONG
ON WOOD'S HALFPENCE.

YE people of Ireland, both country and city,
 Come listen with patience, and hear out my ditty :
 At this time I'll choose to be wiser than witty.

Which nobody can deny.

The halfpence are coming, the nation's undoing,
 There's an end of your ploughing, and baking, and brewing ;

In short, you must all go to rack and to ruin.

Which, &c.

Both high men and low men, and thick men and tall
men,

And rich men and poor men, and free men and thrall
men,

Will suffer; and this man, and that man, and all men.

Which, &c.

* Two famous bankers.

The soldier is ruin'd, poor man ! by his pay ;
His fivepence will prove but a farthing a day,
For meat, or for drink ; or he must run away.

Which, &c.

When he pulls out his twopence, the tapster says not,
That ten times as much he must pay for his shot ;
And thus the poor soldier must soon go to pot.

Which, &c.

If he goes to the baker, the baker will huff,
And twentypence have for a twopenny loaf,
Then, dog, rogue, and rascal, and so kick and cuff.

Which, &c.

Again, to the market whenever he goes,
The butcher and soldier must be mortal foes,
One cuts off an ear, and the other a nose.

Which, &c.

The butcher is stout, and he values no swagger ;
A cleaver 's a match any time for a dagger,
And a blue sleeve may give such a cuff as may stagger.

Which, &c.

The beggars themselves will be broke in a trice,
When thus their poor farthings are sunk in their price ;

When nothing is left, they must live on their lice.

Which, &c.

The squire possess'd of twelve thousand a year,
O Lord ! what a mountain his rents would appear !
Should he take them, he would not have houseroom,
I fear.

Which, &c.

Though

Though at present he lives in a very large house,
There would then not be room in it left for a mouse;
But the squire's too wise, he will not take a souse.

Which, &c.

The farmer, who comes with his rent in this cash,
For taking these counters, and being so rash,
Will be kick'd out of doors, both himself and his trash.

Which, &c.

For, in all the leases that ever we hold,
We must pay our rent in good silver and gold,
And not in brass tokens of such a base mould.

Which, &c.

The wisest of lawyers all swear, they will warrant
No money but silver and gold can be current;
And, since they will swear it, we all may be sure on't.

Which, &c.

And I think, after all, it would be very strange,
To give current money for base in exchange,
Like a fine lady swopping her moles for the mange.

Which, &c.

But read the king's patent, and there you will find,
That no man need take them but who has a mind,
For which we must say that his Majesty's kind.

Which, &c.

Now God bless the Drapier who open'd our eyes!
I'm sure, by his book, that the writer is wise:
He shows us the cheat, from the end to the rise.

Which, &c.

Nay, farther he shows it a very hard case,
That this fellow Wood, of a very bad race,
Should of all the fine gentry of Ireland take place.

Which, &c.

That he and his halfpence should come to weigh down

Our subjects so loyal and true to the crown;
But I hope, after all, that they will be his own.

Which, &c.

This book, I do tell you, is writ for your goods,
And a very good book 'tis against Mr. Wood's;
If you stand true together, he's left in the suds.

Which, &c.

Ye shopmen and tradesmen and farmers, go read it,
For I think in my soul at this time that you need it;
Or egad, if you don't, there's an end of your credit.

Which nobody can deny.

A SERIOUS POEM

UPON WILLIAM WOOD, BRASIER, TINKER, HARDWAREMAN, COINER, FOUNDER, AND ESQUIRE.

WHEN foes are o'ercome, we preserve them from slaughter,
To be hewers of Wood, and drawers of water.
Now, although to draw water is not very good;
Yet we all should rejoice to be hewers of Wood.
I own, it has often provok'd me to mutter,
That a rogue so obscure should make such a clutter:
But ancient philosophers wisely remark,
That old rotten Wood will shine in the dark.
The Heathens, we read, had Gods made of Wood,
Who could do them no harm, if they did them no good:

But

But this idol Wood may do us great evil :
 Their Gods were of Wood ; but our Wood is the Devil.

To cut down fine Wood, is a very bad thing ;
 And yet we all know much gold it will bring :
 Then, if cutting down Wood brings money good store,

Our money to keep, let us cut down one more.

Now hear an old tale. There anciently stood
 (I forget in what church) an image of Wood.
 Concerning this image, there went a prediction,
 It would burn a whole forest ; nor was it a fiction.
 'Twas cut into faggots and put to the flame,
 To burn an old friar, one Forest by name.
 My tale is a wise one, if well understood ;
 Find you but the Friar ; and I'll find the Wood.

I hear, among scholars there is a great doubt,
 From what kind of tree this Wood was hewn out.
 Teague made a good pun by a brogue in his speech :
 And said, " By my shoul, he's the son of a BEECH."
 Some call him a Thorn, the curse of the nation,
 As Thorns were design'd to be from the creation.
 Some think him cut out from the poisonous Yew,
 Beneath whose ill shade no plant ever grew.
 Some say he's a Birch, a thought very odd ;
 For none but a dunce would come under his rod.
 But I'll tell the secret ; and pray do not blab :
 He is an old stump, cut out of a Crab ;
 And England has put this Crab to a hard use,
 To cudgel our bones, and for drink give us verjuice ;
 And therefore his witnesses justly may boast,
 That none are more properly knights of the Post.

I ne'er could endure my talent to smother :
 I told you one tale, and I'll tell you another.

A joiner, to fasten a saint in a nitch,
 Bor'd a large auger-hole in the image's breech.
 But, finding the statue to make no complaint,
 He would ne'er be convinc'd it was a true saint.
 When the true Wood arrives, as he soon will, no
 doubt,
 (For that's but a sham Wood they carry about *;)
 What stuff he is made of you quickly may find,
 If you make the same trial, and bore him behind.
 I'll hold you a groat, when you wimble his bum,
 He'll bellow as loud as the Devil in a drum.
 From me, I declare, you shall have no denial;
 And there can be no harm in making a trial:
 And, when to the joy of your hearts he has roar'd,
 You may show him about for a new groaning board.

Hear one story more, and then I will stop.
 I dreamt Wood was told he should die by a drop:
 So methought he resolved no liquor to taste,
 For fear the first drop might as well be his last.
 But dreams are like oracles; 'tis hard to explain 'em;
 For it prov'd that he died of a drop at Kilmainham†.
 I wak'd with delight; and not without hope,
 Very soon to see Wood drop down from a rope.
 How he, and how we, at each other should grin!
 'Tis kindness to hold a friend up by the chin.
 But soft! says the Herald; I cannot agree;
 For metal on metal is false heraldry.
 Why, that may be true; yet Wood upon Wood,
 I'll maintain with my life, is heraldry good.

* He was frequently burnt in effigy.

† Their place of execution.

TO DR. SHERIDAN*.

SIR, DEC. 14, 1719, NINE AT NIGHT.

IT is impossible to know by your letter whether the wine is to be bottled tomorrow, or no.

If it be, or be not, why did not you, in plain English tell us so?

For my part, it was by mere chance I came to sit with the ladies † this night :

And if they had not told me there was a letter from you ; and your man Alexander had not gone, and come back from the deanery ; and the boy here had not been sent to let Alexander know I was here ; I should have missed the letter outright.

Truly I don't know who's bound to be sending for corks to stop your bottles, with a vengeance.

Make a page of your own age, and send your man Alexander to buy corks ; for Saunders already has gone above ten jaunts.

Mrs. Dingley and Mrs. Johnson say, truly they don't care for your wife's company, though they like your wine ; but they had rather have it at their own house to drink in quiet.

However, they own it is very civil in Mrs. Sheridan to make the offer ; and they cannot deny it.

* In this letter, though written in prose, the reader upon examining, will find each second sentence rhimes to the former.

† Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Dingley.

I wish Alexander safe at St. Catherine's tonight, with all my heart and soul, upon my word and honour:

But I think it base in you to send a poor fellow out so late at this time of year, when one would not turn out a dog that one valued; I appeal to your friend Mr. Connor.

I would present my humble service to my lady Mountcashel; but truly I thought she would have made advances to have been acquainted with me, as she pretended.

But now I can write no more, for you see plainly my paper is ended.

1 P. S.

I wish, when you prated, your letter you'd dated:
Much plague it created. I scolded and rated;
My soul is much grated; for your man I long waited.
I think you are fated, like a bear to be baited:
Your man is belated: the case I have stated;
And me you have cheated. My stable's unslated.
Come back t' us well freighted.
I remember my late head; and wish you translated,
For teasing me.

2 P. S.

Mrs. Dingley desires me singly
Her service to present you; hopes that will content
you;

But Johnson madam is grown a sad dame,
For want of your converse, and cannot send one verse.

3 P. S.

3 P. S.

You keep such a twattling with you and your bottling;

But I see the sum total, we shall ne'er have a bottle ;

The long and the short, we shall not have a quart.

I wish you would sign 't, that we have a pint.

For all your colloguing, I'd be glad of a knoggin* :

But I doubt 'tis a sham ; you won't give us a dram.

'Tis of shine a mouth moon-full, you won't part with a spoonful,

And I must be nimble, if I can fill my thimble.

You see I won't stop, till I come to a drop ;

But I doubt the oraculum, is a poor supernaculum ;

Though perhaps you may tell it, for a grace if we smell it.

STELLA.

DR. SHERIDAN'S ANSWER.

I'D have you to know, as sure as you're dean,

On Thursday my cask of Obrien I'll drain :

If my wife is not willing, I say she's a quean ;

And my right to the cellar, egad, I'll maintain

As bravely as any that fought at Dunblain :

Go tell her it over and over again.

I hope, as I ride to the town, it won't rain ;

For, should it, I fear it will cool my hot brain,

Entirely extinguish my poetick vein ;

* A knoggin is a name used in Ireland for the English quartern.

And then I should be as stupid as Kain,
Who preach'd on three heads, though he mention'd but twain.

Now Wardel's in haste, and begins to complain;
Your most humble servant, dear sir, I remain,
T. S—N.

Get Helsham, Walmsley, Delany,
And some Grattans, if there be any*:
Take care you do not bid too many.

DR. SWIFT'S REPLY.

THE verses you sent on the bottling your wine
Were, in every one's judgment, exceedingly fine;
And I must confess, as a dean and divine,
I think you inspir'd by the Muses all nine.
I nicely examin'd them every line,
And the worst of them all like a barndoor did shine.
O, that Jove would give me such a talent as thine!
With Delany or Dan I would scorn to combine.
I know they have many a wicked design;
And, give Satan his due, Dan begins to refine.
However, I wish, honest comrade of mine,
You would really on Thursday leave St. Catharine†,
Where I hear you are cramm'd every day like a swine;
With me you'll no more have a stomach to dine,
Nor after your victuals lie sleeping supine:
So I wish you were toothless, like lord Masserine.

* i. e. in Dublin, for they were country clergy.

† The seat of lady Mountcashel, near Dublin.

But,

But, were you as wicked as lewd Aretine,
 I wish you would tell me which way you incline.
 If, when you return, your road you don't line,
 On Thursday I'll pay my respects at your shrine,
 Wherever you bend, wherever you twine,
 In square, or in opposite circle, or trine.
 Your beef will on Thursday be salter than brine :
 I hope you have swill'd, with new milk from the kine,
 As much as the Liffée's outdone by the Rhine ;
 And Dan shall be with us, with nose aquiline.
 If you do not come back, we shall weep out our eyne :

Or may your gown never be good Lutherine.
 The beef you have got, I hear, is a chine :
 But, if too many come, your madam will whine ;
 And then you may kiss the low end of her spine.
 But enough of this poetry Alexandrine :
 I hope you will not think this a pasquine.

TO QUILCA,
 A COUNTRY HOUSE OF DR. SHERIDAN,
 IN NO VERY GOOD REPAIR, 1725.

LET me thy properties explain :
 A rotten cabin dropping rain ;
 Chimnies with scorn rejecting smoke ;
 Stools, tables, chairs, and bedsteads broke.
 Here elements have lost their uses,
 Air ripens not, nor earth produces ;

In

In vain we make poor Sheelah * toil,
 Fire will not roast, nor water boil.
 Through all the valleys, hills, and plains,
 The goddess Want in triumph reigns:
 And her chief officers of state,
 Sloth, Dirt, and Theft, around her wait.

 Nor seen by our betters.

THE PLAGUES OF A COUNTRY LIFE.

UPON STEALING A CROWN
 WHEN THE DEAN WAS ASLEEP.

BY DR. SHERIDAN.

DEAR Dean, since you in sleepy wise
 Have op'd your mouth, and clos'd your eyes;
 Like ghost, I glide along your floor,
 And softly shut the parlour door:
 For, should I break your sweet repose,
 Who knows what money you might lose;

* The name of an Irish servant.

Since oftentimes it has been found,
 A dream has given ten thousand pound?
 Then sleep, my friend; dear dean, sleep on,
 And all you get shall be your own;
 Provided you to this agree,
 That all you lose belongs to me.

THE DEAN'S ANSWER.

SO, about twelve at night, the punk
 Steals from the cully when he's drunk;
 Nor is contented with a treat,
 Without her privilege to cheat.
 Nor can I the least difference find,
 But that you left no clap behind.
 But, jest apart, restore, you capon ye,
 My twelve thirteens* and sixpence ha'penny.
 To eat my meat, and drink my medlicot,
 And then to give me such a deadly cut—
 But 'tis observ'd, that men in gowns
 Are most inclin'd to plunder crowns.
 Could you but change a crown as easy
 As you can steal one, how 'twould please ye!
 I thought the lady † at St. Catharine's
 Knew how to set you better patterns;
 For this I will not dine with Agmondisham ‡,
 And for his victuals let a ragman dish 'em.

* A shilling passes for thirteen pence in Ireland.

† Lady Montcashel.

‡ Agmondisham Vesey, esq., of Lucan, in the county of Dublin, comptroller and accomptant general of Ireland, a very worthy gentleman, for whom the dean had a great esteem.

ODE ON SCIENCE*.

O, heavenly born ! in deepest dells
 If fairest science ever dwells
 Beneath the mossy cave ;
 Indulge the verdure of the woods,
 With azure beauty gild the floods,
 And flowery carpets lave.

For, melancholy ever reigns
 Delighted in the sylvan scenes
 With scientifick light ;
 While Dian, huntress of the vales,
 Seeks lulling sounds and fanning gales,
 Though wrapt from mortal sight.

Yet, goddess, yet the way explore
 With magick rites and heathen lore
 Obstructed and depress'd :
 Till Wisdom give the sacred Nine,
 Untaught, not uninspir'd, to shine,
 By Reason's power redress'd.

When Solon and Lycurgus taught,
 To moralize the human thought
 Of mad opinion's maze,
 To erring zeal they gave new laws,
 Thy charms, O Liberty, the cause
 That blends congenial rays.

Bid bright Astræa gild the morn,
 Or bid a hundred suns be born,

* This is written in the same style, and with the same design, as his Lye Song in the modern Taste.

To hecatomb the year;
 Without thy aid, in vain the poles,
 In vain the zodiac system rolls,
 In vain the lunar sphere.

Come, fairest princess of the throng,
 Bring sweet philosophy along,
 In metaphysick dreams;
 While raptur'd bards no more behold
 A vernal age of purer gold,
 In Heliconian streams.

Drive Thralldom with malignant hand,
 To curse some other destin'd land,
 By Folly led astray:
 Ierne bear on azure wing;
 Energick let her soar, and sing
 Thy universal sway.

So, when Amphion bade the lyre
 To more majestick sound aspire,
 Behold the madding throng,
 In wonder and oblivion drown'd,
 To sculpture turn'd by magick sound,
 And petrifying song.

STELLA'S BIRTH-DAY.

MARCH 13, 1726-7.

THIS day, whate'er the Fates decree,
 Shall still be kept with joy by me:
 This day then let us not be told,
 That you are sick, and I grown old;

Nor

Nor think on our approaching ills,
 And talk of spectacles and pills;
 To morrow will be time enough
 To hear such mortifying stuff.
 Yet, since from reason may be brought
 A better and more pleasing thought,
 Which can, in spite of all decays,
 Support a few remaining days;
 From not the gravest of divines
 Accept for once some serious lines.

Although we now can form no more
 Long schemes of life, as heretofore;
 Yet you, while time is running fast,
 Can look with joy on what is past.

Were future happiness and pain
 A mere contrivance of the brain;
 As atheists argue, to entice
 And fit their proselytes for vice;
 (The only comfort they propose,
 To have companions in their woes)
 Grant this the case; yet sure 'tis hard
 That virtue, styl'd its own reward,
 And by all sages understood
 To be the chief of human good,
 Should acting die; nor leave behind
 Some lasting pleasure in the mind,
 Which, by remembrance, will assuage
 Grief, sickness, poverty, and age;
 And strongly shoot a radiant dart
 To shine through life's declining part.

Say, Stella, feel you no content,
 Reflecting on a life well spent?
 Your skilful hand employ'd to save
 Despairing wretches from the grave;

And then supporting with your store
Those whom you dragg'd from death before?
So Providence on mortals waits,
Preserving what it first creates.
Your generous boldness to defend
An innocent and absent friend;
That courage which can make you just
To merit humbled in the dust;
The detestation you express
For vice in all its glittering dress;
That patience under torturing pain,
Where stubborn stoicks would complain:
Must these like empty shadows pass,
Or forms reflected from a glass?
Or mere chimeras in the mind,
That fly, and leave no marks behind?
Does not the body thrive and grow
By food of twenty years ago?
And, had it not been still supplied,
It must a thousand times have died.
Then who with reason can maintain
That no effects of food remain?
And is not virtue in mankind
The nutriment that feeds the mind;
Upheld by each good action past,
And still continued by the last?
Then, who with reason can pretend
That all effects of virtue end?

Believe me, Stella, when you show
That true contempt for things below,
Nor prize your life for other ends,
Than merely to oblige your friends;
Your former actions claim their part,
And join to fortify your heart.

For

For Virtue, in her daily race,
 Like Janus, bears a double face;
 Looks back with joy where she has gone,
 And therefore goes with courage on;
 She at your sickly couch will wait,
 And guide you to a better state.

O then, whatever Heaven intends,
 Take pity on your pitying friends!
 Nor let your ills affect your mind,
 To fancy they can be unkind.
 Me, surely me, you ought to spare,
 Who gladly would your suffering share;
 Or give my scrap of life to you,
 And think it far beneath your due;
 You, to whose care so oft I owe
 That I'm alive to tell you so.

HORACE, BOOK I. ODE XIV.

PARAPHRASED, AND INSCRIBED TO IRELAND. 172

THE INSCRIPTION.

Poor floating isle, tost on ill fortune's waves,
 Ordain'd by fate to be the land of slaves;
 Shall moving Delos now deep-rooted stand;
 Thou, fix'd of old, be now the moving land?
 Although the metaphor be worn and stale,
 Betwixt a state, and vessel under sail;
 Let me suppose thee for a ship awhile,
 And thus address thee in the sailor's style.

UNHAPPY ship, thou art return'd in vain;
 New waves shall drive thee to the deep again.
 Look to thyself, and be no more the sport
 Of giddy winds, but make some friendly port.

Lost

Lost are thy oars, that us'd thy course to guide,
Like faithful counsellors, on either side.
Thy mast, which like some aged patriot stood
The single pillar for his country's good,
To lead thee, as a staff directs the blind,
Behold it cracks by yon rough eastern wind.
Your cables burst, and you must quickly feel
The waves impetuous enter at your keel.
Thus commonwealths receive a foreign yoke,
When the strong cords of union once are broke.
Torn by a sudden tempest is thy sail,
Expanded to invite a milder gale.

As when some writer in a publick cause
His pen, to save a sinking nation, draws,
While all is calm, his arguments prevail;
The people's voice expands his paper sail;
Till power, discharging all her stormy bags,
Flutters the feeble pamphlet into rags.
The nation scar'd, the author doom'd to death,
Who fondly put his trust in popular breath.

A larger sacrifice in vain you vow;
There's not a power above will help you now:
A nation thus, who oft Heaven's call neglects,
In vain from injur'd Heaven relief expects.

'Twill not avail, when thy strong sides are broke,
That thy descent is from the British oak;
Or, when your name and family you boast,
From fleets triumphant o'er the Gallick coast,
Such was Ierne's claim, as just as thine,
Her sons descended from the British line;
Her matchless sons, whose valour still remains
On French records for twenty long campaigns:
Yet, from an empress now a captive grown,
She sav'd Britannia's rights, and lost her own.

In ships decay'd no mariner confides,
 Lur'd by the gilded stern and painted sides:
 Yet at a ball unthinking fools delight
 In the gay trappings of a birthday night:
 They on the gold brocades and satins ray'd,
 And quite forgot their country was enslav'd.
 Dear vessel, still be to thy steerage just,
 Nor change thy course with every sudden gust;
 Like supple patriots of the modern sort,
 Who turn with every gale that blows from court.

Weary and seasick when in thee confin'd,
 Now for thy safety cares distract my mind;
 As those who long have stood the storms of state,
 Retire, yet still bemoan their country's fate.
 Beware, and when you hear the surges roar,
 Avoid the rocks on Britain's angry shore.
 They lie, alas! too easy to be found;
 For thee alone they lie the island round.

VERSES ON THE SUDDEN DRYING UP OF

ST. PATRICK'S WELL,

NEAR TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN, 1726.

BY holy zeal inspir'd, and led by fame,
 To thee, once favourite isle, with joy I came;
 What time the Goth, the Vandal, and the Hun,
 Had my own native Italy * o'errun.

* Italy was not properly the native place of St. Patrick, but the place of his education, and where he received his mission; and because he had his new birth there, hence, by poetical license, and by scripture figure, our author calls that country his native Italy.

Ierne,

Ierne, to the world's remotest parts,
Renown'd for valour, policy, and arts.

Hither from Colchos *, with the fleecy ore,
Jason arriv'd two thousand years before.
Thee, happy island, Pallas call'd her own,
When haughty Britain was a land unknown †:
From thee, with pride, the Caledonians trace
The glorious founder of their kingly race:
Thy martial sons, whom now they dare despise,
Did once their land subdue and civilize:
Their dress, their language, and the Scottish name,
Confess the soil from whence the victors came.
Well may they boast that ancient blood, which runs
Within their veins, who are thy younger sons.
A conquest and a colony from thee,
The mother-kingdom left her children free;
From thee no mark of slavery they felt:
Not so with thee thy base invaders dealt;
Invited here to vengeful Morrough's aid ‡,
Those whom they could not conquer, they betray'd.
Britain, by thee we fell, ungrateful isle!
Not by thy valour, but superiour guile:

* Orpheus, or the ancient author of the Greek poem on the Argonautick expedition, whoever he be, says, that Jason, who manned the ship Argos at Thessaly, sailed to Ireland.

† Tacitus, in the life of Julius Agricola, says, that the harbours of Ireland, on account of their commerce, were better known to the world than those of Britain.

‡ In the reign of Henry II, Dermot M'Morrough, king of Leinster, being deprived of his kingdom by Roderick O'Connor, king of Connaught, he invited the English over as auxiliaries, and promised Richard Strongbow earl of Pembroke his daughter and all his dominions as a portion. By this assistance, M'Morrough recovered his crown, and Strongbow became possessed of all Leinster.

Britain, with shame, confess this land of mine;
 First taught thee human knowlege and divine *;
 My prelates and my students, sent from hence,
 Made your sons converts both to God and sense:
 Not like the pastors of thy ravenous breed,
 Who come to fleece the flocks, and not to feed.

Wretched Ierne! with what grief I see
 The fatal changes Time has made in thee!
 The Christian rites I introduc'd in vain:
 Lo! infidelity return'd again!
 Freedom and virtue in thy sons I found,
 Who now in vice and slavery are drown'd.

By faith and prayer, this crosier in my hand,
 I drove the venom'd serpent from thy land:
 The shepherd in his bower might sleep or sing †,
 Nor dread the adder's tooth, nor scorpion's sting.

With omens oft I strove to warn thy swains,
 Omens, the types of thy impending chains,
 I sent the magpie from the British soil,
 With restless beak thy blooming fruit to spoil;
 To din thine ears with unharmonious clack,
 And haunt thy holy walls in white and black.
 What else are those thou seest in bishop's geer,
 Who crop the nurseries of learning here;

* St. Patrick arrived in Ireland in the year 431, and completed the conversion of the natives, which had been begun by Palladius and others. And, as bishop Nicholson observes, Ireland soon became the fountain of learning, to which all the Western Christians, as well as the English, had recourse, not only for instructions in the principles of religion, but in all sorts of literature, viz. legendi et scholasticæ eruditionis gratiâ.

† There are no snakes, vipers, or toads, in Ireland; and even frogs were not known here until about the year 1700. The magpies came a short time before; and the Norway rats since.

Aspiring,

Aspiring, greedy, full of senseless prate,
Devour the church, and chatter to the state?

As you grew more degenerate and base,
I sent you millions of the croaking race;
Emblems of insects vile, who spread their spawn
Through all thy land, in armour, fur, and lawn;
A nauseous brood, that fills your senate walls,
And in the chambers of your viceroy crawls!

See, where that new devouring vermin runs,
Sent in my anger from the land of Huns!
With harpy-claws it undermines the ground,
And sudden spreads a numerous offspring round.
Th' amphibious tyrant, with his ravenous band,
Drains all thy lakes of fish, of fruits thy land.

Where is the holy well that bore my name?
Fled to the fountain back, from whence it came!
Fair Freedom's emblem once, which smoothly flows,
And blessings equally on all bestows.
Here, from the neighbouring nursery of arts*,
The students, drinking, rais'd their wit and parts;
Here, for an age and more, improv'd their vein,
Their Phœbus I, my spring their Hippocrene.
Discourag'd youths! now all their hopes must fail,
Condemn'd to country cottages and ale;
To foreign prelates make a slavish court,
And by their sweat procure a mean support;
Or, for the classicks, read "Th' Attorney's Guide;"
Collect excise, or wait upon the tide.

O! had I been apostle to the Swiss,
Or hardy Scot, or any land but this;
Combin'd in arms, they had their foes defied,
And kept their liberty, or bravely died.

* The university of Dublin, called Trinity College, was founded by queen Elizabeth in 1591.

Thou still with tyrants in succession curst,
 The last invaders trampling on the first:
 Nor fondly hope for some reverse of fate,
 Virtue herself would now return too late.
 Not half thy course of misery is run,
 Thy greatest evils yet are scarce begun.
 Soon shall thy sons (the time is just at hand)
 Be all made captives in their native land;
 When, for the use of no Hibernian born,
 Shall rise one blade of grass, one ear of corn;
 When shells and leather shall for money pass,
 Nor thy oppressing lords afford thee brass*.
 But all turn leasers to that mongrel breed†,
 Who, from thee sprung, yet on thy vitals feed;
 Who to yon ravenous isle thy treasures bear,
 And waste in luxury thy harvest there;
 For pride and ignorance a proverb grown,
 The jest of wits, and to the court unknown.

I scorn thy spurious and degenerate line,
 And from this hour my patronage resign.

ON READING DR. YOUNG'S SATIRES

CALLED

THE UNIVERSAL PASSION.

1726.

IF there be truth in what you sing,
 Such godlike virtues in the king;
 A minister ‡ so fill'd with zeal
 And wisdom for the commonweal:

* Wood's ruinous project in 1724.

† The absentees, who spent the income of their Irish estates, places, and pensions, in England.

‡ Sir Robert Walpole, afterward earl of Orford.

If he * who in the chair presides
 So steadily the senate guides :
 If others, whom you make your theme,
 Are seconds in the glorious scheme :
 If every peer, whom you commend,
 To worth and learning be a friend :
 If this be truth, as you attest,
 What land was ever half so blest !
 No falsehood now among the great,
 And tradesmen now no longer cheat ;
 Now on the bench fair Justice shines ;
 Her scale to neither side inclines :
 Now Pride and Cruelty are flown,
 And Mercy here exalts her throne :
 For such is good example's power,
 It does its office every hour,
 Where governours are good and wise ;
 Or else the truest maxim lyes :
 For so we find all ancient sages
 Decree, that, ad exemplum regis,
 Through all the realm his virtues run,
 Ripening and kindling like the sun.
 If this be true, then how much more
 When you have nam'd at least a score
 Of courtiers, each in their degree,
 If possible, as good as he !
 Or take it in a different view.
 I ask (if what you say be true)
 If you affirm the present age
 Deserves your satire's keenest rage :
 If that same universal passion
 With every vice has fill'd the nation :

* Sir Spencer Compton, then speaker, afterward earl of Wilmington.

If virtue dares not venture down
 A single step beneath the crown :
 If clergymen, to show their wit,
 Praise classicks more than holy writ :
 If bankrupts, when they are undone,
 Into the senate house can run,
 And sell their votes at such a rate,
 As will retrieve a lost estate :
 If law be such a partial whore,
 To spare the rich, and plague the poor :
 If these be of all crimes the worst,
 What land was ever half so curst ?

THE DOG AND THIEF. 1726.

QUOTH the thief to the dog, let me into your door,
 And I'll give you these delicate bits.

Quoth the dog, I shall then be more villain than you're,
 And besides must be out of my wits.

Your delicate bits will not serve me a meal,
 But my master each day gives me bread ;
 You'll fly, when you get what you came here to steal,
 And I must be hang'd in your stead.

The stockjobber thus from 'Change alley goes down,
 And tips you the freeman a wink ;
 Let me have but your vote to serve for the town,
 And here is a guinea to drink.

Says the freeman, your guinea to night would be spent !

Your offers of bribery cease :

I'll vote for my landlord, to whom I pay rent,
 Or else I may forfeit my lease.

From

From London they come, silly people to chouse,
 Their lands and their faces unknown:
 Who 'd vote a rogue into the parliament house,
 That would turn a man out of his own?

A D V I C E

TO THE
 GRUB STREET VERSE WRITERS. 1726.

YE poets ragged and forlorn,
 Down from your garrets haste;
 Ye rhymers dead as soon as born,
 Not yet consign'd to paste.
 I know a trick to make you thrive;
 O, 'tis a quaint device:
 Your stillborn poems shall revive,
 And scorn to wrap up spice.
 Get all your verses printed fair,
 Then let them well be dried;
 And Curll must have a special care
 To leave the margin wide.
 Lend these to paper-sparing* Pope;
 And when he sits to write,
 No letter with an envelope
 Could give him more delight.

* The original copy of Mr. Pope's celebrated translation of Homer (preserved in the British Museum) is almost entirely written on the covers of letters, and sometimes between the lines of the letters themselves.

When Pope has fill'd the margins round,
 Why then recall your loan;
 Sell them to Curll for fifty pound,
 And swear they are your own.

TO A LADY,

WHO DESIRED THE AUTHOR
 TO WRITE SOME VERSES UPON HER IN THE HEROICK STYLE.

AFTER venting all my spite,
 Tell me, what have I to write?
 Every error I could find
 Through the mazes of your mind,
 Have my busy Muse employ'd,
 Till the company was cloy'd.
 Are you positive and fretful,
 Heedless, ignorant, forgetful?
 Those, and twenty follies more,
 I have often told before.

Hearken what my lady says:
 Have I nothing then to praise?
 Ill it fits you to be witty,
 Where a fault should move your pity.
 If you think me too conceited,
 Or to passion quickly heated;
 If my wandering head be less
 Set on reading than on dress;
 If I always seem too dull t' ye;
 I can solve the diffi—culty.

You

You would teach me to be wise;
 Truth and honour how to prize;
 How to shine in conversation,
 And with credit fill my station;
 How to relish notions high;
 How to live, and how to die.

But it was decreed by Fate—
 Mr. dean, you come too late.
 Well I know, you can discern,
 I am now too old to learn:
 Follies, from my youth instill'd,
 Have my soul entirely fill'd;
 In my head and heart they centre,
 Nor will let your lessons enter.

Bred a fondling and an heiress;
 Drest like any lady mayoress;
 Cocker'd by the servants round,
 Was too good to touch the ground;
 Thought the life of every lady
 Should be one continued playday—
 Balls, and masquerades, and shows,
 Visits, plays, and powder'd beaux.

Thus you have my case at large,
 And may now perform your charge.
 Those materials I have furnish'd,
 When by you refin'd and burnish'd,
 Must, that all the world may know 'em,
 Be reduc'd into a poem.

But, I beg, suspend a while
 That same paltry, burlesque style;
 Drop for once your constant rule,
 Turning all to ridicule;
 Teaching others how to ape you;
 Court nor parliament can 'scape you;

Treat

Treat the publick and your friends
Both alike, while neither mends.

Sing my praise in strain sublime:
Treat me not with doggrel rhyme.
'Tis but just, you should produce,
With each fault, each fault's excuse;
Not to publish every trifle,
And my few perfections stifle.
With some gifts at least endow me,
Which my very foes allow me.
Am I spiteful, proud, unjust?
Did I ever break my trust?
Which of all our modern dames
Censures less, or less defames?
In good manners am I faulty?
Can you call me rude or haughty?
Did I e'er my mite withhold
From the impotent and old?
When did ever I omit
Due regard for men of wit?
When have I esteem express'd
For a coxcomb gaily dress'd?
Do I, like the female tribe,
Think it wit to flee and gibe?
Who with less designing ends
Kindlier entertains her friends;
With good words and countenance sprightly,
Strives to treat them more politely*?

Think not cards my chief diversion:
'Tis a wrong, unjust aspersion:
Never knew I any good in 'em,
But to dose my head like laudanum.

* In some editions, this couplet is wanting.

We, by play, as men, by drinking,
 Pass our nights, to drive out thinking.
 From my ailments give me leisure,
 I shall read and think with pleasure;
 Conversation learn to relish,
 And with books my mind embellish.

Now, methinks, I hear you cry,
 Mr. dean, you must reply.

Madam, I allow 'tis true:
 All these praises are your due.
 You, like some acute philosopher,
 Every fault have drawn a gloss over;
 Placing in the strongest light
 All your virtue to my sight.

Though you lead a blameless life,
 Are an humble prudent wife,
 Answer all domestick ends:
 What is this to us your friends?
 Though your children by a nod
 Stand in awe without a rod;
 Though, by your obliging sway,
 Servants love you, and obey;
 Though you treat us with a smile;
 Clear your looks, and smooth your style;
 Load our plates from every dish;
 This is not the thing we wish.

Colonel  may be your debtor;
 We expect employment better.
 You must learn, if you would gain us,
 With good sense to entertain us.

Scholars, when good sense describing
 Call it tasting and imbibing:
 Metaphorick meat and drink
 Is to understand and think:

We

We may carve for others thus ;
 And let others carve for us ;
 To discourse, and to attend,
 Is, to help yourself and friend.
 Conversation is but carving ;
 Carve for all, yourself is starving :
 Give no more to every guest,
 Than he 's able to digest ;
 Give him always of the prime ;
 And but little at a time.
 Carve to all but just enough :
 Let them neither starve nor stuff :
 And, that you may have your due,
 Let your neighbours carve for you.
 [This comparison will hold,
 Could it well in rhyme be told,
 How conversing, listening, thinking,
 Justly may resemble drinking ;
 For a friend a glass you fill,
 What is this but to instill * ?]

To conclude this long essay ;
 Pardon, if I disobey ;
 Nor against my natural vein,
 Treat you in heroick strain.
 I, as all the parish knows,
 Hardly can be grave in prose :
 Still to lash, and lashing smile,
 Ill befits a lofty style.
 From the planet of my birth
 I encounter vice with mirth.
 Wicked ministers of state
 I can easier scorn than hate ;

* These six lines are wanting in some editions.

And

And I find it answers right :
 Scorn torments them more than spite.
 All the vices of a court
 Do but serve to make me sport.
 [Were I in some foreign realm,
 Which all vices overwhelm ;
 Should a monkey wear a crown,
 Must I tremble at his frown ?
 Could I not, through all his ermine,
 'Spy the strutting, chattering vermin ?
 Safely write a smart lampoon,
 To expose the brisk baboon * ?]

When my Muse officious ventures
 On the nation's representers :
 Teaching by what golden rules
 Into knaves they turn their fools :
 How the helm is rul'd by Walpole,
 At whose oars, like slaves, they all pull ;
 Let the vessel split on shelves ;
 With the freight enrich themselves :
 Safe within my little wherry,
 All their madness makes me merry :
 Like the watermen of Thames,
 I row by, and call them names ;
 Like the ever-laughing sage,
 In a jest I spend my rage :
 (Though it must be understood,
 I would hang them, if I could)
 If I can but fill my niche,
 I attempt no higher pitch ;
 Leave to d'Anvers and his mate
 Maxims wise to rule the state.

* These eight lines are wanting in some editions.

Pulteney

Pulteney deep, accomplish'd St. Johns,
 Scourge the villains with a vengeance:
 Let me, though the smell be noisome,
 Strip their bums; let Caleb * hoise 'em;
 Then apply Alecto's whip,
 Till they wriggle, howl, and skip.

Deuce is in you, Mr. dean:
 What can all this passion mean?
 Mention courts! you'll ne'er be quiet
 On corruptions running riot.
 End as it befits your station;
 Come to use and application:
 Nor with senates keep a fuss.
 I submit; and answer thus:

If the machinations brewing,
 To complete the publick ruin,
 Never once could have the power
 To affect me half an hour;
 Sooner would I write in buskins,
 Mournful elegies on Blueskins †.
 If I laugh at whig and tory;
 I conclude à fortiori,
 All your eloquence will scarce
 Drive me from my favourite farce.
 This I must insist on: for, as
 It is well observ'd by Horace ‡,
 Ridicule has greater power
 To reform the world, than sour.
 Horses thus, let jockies judge else,
 Switches better guide than cudgels.

* Caleb d'Anvers, the writer of the Craftsman.

† The famous thief, who, while on his trial at the Old Bailey, stabbed Jonathan Wild.

‡ "Ridiculum acri, &c."

Bastings heavy, dry, obtuse,
 Only dulness can produce;
 While a little gentle jerking
 Sets the spirits all aworking.

Thus, I find it by experiment,
 Scolding moves you less than merriment.
 I may storm and rage in vain;
 It but stupifies your brain.
 But with raillery to nettle,
 Sets your thoughts upon their mettle;
 Gives imagination scope;
 Never lets your mind elope;
 Drives out brangling and contention,
 Brings in reason and invention.
 For your sake, as well as mine,
 I the lofty style decline.
 I should make a figure scurvy,
 And your head turn topsyturvy*.

I, who love to have a fling
 Both at senatehouse and king;
 That they might some better way tread,
 To avoid the publick hatred;
 Thought no method more commodious,
 Than to show their vices odious;
 Which I chose to make appear,
 Not by anger, but by sneer.
 As my method of reforming,
 Is by laughing, not by storming,
 (For my friends have always thought Tenderness my greatest fault)
 Would you have me change my style?
 On your faults no longer smile;

* This couplet is wanting in some editions.

But, to patch up all our quarrels,
Quote you texts from Plutarch's Morals:
Or from Solomon produce
Maxims teaching Wisdom's use?

If I treat you like a crown'd head,
You have cheap enough compounded;
Can you put in higher claims,
Than the owners of St. James?
You are not so great a grievance,
As the hirelings of St. Stephen's.
You are of a lower class
Than my friend sir Robert Brass.
None of these have mercy found:
I have laugh'd, and lash'd them round.

Have you seen a rocket fly?
You would swear it pierc'd the sky:
It but reach'd the middle air,
Bursting into pieces there;
Thousand sparkles falling down
Light on many a coxcomb's crown:
See what mirth the sport creates;
Singes hair, but breaks no pates.
Thus, should I attempt to climb,
Treat you in a style sublime,
Such a rocket is my Muse:
Should I lofty numbers choose,
Ere I reach'd Parnassus' top,
I should burst, and bursting drop,
All my fire would fall in scraps;
Give your head some gentle raps;
Only make it smart a while:
Then could I forbear to smile,
When I found the tingling pain
Entering warm your frigid brain;

Make

Make you able upon sight
 To decide of wrong and right;
 Talk with sense whate'er you please on;
 Learn to relish truth and reason?

Thus we both shall gain our prize:
 I to laugh, and you grow wise.

PALINODIA.

HORACE, BOOK I. ODE XVI.

GREAT sir, than Phœbus more divine,
 Whose verses far his rays outshine,

Look down upon your quondam foe;
 O! let me never write again,
 If e'er I disoblige you, dean,
 Should you compassion show.

Take those iambicks which I wrote,
 When anger made me piping hot,
 And give them to your cook,
 To singe your fowl, or save your paste,
 The next time when you have a feast;

They'll save you many a book.

To burn them, you are not content;
 I give you then my free consent,

To sink them in the harbour:
 If not, they'll serve to set off blocks,
 To roll on pipes, and twist in locks;
 So give them to your barber.

Or, when you next your physick take,
I must entreat you then to make
A proper application;
'Tis what I've done myself before,
With Dan's fine thoughts, and many more,
Who gave me provocation.

What cannot mighty anger do?
It makes the weak the strong pursue,
A goose attack a swan;
It makes a woman, tooth and nail,
Her husband's hands and face assail,
While he's no longer man.

Though some, we find, are more discreet,
Before the world are wondrous sweet,
And let their husbands hector:
But, when the world's asleep, they wake,
That is the time they choose to speak;
Witness the curtain lecture.

Such was the case with you, I find:
All day you could conceal your mind;
But when St. Patrick's chimes
Awak'd your Muse (my midnight curse,
When I engag'd for better for worse)
You scolded with your rhymes.

Have done! have done! I quit the field,
To you, as to my wife, I yield:
As she must wear the breeches:
So shall you wear the laurel crown,
Win it, and wear it, 'tis your own;
The poet's only riches.

BEC'S * BIRTHDAY.

NOVEMBER 8, 1726.

THIS day, dear Bec, is thy nativity;
 Had Fate a luckier one, she'd give it ye:
 She chose a thread of greatest length,
 And doubly twisted it for strength;
 Nor will be able with her shears
 To cut it off these forty years.
 Then who says care will kill a cat?
 Rebecca shows they're out in that.
 For she, though overrun with care,
 Continues healthy, fat, and fair.
 As, if the gout should seize the head,
 Doctors pronounce the patient dead;
 But, if they can, by all their arts,
 Eject it to th' extremest parts,
 They give the sick man joy, and praise
 The gout that will prolong his days.
 Rebecca thus I gladly greet,
 Who drives her cares to hands and feet:
 For, though philosophers maintain
 The limbs are guided by the brain,
 Quite contrary Rebecca's led,
 Her hands and feet conduct her head,
 By arbitrary power convey her,
 She ne'er considers why, or where:
 Her hands may meddle, feet may wander,
 Her head is but a mere by-stander;
 And all her bustling but supplies
 The part of wholesome exercise.

* Mrs. Dingley.

Thus nature has resolv'd to pay her
The cat's nine lives, and eke the care.

Long may she live, and help her friends
Whene'er it suits her private ends;
Domestick business never mind
Till coffee has her stomach lin'd;
But, when her breakfast gives her courage,
Then think on Stella's chicken-porridge;
I mean when Tiger* has been serv'd,
Or else poor Stella may be starv'd.

May Bec have many an evening nap,
With Tiger slabbering in her lap;
But always take a special care
She does not overset the chair!
Still be she curious, never hearken
To any speech but Tiger's barking!

And when she's in another scene,
Stella long dead, but first the dean,
May fortune and her coffee get her
Companions that will please her better!
Whole afternoons will sit beside her,
Nor for neglects or blunders chide her;
A goodly set as can be found
Of hearty gossips prating round;
Fresh from a wedding or a christening,
To teach her ears the art of listening,
And please her more to hear them tattle,
Than the Dean storm, or Stella rattle.

Late be her death, one gentle nod,
When Hermes, waiting with his rod,
Shall to Elysian fields invite her,
Where there will be no cares to fright her!

* Mrs. Dingley's favourite lap dog.

ON THE COLLAR OF TIGER,
MRS. DINGLEY'S LAPDOG.

PRAY steal me not ; I'm Mrs. Dingley's,
Whose heart in this fourfooted thing lies.

EPIGRAMS ON WINDOWS.

MOST OF THEM WRITTEN IN 1726.

I. ON A WINDOW AT AN INN.

WE fly from luxury and wealth,
To hardships in pursuit of health ;
From generous wines and costly fare,
And dozing in an easy chair ;
Pursue the goddess Health in vain,
To find her in a country scene,
And every where her footsteps trace,
And see her marks in every face ;
And still her favourites we meet,
Crowding the roads with naked feet.
But, oh ! so faintly we pursue,
We ne'er can have her full in view.

II. AT AN INN IN ENGLAND.

THE glass, by lovers' nonsense blurr'd,
Dims and obscures our sight :
So when our passions Love has stirr'd,
It darkens Reason's light.

III. ANOTHER *.

THE church and clergy here, no doubt,
 Are very near akin ;
 Both weatherbeaten are without ;
 And empty both within.

IV. AT CHESTER,

MY landlord is civil,
 But dear as the d—l :
 Your pockets grow empty,
 With nothing to tempt ye ;
 The wine is so sour,
 'Twill give you a scour :
 The beer and the ale
 Are mingled with stale.
 The veal is such carrion,
 A dog would be weary on.
 All this I have felt,
 For I live on a smelt.

V. ANOTHER, IN CHESTER.

THE walls of this town
 Are full of renown,
 And strangers delight to walk round 'em :
 But as for the dwellers,
 Both buyers and sellers,
 For me, you may hang 'em, or drown 'em.

* Written at Chester.

VI. ANOTHER, AT HOLYHEAD *.

O NEPTUNE! Neptune! must I still
 Be here detain'd against my will?
 Is this your justice, when I'm come
 Above two hundred miles from home!
 O'er mountains steep, o'er dusty plains,
 Half choked with dust, half drown'd with rains;
 Only your Godship to implore,
 To let me kiss your other shore?
 A boon so small! but I may weep,
 While you're, like Baal, fast asleep.

 VII. ANOTHER, WRITTEN UPON A WINDOW
 WHERE THERE WAS NO WRITING BEFORE.

THANKS to my stars, I once can see
 A window here from scribbling free!
 Here no conceited coxcombs pass,
 To scratch their paltry drabs on glass;
 Nor party-fool is calling names,
 Or dealing crowns to George and James.

* These verses are signed J—K—, but written, as it is presumed, in Dr. Swift's hand.

VIII.

VIII. ON SEEING VERSES WRITTEN UPON
WINDOWS AT INNS.

THE sage, who said he should be proud
Of windows in his breast,
Because he ne'er a thought allow'd
That might not be confest;
His window scrawl'd by every rake,
His breast again would cover;
And fairly bid the Devil take
The diamond and the lover.

IX. ANOTHER.

BY Satan taught, all conjurers know
Your mistress in a glass to show,
And you can do as much:
In this the Devil and you agree:
None e'er made verses worse than he,
And thine I swear are such.

X. ANOTHER.

THAT love is the Devil, I'll prove when requir'd;
Those rhymers abundantly show it:
They swear that they all by love are inspir'd,
And the Devil's a damnable poet.

TO JANUS, ON NEW-YEAR'S DAY,

1726.

TWO-fac'd Janus, god of Time !

Be my Phœbus while I rhyme ;

To oblige your crony Swift,

Bring our dame a new year's gift :

She has got but half a face ;

Janus, since thou hast a brace,

To my lady once be kind ;

Give her half thy face behind.

God of Time, if you be wise,

Look not with your future eyes ;

What imports thy forward sight ?

Well, if you could lose it quite.

Can you take delight in viewing

This poor Isle's * approaching ruin,

When thy retrospection vast

Sees the glorious ages past ?

Happy nation, were we blind,

Or had only eyes behind !

Drown your morals, madam cries,

I'll have none but forward eyes ;

Prudes decay'd about may tack,

Strain their necks with looking back.

Give me Time when coming on :

Who regards him when he's gone ?

By the dean though gravely told,

New years help to make me old ;

Yet I find a new year's lace

Burnishes an old year's face :

Give me velvet and quadrille,

I'll have youth and beauty still.

* Ireland.

A PAS-

A PASTORAL DIALOGUE

WRITTEN AFTER THE NEWS OF THE KING'S* DEATH.

RICHMOND LODGE is a house with a small park belonging to the Crown. It was usually granted by the Crown for a lease of years. The duke of Ormond was the last who had it. After his exile, it was given to the Prince of Wales by the King. The Prince and Princess usually passed their summer there. It is within a mile of Richmond.

MARBLE HILL is a house built by Mrs. Howard, then of the bed-chamber, afterward countess of Suffolk, and groom of the stole to the Queen. It is on the Middlesex side, near Twickenham, where Mr. Pope lived, and about two miles from Richmond lodge. Mr. Pope was the contriver of the gardens, lord Herbert the architect, the dean of St. Patrick's chief butler and keeper of the Ice house. Upon King George's death, these two houses met, and had the following dialogue,

IN spite of Pope, in spite of Gay,
And all that he or they can say;
Sing on I must, and sing I will
Of Richmond Lodge and Marble Hill.

Last Friday night, as neighbours use,
This couple met to talk of news:
For, by old proverbs it appears,
That walls have tongues, and hedges ears.

MARBLE HILL.

Quoth Marble Hill, right well I ween,
Your mistress now is grown a queen:

* George I, who died after a short sickness by eating a melon, at Osnabrug, in his way to Hanover, June 11, 1727.—The poem was carried to court, and read to king George II and queen Caroline.

You'll

You'll find it soon by woeful proof;
She'll come no more beneath your roof.

RICHMOND LODGE.

The kingly prophet well evinces,
That we should put no trust in princes:
My royal master promis'd me
To raise me to a high degree;
But now he's grown a king, God wot,
I fear I shall be soon forgot.
You see, when folks have got their ends,
How quickly they neglect their friends;
Yet I may say, 'twixt me and you,
Pray God, they now may find as true!

MARBLE HILL.

My house was built but for a show,
My lady's empty pockets know;
And now she will not have a shilling,
To raise the stairs, or build the ceiling;
For all the courtly madams round
Now pay four shillings in the pound;
'Tis come to what I always thought:
My dame is hardly worth a groat.
Had you and I been courtiers born,
We should not thus have lain forlorn:
For those we dextrous courtiers call,
Can rise upon their masters' fall.
But we, unlucky and unwise,
Must fall because our masters rise.

RICHMOND LODGE.

My master, scarce a fortnight since,
Was grown as wealthy as a prince;

But now it will be no such thing,
 For he'll be poor as any king :
 And by his crown will nothing get,
 But like a king to run in debt.

MARBLE HILL.

No more the dean, that grave divine,
 Shall keep the key of my no—wine ;
 My ice house rob, as heretofore,
 And steal my artichokes no more ;
 Poor Patty Blount no more be seen
 Bedraggled in my walks so green :
 Plump Johnny Gay will now elope :
 And here no more will dangle Pope.

RICHMOND LODGE.

Here wont the dean, when he's to seek,
 To sponge a breakfast once a week ;
 To cry the bread was stale, and mutter
 Complaints against the royal butter.
 But now I fear it will be said,
 No butter sticks upon his bread.
 We soon shall find him full of spleen,
 For want of tattling to the queen ;
 Stunning her royal ears with talking ;
 His reverence and her highness walking :
 While lady Charlotte *, like a stroller,
 Sits mounted on the garden-roller.
 A goodly sight to see her ride
 With ancient Mirmont † at her side.
 In velvet cap his head lies warm ;
 His hat for show beneath his arm.

* Lady Charlotte de Roussy, a French lady.

† Marquis de Mirmont, a Frenchman of quality.

MARBLE HILL.

Some South Sea broker from the city
 Will purchase me, the more's the pity;
 Lay all my fine plantations waste,
 To fit them to his vulgar taste;
 Chang'd for the worse in every part,
 My master Pope will break his heart.

RICHMOND LODGE.

In my own Thames may I be drown'd,
 If e'er I stoop beneath a crown'd head:
 Except her majesty prevails
 To place me with the prince of Wales;
 And then I shall be free from fears,
 For he'll be prince these fifty years.
 I then will turn a courtier too,
 And serve the times, as others do.
 Plain loyalty, not built on hope,
 I leave to your contriver, Pope:
 None loves his king and country better,
 Yet none was ever less their debtor.

MARBLE HILL.

Then let him come and take a nap
 In summer on my verdant lap:
 Prefer our villas, where the Thames is,
 To Kensington, or hot St. James's;
 Nor shall I dull in silence sit;
 For 'tis to me he owes his wit;
 My groves, my echoes, and my birds,
 Have taught him his poetick words.
 We gardens, and you wildernesses,
 Assist all poets in distresses.

Him

Him twice a week I here expect,
 To rattle Moody * for neglect;
 An idle rogue, who spends his quartridge
 In tippling at the Dog and Partridge;
 And I can hardly get him down
 Three times a week to brush my gown.

RICHMOND LODGE.

I pity you, dear Marble Hill;
 But hope to see you flourish still.
 All happiness—and so adieu.

MARBLE HILL.

Kind Richmond Lodge, the same to you.

DESIRE AND POSSESSION. 1727.

'TIS strange, what different thoughts inspire
 In men, Possession, and Desire!
 Think what they wish so great a blessing;
 So disappointed when possessing!

A moralist profoundly sage
 (I know not in what book or page,
 Or whether o'er a pot of ale)
 Related thus the following tale.

Possession, and Desire his brother,
 But still at variance with each other,
 Were seen contending in a race;
 And kept at first an equal pace:

* The gardener.

'Tis said, their course continued long;
 For this was active, that was strong:
 Till Envy, Slander, Sloth, and Doubt,
 Misled them many a league about.
 Seduc'd by some deceiving light,
 They take the wrong way for the right;
 Through slippery by-roads dark and deep,
 They often climb, and often creep.

Desire, the swifter of the two,
 Along the plain like lightning flew:
 'Till, entering on a broad highway,
 Where power and titles scatter'd lay,
 He strove to pick up all he found,
 And by excursions lost his ground:
 No sooner got, than with disdain
 He threw them on the ground again;
 And hasted forward to pursue
 Fresh objects fairer to his view;
 In hope to spring some nobler game;
 But all he took was just the same:
 Too scornful now to stop his pace,
 He spurn'd them in his rival's face.

Possession kept the beaten road,
 And gather'd all his brother strow'd;
 But overcharg'd, and out of wind,
 Though strong in limbs, he lagg'd behind.

Desire had now the goal in sight:
 It was a tower of monstrous height;
 Where on the summit Fortune stands,
 A crown and sceptre in her hands;
 Beneath a chasm as deep as Hell,
 Where many a bold adventurer fell.
 Desire in rapture gaz'd a while,
 And saw the treacherous goddess smile;

But, as he climb'd to grasp the crown,
 She knock'd him with the sceptre down !
 He tumbled in the gulf profound ;
 There doom'd to whirl an endless round.

Possession's load was grown so great,
 He sunk beneath the cumbrous weight:
 And, as he now expiring lay,
 Flocks every ominous bird of prey ;
 The raven, vulture, owl, and kite,
 At once upon his carcase light,
 And strip his hide, and pick his bones,
 Regardless of his dying groans.

ON CENSURE. 1727.

YE wise, instruct me to endure
 An evil, which admits no cure ;
 Or, how this evil can be born,
 Which breeds at once both hate and scorn.
 Bare innocence is no support,
 When you are try'd in Scandal's court.
 Stand high in honour, wealth, or wit :
 All others, who inferiour sit,
 Conceive themselves in conscience bound
 To join, and drag you to the ground.
 Your altitude offends the eyes
 Of those who want the power to rise.
 The world, a willing stander by,
 Inclines to aid a specious lie :
 Alas ! they would not do you wrong ;
 But all appearances are strong !

Yet

Yet whence proceeds this weight we lay
 On what detracting people say?
 For let mankind discharge their tongues
 In venom, till they burst their lungs,
 Their utmost malice cannot make
 Your head, or tooth, or finger ake;
 Nor spoil your shape, distort your face,
 Or put one feature out of place;
 Nor will you find your fortune sink
 By what they speak or what they think;
 Nor can ten hundred thousand lies
 Make you less virtuous, learn'd, or wise.

The most effectual way to baulk
 Their malice, is—to let them talk.

THE FURNITURE
 OF A WOMAN'S MIND. 1727.

A Set of phrases learn'd by rote;
 A passion for a scarlet coat;
 When at a play to laugh, or cry,
 Yet cannot tell the reason why;
 Never to hold her tongue a minute,
 While all she prates has nothing in it;
 Whole hours can with a coxcomb sit,
 And take his nonsense all for wit;
 Her learning mounts to read a song,
 But half the words pronouncing wrong;
 Has every repartee in store
 She spoke ten thousand times before;

Can ready compliments supply
On all occasions, cut and dry ;
Such hatred to a parson's gown,
The sight will put her in a swoon ;
For conversation well endued,
She calls it witty to be rude ;
And, placing raillery in railing,
Will tell aloud your greatest failing ;
Nor make a scruple to expose
Your bandy leg, or crooked nose ;
Can at her morning tea run o'er
The scandal of the day before ;
Improving hourly in her skill,
To cheat and wrangle at quadrille.

In choosing lace, a critick nice,
Knows to a groat the lowest price ;
Can in her female clubs dispute,
What linen best the silk will suit,
What colours each complexion match,
And where with art to place a patch.

If chance a mouse creeps in her sight,
Can finely counterfeit a fright ;
So sweetly screams, if it comes near her,
She ravishes all hearts to hear her.
Can dextrously her husband tease,
By taking fits whene'er she please ;
By frequent practice learns the trick
At proper seasons to be sick ;
Thinks nothing gives one airs so pretty,
At once creating love and pity ;
If Molly happens to be careless,
And but neglects to warm her hairlace,
She gets a cold as sure as death,
And vows she scarce can fetch her breath ;

Admires

Admires how modest women can
Be so robustious, like a man.

In party, furious to her power;
A bitter whig, or tory sour;
Her arguments directly tend Against the side she would defend;
Will prove herself a tory plain,
From principles the whigs maintain;
And, to defend the whiggish cause,
Her topicks from the tories draws.

O yes! if any man can find
More virtues in a woman's mind,
Let them be sent to Mrs. Harding *;
She'll pay the charges to a farthing;
Take notice, she has my commission
To add them in the next edition;
They may outsell a better thing:
So, halloo, boys; God save the king!

CLEVER TOM CLINCH

GOING TO BE HANGED. 1727.

AS clever Tom Clinch, while the rabble was bawling,
Rode stately through Holborn to die in his calling,
He stopt at the George for a bottle of sack,
And promis'd to pay for it when he came back.
His waistcoat, and stockings, and breeches, were white;
His cap had a new cherry riband to tie 't.
The maids to the doors and the balconies ran,
And said, "Lack-a-day! he's a proper young man!"

* Widow o John Harding, the Drapier's printer.

But, as from the windows the ladies he spy'd,
 Like a beau in the box, he bow'd low on each side;
 And, when his last speech the loud hawkers did cry,
 He swore from his cart, "It was all a damn'd lye!"
 The hangman for pardon fell down on his knee;
 Tom gave him a kick in the guts for his fee:
 Then said, I must speak to the people a little;
 But I'll see you all damn'd before I will whittle*.
 My honest friend Wild† (may he long hold his place)
 He lengthen'd my life with a whole year of grace.
 Take courage, dear comrades, and be not afraid,
 Nor slip this occasion to follow your trade;
 My conscience is clear, and my spirits are calm,
 And thus I go off without prayer-book or psalm;
 Then follow the practice of clever Tom Clinch,
 Who hung like a hero, and never would flinch.

DR. SWIFT TO MR. POPE,

WHILE HE WAS WRITING THE DUNCIAD. 1727.

POPE has the talent well to speak,

But not to reach the ear;

His loudest voice is low and weak,

The dean too deaf to hear.

A while they on each other look,

Then different studies choose;

The dean sits plodding on a book;

Pope walks, and courts the Muse.

* A cant word for confessing at the gallows.

† The noted thief-catcher, under keeper of Newgate, who was hanged for receiving stolen goods.

Now backs of letters, though design'd
 For those who more will need 'em,
 Are fill'd with hints, and interlin'd,
 Himself can hardly read 'em.
 Each atom by some other struck
 All turns and motions tries :
 Till, in a lump together stuck,
 Behold a poem rise :
 Yet to the dean his share allot ;
 He claims it by a canon ;
 That without which a thing is not,
 Is, causa sine quâ non.
 Thus, Pope, in vain you boast your wit ;
 For, had our deaf divine
 Been for your conversation fit,
 You had not writ a line.
 Of Sherlock* thus, for preaching fam'd,
 The sexton reason'd well ;
 And justly half the merit claim'd,
 Because he rang the bell.

A LOVE POEM
 FROM A PHYSICIAN TO HIS MISTRESS.

WRITTEN AT LONDON.

BY poets we are well assur'd
 That love, alas ! can ne'er be cur'd :
 A complicated heap of ills,
 Despising boluses and pills.

* The dean of St. Paul's, father to the bishop.

Ah ! Chloe, this I find is true,
Since first I gave my heart to you.
Now, by your cruelty hard bound,
I strain my guts, my colon wound.
Now jealousy, my grumbling tripes
Assaults with grating, grinding gripes.
When pity in those eyes I view,
My bowels wambling make me spew.
When I an amorous kiss design'd,
I belch'd a hurricane of wind.
Once you a gentle sigh let fall ;
Remember how I suck'd it all :
What colick pangs from thence I felt,
Had you but known, your heart would melt,
Like ruffling winds in caverns pent,
Till Nature pointed out a vent.
How have you torn my heart to pieces
With maggots, humours, and caprices !
By which I got the hemorrhoids ;
And loathsome worms my anus voids.
Whene'er I hear a rival nam'd,
I feel my body all inflam'd ;
Which, breaking out in boils and blanes,
With yellow filth my linen stains ;
Or, parch'd with unextinguish'd thirst,
Smallbeer I guzzle till I burst ;
And then I drag a bloated corpus,
Swell'd with a dropsy, like a porpoise ;
When, if I cannot purge or stale,
I must be tapp'd to fill a pail.

DEAN

DEANSWIFT AT SIR ARTHUR ACHESON'S,
IN THE NORTH OF IRELAND.

THE dean would visit Market-hill,
Our invitation was but slight ;
I said — Why let him, if he will :
And so I bade sir Arthur write.
His manners would not let him wait,
Lest we should think ourselves neglected ;
And so we saw him at our gate,
Three days before he was expected.
After a week, a month, a quarter,
And day succeeding after day,
Says not a word of his departure,
Though not a soul would have him stay.
I've said enough to make him blush,
Methinks, or else the Devil's in 't ;
But he cares not for it a rush,
Nor for my life will take the hint.

But you, my dear, may let him know,
In civil language, if he stays,
How deep and foul the roads may grow,
And that he may command the chaise ;
Or you may say — My wife intends,
Though I should be exceeding proud,
This winter to invite some friends,
And, sir, I know, you hate a crowd.
Or, Mr. dean — I should with joy
Beg you would here continue still,

But

But we must go to Aghnecloy * ;

Or, Mr. Moore will take it ill.

The house accounts are daily rising ;

So much his stay doth swell the bills ;

My dearest life, it is surprising,

How much he eats, how much he swills.

His brace of puppies how they stuff !

And they must have three meals a day,

Yet never think they get enough ;

His horses too eat all our hay.

O ! if I could, how I would maul

His tallow face and wainscot paws,

His beetle brows, and eyes of wall,

And make him soon give up the cause !

Must I be every moment chid

With † Skinnybonia, Snipe, and Lean ?

O ! that I could but once be rid

Of this insulting tyrant dean !

ON A VERY OLD GLASS AT MARKET HILL.

FRAIL glass ! thou bear'st that name as well as I ;

Though none can tell, which of us first shall die.

ANSWERED EXTEMPORE BY DR. SWIFT.

ME only chance can kill ; thou, frailer creature,

May'st die, like me, by chance ; but must by nature.

* The seat of Acheson Moore, esq., in the county of Tyrone, Aug. 20, 1721.

† The dean used to call lady Acheson by those names.

ON CUTTING DOWN THE OLD THORN AT MARKET-HILL.

AT Market Hill, as well appears,
By chronicle of ancient date,
There stood for many hundred years
A spacious thorn before the gate.

Hither came every village maid,
And on the boughs her garland hung;
And here, beneath the spreading shade,
Secure from satyrs sate and sung.

Sir Archibald *, that valorous knight,
The lord of all the fruitful plain,
Would come and listen with delight;
For he was fond of rural strain.

(Sir Archibald, whose favourite name
Shall stand for ages on record,
By Scottish bards of highest fame,
Wise Hawthornden and Stirling's lord †.)

But time with iron teeth, I ween,
Has canker'd all its branches round;
No fruit or blossom to be seen,
Its head reclining toward the ground.

This aged, sickly, sapless thorn,
Which must, alas! no longer stand,
Behold the cruel dean in scorn
Cuts down with sacrilegious hand.

* Sir Archibald Acheson, secretary of state for Scotland.

† Drummond of Hawthornden, and sir William Alexander earl of Stirling, who were both friends to sir Archibald, and famous for their poetry.

Dame Nature, when she saw the blow,
Astonish'd, gave a dreadful shriek;
And mother Tellus trembled so,
She scarce recover'd in a week.

The Sylvan powers, with fear perplex'd,
In prudence and compassion, sent
(For none could tell whose turn was next)
Sad omens of the dire event.

The magpie, lighting on the stock,
Stood chattering with incessant din;
And with her beak gave many a knock,
To rouse and warn the nymph within.

The owl foresaw, in pensive mood,
The ruin of her ancient seat;
And fled in haste, with all her brood,
To seek a more secure retreat.

Last trolled forth the gentle swine,
To ease her itch against the stump,
And dismally was heard to whine,
All as she scrubb'd her meazly rump.

The nymph who dwells in every tree,
(If all be true that poets chant)
Condemn'd by Fate's supreme decree,
Must die with her expiring plant.

Thus, when the gentle Spina found
The thorn committed to her care,
Receiv'd its last and deadly wound,
She fled, and vanish'd into air.

But from the root a dismal groan
First issuing struck the murderer's ears;
And, in a shrill revengeful tone,
This prophecy he trembling hears;

“Thou

“ Thou chief contriver of my fall,
“ Relentless dean, to mischief born ;
“ My kindred oft thine hide shall gall,
“ Thy gown and cassock oft be torn.

“ And thy confederate dame, who brags
“ That she condemn'd me to the fire,
“ Shall rend her petticoats to rags,
“ And wound her legs with every brier.

“ Nor thou, lord Arthur *, shalt escape ;
“ To thee I often call'd in vain,
“ Against that assassin in crape ;
“ Yet thou could'st tamely see me slain :

“ Nor, when I felt the dreadful blow,
“ Or chid the dean, or pinch'd thy spouse ;
“ Since you could see me treated so
“ (An old retainer to your house) :

“ May that fell dean, by whose command
“ Was form'd this Machiavelian plot,
“ Not leave a thistle on thy land ;
“ Then who will own thee for a Scot ?

“ Pigs and fanaticks, cows and teagues,
“ Through all my empire I foresee,
“ To tear thy hedges, join in leagues,
“ Sworn to revenge my thorn and me.

“ And thou, the wretch ordain'd by fate,
“ Neal Gahagan, Hibernian clown,
“ With hatchet blunter than thy pate,
“ To hack my hallow'd timber down ;

* Sir Arthur Acheson.

“ When

“ When thou, suspended high in air,
 “ Diest on a more ignoble tree,
 “ (For thou shalt steal thy landlord's mare),
 “ Then, bloody caitif! think on me.”

MY LADY'S*
 LAMENTATION AND COMPLAINT
 AGAINST THE DEAN.

JULY 28, 1728.

SURE never did man	With two bony thumbs
see	Could rub my old gums,
Awretchlike poor Nancy,	Or scratching my nose,
So teas'd day and night	And jogging my toes;
By a dean and a knight.	But at present, forsooth,
To punish my sins,	I must not rub a tooth.
Sir Arthur begins,	When my elbows he sees
And gives me a wipe	Held up by my knees,
With Skinny and Snipe:	My arms, like two props,
His malice is plain,	Supporting my chops,
Hallooing the dean.	And just as I handle 'em
The dean never stops,	Moving all like a pendu-
When he opens his chops;	lum;
I'm quite overrun	He trips up my props,
With rebus and pun.	And down my chin drops,
Before he came here,	From my head to my
To spunge for good cheer,	heels,
I sate with delight,	Like a clock without
From morning till night,	wheels;

* Lady Acheson.

I sink

I sink in the spleen,
A useless machine.

If he had his will,
I should never sit still :
He comes with his whims,
I must move my limbs ;
I cannot be sweet
Without using my feet ;
To lengthen my breath,
He tires me to death.
By the worst of all squires,
Through bogs and thro'
briers,

Where a cow would be startled,
I'm in spite of my heart led ;

And, say what I will,
Haul'd up every hill ;
Till, daggled and tatter'd,
My spirits quite shatter'd,
I return home at night,
And fast, out of spite :
For I'd rather be dead,
Than it e'er should be said,
I was better for him,
In stomach or limb.

But now to my diet ;
No eating in quiet,
He's still finding fault,
Too sour or too salt :
The wing of a chick
I hardly can pick ;

But trash without measure
I swallow with pleasure.

Next for his diversion,
He rails at my person :
What court breeding this is !

He takes me to pieces :
From shoulder to flank
I'm lean and am lank ;
My nose long and thin,
Grows down to my chin ;
My chin will not stay,
But meets it half way ;
My fingers, prolix,
Are ten crooked sticks :
He swears my el—bows
Are two iron crows,
Or sharp pointed rocks,
And wear out my smocks :
To 'scape them, sir Arthur
Is forc'd to lie farther,
Or his sides they would gore
Like the tusk of a boar.

Now, changing the scene,

But still to the dean :
He loves to be bitter at
A lady illiterate ;
If he sees her but once,
He'll swear she's a dunce ;
Can tell by her looks
A hater of books ;

Through

Through each line of her face
Her folly can trace ;
Which spoils every feature
Bestow'd her by nature ;
But sense gives a grace
To the homeliest face :
Wise books and reflection
Will mend the complexion :
(A civil divine !
I suppose, meaning mine !)
No lady who wants them,
Can ever be handsome.

I guess well enough
What he means by this stuff :
He haws and he hums,
At last out it comes :
What, madam ? No walking,
No reading, nor talking ?
You're now in your prime,
Make use of your time.
Consider, before
You come to threescore,
How the hussies will flee
Where'er you appear ;
“ That silly old puss
Would fain be like us :
What a figure she made
In her tarnish'd brocade ! ”

And then he grows mild :
Come, be a good child :
If you are inclin'd
To polish your mind,
Be ador'd by the men
Till threescore and ten,
And kill with the spleen
The jades of sixteen ;
I'll show you the way :
Read six hours a day.
The wits will frequent ye,
And think you but twenty.

Thus was I drawn in ;
Forgive me my sin.
At breakfast he'll ask
An account of my task.
Put a word out of joint,
Or miss but a point,
He rages and frets,
His manners forgets ;
And, as I am serious,
Is very imperious.
No book for delight
Must come in my sight ;
But, instead of new plays,
Dull Bacon's Essays,
And pore every day on
That nasty Pantheon.
If I be not a drudge,
Let all the world judge.
'Twere better be blind,
Than thus be confin'd.

But,

But, while in an ill tone, A hole where a rabbit
 I murder poor Milton, Would scorn to inhabit,
 The dean, you will swear, Dug out in an hour;
 Is at study or prayer. He calls it a bower.
 He's all the day saunter-
 ing,
 With labourers banter-
 ing,
 Among his colleagues,
 A parcel of Teagues,
 Whom he brings in among us
 And bribes with mun-dungus;
 Hail, fellow, well met,
 All dirty and wet:
 Find out, if you can,
 Who's master, who's man;
 Who makes the best figure,
 The dean or the digger;
 And which is the best
 At cracking a jest.
 How proudly he talks
 Of zigzags and walks;
 And all the day raves
 Of cradles and caves;
 And boasts of his feats,
 His grottoes and seats;
 Shows all his gewgaws,
 And gapes for applause;
 A fine occupation
 For one in his station!

But, O! how we laugh,
 To see a wild calf
 Come, driven by heat,
 And foul the green seat;
 Or run helter-skelter
 To his arbour, for shelter,
 Where all goes to ruin
 The dean has been doing:
 The girls of the village
 Come flocking for pillage,
 Pull down the fine briers
 And thorns, to make fires;
 But yet are so kind
 To leave something behind:
 No more need be said
 on't,
 I smell when I tread on't.
 Dear friend, doctor
 Jinny,
 If I could but win ye,
 Or Walmsley or Whaley,
 To come hither daily,
 Since Fortune, my foe,
 Will needs have it so,
 That I'm, by her frowns,
 Condemn'd to black
 gowns;

No 'squire to be found	So may you be seen
The neighbourhood	No more in the spleen!
round;	May Walmsley give
(For, under the rose,	wine
I would rather choose	Like a hearty divine!
those)	May Whaley disgrace
If your wives will permit	Dull Daniel's whey-face!
ye,	And may your three
Come here, out of pity,	spouses
To ease a poor lady,	Let you lie at friends
And beg her a playday.	houses!

A PASTORAL DIALOGUE. 1728.

DERMOT, SHEELAH.

A Nymph and swain, Sheelah and Dermot hight,
 Who went to weed the court of Gosford knight *;
 While each with stubbed knife remov'd the roots,
 That rais'd between the stones their daily shoots;
 As at their work they sate in counterview,
 With mutual beauty smit, their passion grew.
 Sing, heavenly Muse, in sweetly-flowing strain
 The soft endearments of the nymph and swain.

DERMOT.

My love to Sheelah is more firmly fixt,
 Than strongest weeds that grow these stones betwixt:
 My spud these nettles from the stones can part;
 No knife so keen to weed thee from my heart.

* Sir Arthur Acheson.

SHEELAH.

SHEELAH.

My love for gentle Dermot faster grows,
 Than yon tall dock that rises to thy nose.
 Cut down the dock, 'twill sprout again; but, O!
 Love rooted out, again will never grow.

DERMOT.

No more that brier thy tender leg shall rake :
 (I spare the thistles for sir Arthur's * sake)
 Sharp are the stones; take thou this rushy mat;
 The hardest bum will bruise with sitting squat.

SHEELAH.

Thy breeches, torn behind, stand gaping wide;
 This petticoat shall save thy dear backside;
 Nor need I blush; although you feel it wet,
 Dermot, I vow, 'tis nothing else but sweat.

DERMOT.

At an old stubborn root I chanc'd to tug,
 When the dean threw me this tobacco-plug:
 A longer ha'p'orth † never did I see;
 This, dearest Sheelah, thou shalt share with me.

SHEELAH.

In at the pantry door this morn I slipt,
 And from the shelf a charming crust I whipt:
 Dennis ‡ was out, and I got hither safe;
 And thou, my dear, shalt have the bigger half.

DERMOT.

When you saw Tady at long bullets play,
 You sate and lous'd him all a sunshine day:

* Who was a great lover of Scotland.

† Halfpennyworth.

‡ Sir Arthur's butler.

How could you, Sheelah, listen to his tales,
Or crack such lice as his between your nails?

SHEELAH.

When you with Oonah stood behind a ditch,
I peep'd, and saw you kiss the dirty bitch :
Dermot, how could you touch these nasty sluts ?
I almost wish'd this spud were in your guts.

DERMOT.

If Oonah once I kiss'd, forbear to chide ;
Her aunt's my gossip by my father's side :
But, if I ever touch her lips again,
May I be doom'd for life to weed in rain !

SHEELAH.

Dermot, I swear, though Tady's locks could hold
Ten thousand lice, and every louse was gold ;
Him on my lap you never more shall see ;
Or may I lose my weeding-knife—and thee !

DERMOT.

O, could I earn for thee, my lovely lass,
A pair of brogues* to bear thee dry to mass !
But see, where Norah with the sowins † comes—
Then let us rise, and rest our weary bums.

ON THE
FIVE LADIES AT SOT'S-HOLE*,

WITH THE DOCTOR † AT THEIR HEAD.

N. B. THE LADIES TREATED THE DOCTOR.

SENT AS FROM AN OFFICER IN THE ARMY. 1728.

FAIR ladies, number five,
Who, in your merry freaks,
With little Tom contrive
To feast on ale and steaks;
While he sits by a grinning,
To see you safe in Sot's hole,
Set up with greasy linen,
And neither mugs nor pots whole;
Alas ! I never thought,
A priest would please your palate ;
Besides, I'll hold a groat,
He'll put you in a ballad ;
Where I shall see your faces
On paper daub'd so foul,
They'll be no more like Graces,
Than Venus like an owl.
And we shall take you rather
To be a midnight pack
Of witches met together,
With Beelzebub in black.

* An alehouse in Dublin famous for beef-steaks.

† Dr. Thomas Sheridan.

It fills my heart with woe,
To think, such ladies fine
Should be reduc'd so low,
To treat a dull divine.

Be by a parson cheated !
Had you been cunning stagers,
You might yourselves be treated
By captains and by majors.

See how corruption grows,
While mothers, daughters, aunts,
Instead of powder'd beaux,
From pulpits choose gallants.

If we, who wear our wigs
With fantail and with snake,
Are bubbled thus by prigs ;
Z—ds ! who would be a rake ?

Had I a heart to fight,
I'd knock the doctor down ;
Or could I read or write,
Egad ! I'd wear a gown.

Then leave him to his birch * ;
And at the Rose on Sunday,
The parson safe at church,
I'll treat you with burgundy.

* Dr. Sheridan was a schoolmaster.

THE FIVE LADIES ANSWER TO THE BEAU.

BY DR. SHERIDAN.

WITH THE WIG AND WINGS AT HIS HEAD.

YOU little scribbling beau,
What demon made you write ?
Because to write you know
As much as you can fight.

For compliment so scurvy,
I wish we had you here ;
We 'd turn you topsyturvy
Into a mug of beer.

You thought to make a farce on
The man and place we chose ;
We 're sure a single parson
Is worth a hundred beaux.

And you would make us vassals,
Good Mr. Wig and Wings,
To silver clocks and tassels ;
You would, you Thing of Things !

Because around your cane
A ring of diamonds is set ;
And you, in some by-lane,
Have gain'd a paltry grisette :

Shall we, of sense refin'd,
Your trifling nonsense bear,
As noisy as the wind,
As empty as the air ?

We hate your empty prattle ;
 And vow and swear 'tis true,
 There 's more in one child's rattle,
 Than twenty fops like you.

THE BEAU'S REPLY
TO THE
FIVE LADIES ANSWER.

WHY, how now dapper Black,
 I smell your gown and cassock,
 As strong upon your back,
 As Tisdal * smells of a sock.

To write such scurvy stuff !

Fine ladies never do't ;
 I know you well enough,
 And eke your cloven foot.

Fine ladies, when they write,
 Nor scold, nor keep a splutter :
 Their verses give delight,
 As soft and sweet as butter.

But Satan never saw
 Such haggard lines as these :
 They stick athwart my maw,
 As bad as Suffolk cheese.

THE JOURNAL OF A MODERN LADY.

IN A LETTER TO A PERSON OF QUALITY. 1728.

SIR,

IT was a most unfriendly part
In you, who ought to know my heart,
Are well acquainted with my zeal
For all the female commonweal—
How could it come into your mind
To pitch on me, of all mankind,
Against the sex to write a satire,
And brand me for a womanhater?
On me, who think them all so fair,
They rival Venus to a hair;
Their virtues never ceas'd to sing,
Since first I learn'd to tune a string?
Methinks I hear the ladies cry,
Will he his character belie?
Must never our misfortunes end?
And have we lost our only friend?
Ah, lovely nymphs! remove your fears,
No more let fall those precious tears.
Sooner shall, &c.

[Here several verses are omitted.]

The hound be hunted by the hare,
Than I turn rebel to the fair.

'Twas you engag'd me first to write,
Then gave the subject out of spite:

The

The journal of a modern dame,
Is, by my promise, what you claim.
My word is past, I must submit ;
And yet perhaps you may be bit.
I but transcribe ; for not a line
Of all the satire shall be mine.
Compell'd by you to tag in rhymes
The common slanders of the times,
Of modern times, the guilt is yours,
And me my innocence secures.
Unwilling Muse, begin thy lay,
The annals of a female day.

By nature turn'd to play the rake well,
(As we shall show you in the sequel)
The modern dame is wak'd by noon,
(Some authors say not quite so soon)
Because, though sore against her will,
She sat all night up at quadrille.
She stretches, gapes, unglues her eyes,
And asks, if it be time to rise ;
Of headach and the spleen complains ;
And then, to cool her heated brains,
Her nightgown and her slippers brought her,
Takes a large dram of citron water.
Then to her glass ; and, " Betty, pray
" Don't I look frightfully today ?
" But was it not confounded hard ?
" Well, if I ever touch a card !
" Four matadores, and lose codille !
" Depend upon 't, I never will.
" But run to Tom, and bid him fix
" The ladies here to night by six."
" Madam, the goldsmith waits below ;
" He says, his business is to know

" If

“ If you ’ll redeem the silver cup
“ He keeps in pawn ? ” — “ First, show him up.”
“ Your dressing-plate he ’ll be content
“ To take, for interest cent per cent.
“ And, madam, there ’s my lady Spade
“ Has sent this letter by her maid :
“ Well, I remember what she won ;
“ And has she sent so soon to dun ?
“ Here, carry down those ten pistoles
“ My husband left to pay for coals :
“ I thank my stars, they all are light ;
“ And I may have revenge to-night.”

Now, loitering o’er her tea and cream,
She enters on her usual theme ;
Her last night’s ill success repeats,
Calls lady Spade a hundred cheats :
“ She slipt spadillo in her breast,
“ Then thought to turn it to a jest :
“ There ’s Mrs. Cut and she combine,
“ And to each other give the sign.”
Through every game pursues her tale,
Like hunters o’er their evening ale.

Now to another scene give place :
Enter the folks with silks and lace :
Fresh matter for a world of chat,
Right Indian this, right Mechlin that :
“ Observe this pattern ; there ’s a stuff ;
“ I can have customers enough.
“ Dear madam, you are grown so hard —
“ This lace is worth twelve pounds a yard :
“ Madam, if there be truth in man,
“ I never sold so cheap a fan.”

This business of importance o’er,
And madam almost dress’d by four ;

The

The footman, in his usual phrase,
Comes up with, "Madam, dinner stays."
She answers, in her usual style,
"The cook must keep it back a while :
"I never can have time to dress,
"No woman breathing takes up less ;
"I'm hurried so, it makes me sick ;
"I wish the dinner at Old Nick."

At table now she acts her part,
Has all the dinner cant by heart :
"I thought we were to dine alone,
"My dear ; for sure, if I had known
"This company would come to day —
"But really 'tis my spouse's way !
"He's so unkind, he never sends
"To tell when he invites his friends :
"I wish ye may but have enough !"

And while with all this paltry stuff
She sits tormenting every guest,
Nor gives her tongue one moment's rest,
In phrases batter'd, stale, and trite,
Which modern ladies call polite ;
You see the booby husband sit
In admiration at her wit !

But let me now a while survey
Our madam o'er her evening tea ;
Surrounded with her noisy clans
Of prudes, coquets, and harridans ;
When, frightened at the clamorous crew,
Away the God of Silence flew,
And fair Discretion left the place,
And Modesty with blushing face ;
Now enters overweening Pride,
And Scandal ever gaping wide ;

Hypocrisy

Hypocrisy with frown severe,
Scurrility with gibing air;
Rude Laughter seeming like to burst,
And Malice always judging worst;
And Vanity with pocket glass,
And Impudence with front of brass;
And studied Affectation came,
Each limb and feature out of frame;
While Ignorance, with brain of lead,
Flew hovering o'er each female head.

Why should I ask of thee, my Muse,
A hundred tongues, as poets use,
When, to give every dame her due,
A hundred thousand were too few?
Or how should I, alas! relate
The sum of all their senseless prate,
Their innuendoes, hints, and slanders,
Their meaning lewd, and double entendres?
Now comes the general scandal charge;
What some invent, the rest enlarge;
And, "Madam, if it be a lie,
"You have the tale as cheap as I;
"I must conceal my author's name:
"But now 'tis known to common fame."

Say, foolish females, bold and blind,
Say, by what fatal turn of mind,
Are you on vices most severe,
Wherein yourselves have greatest share?
Thus every fool herself deludes;
The prudes condemn the absent prudes:
Mopsa, who stinks her spouse to death,
Accuses Chloe's tainted breath;
Hircina, rank with sweat, presumes
To censure Phyllis for perfumes;

While

While crooked Cynthia, sneering, says,
That Florimel wears iron stays :
Chloe, of every coxcomb jealous,
Admires how girls can talk with fellows ;
And, full of indignation, frets,
That women should be such coquets :
Iris, for scandal most notorious,
Cries, " Lord, the world is so censorious !"
And Rufa, with her combs of lead,
Whispers that Sappho's hair is red :
Aura, whose tongue you hear a mile hence,
Talks half a day in praise of silence :
And Sylvia, full of inward guilt,
Calls Amoret an arrant jilt.

Now voices over voices rise,
While each to be the loudest vies :
They contradict, affirm, dispute,
No single tongue one moment mute ;
All mad to speak, and none to hearken,
They set the very lapdog barking ;
Their chattering makes a louder din
Than fishwives o'er a cup of gin :
Not schoolboys at a barring out
Rais'd ever such incessant rout :
The jumbling particles of matter
In chaos made not such a clatter ;
Far less the rabble roar and rail,
When drunk with sour election ale.

Nor do they trust their tongues alone,
But speak a language of their own ;
Can read a nod, a shrug, a look,
Far better than a printed book ;
Convey a libel in a frown,
And wink a reputation down :

Or,

Or, by the tossing of the fan,
Describe the lady and the man.

But see, the female club disbands,
Each twenty visits on her hands.

Now all alone poor madam sits
In vapours and hysterick fits :

“ And was not Tom this morning sent ?

“ I’d lay my life he never went :

“ Past six, and not a living soul !

“ I might by this have won a vole.”

A dreadful interval of spleen !

How shall we pass the time between ?

“ Here, Betty, let me take my drops ;

“ And feel my pulse, I know it stops :

“ This head of mine, lord, how it swims !

“ And such a pain in all my limbs !”

“ Dear madam, try to take a nap”—

But now they hear a footman’s rap :

“ Go, run, and light the ladies up :

“ It must be one before we sup.”

The table, cards, and counters, set,

And all the gamester ladies met,

Her spleen and fits recover’d quite,

Our madam can sit up all night ;

“ Whoever comes, I’m not within.”—

Quadrille’s the word, and so begin.

How can the Muse her aid impart,

Unskill’d in all the terms of art ?

Or in harmonious numbers put

The deal, the shuffle, and the cut ?

The superstitious whims relate,

That fill a female gamester’s pate ?

What agony of soul she feels

To see a knave’s inverted heels !

She

She draws up card by card, to find
Good fortune peeping from behind ;
With panting heart, and earnest eyes,
In hope to see spadillo rise ;
In vain, alas ! her hope is fed ;
She draws an ace, and sees it red ;
In ready counters never pays,
But pawns her snuff box, rings, and keys ;
Ever with some new fancy struck,
Tries twenty charms to mend her luck.

“ This morning, when the parson came,

“ I said I should not win a game.

“ This odious chair, how came I stuck in ’t ?

“ I think I never had good luck in ’t.

“ I ’m so uneasy in my stays ;

“ Your fan a moment, if you please.

“ Stand farther, girl, or get you gone ;

“ I always lose when you look on.”

“ Lord ! madam, you have lost codille :

“ I never saw you play so ill.”

“ Nay, madam, give me leave to say,

“ ’Twas you that threw the game away :

“ When lady Tricksey play’d a four,

“ You took it with a matadore ;

“ I saw you touch your wedding ring

“ Before my lady call’d a king ;

“ You spoke a word began with H,

“ And I know whom you mean to teach,

“ Because you held the king of hearts ;

“ Fie, madam, leave these little arts.”

“ That ’s not so bad as one that rubs

“ Her chair, to call the king of clubs ;

“ And makes her partner understand

“ A matadore is in her hand.”

“ Madam,

“ Madam, you have no cause to flounce,

“ I swear I saw you thrice renounce.”

“ And truly, madam, I know when

“ Instead of five, you scor’d me ten.

“ Spadillo here has got a mark ;

“ A child may know it in the dark :

“ I guess’d the hand ; it seldom fails :

“ I wish some folks would pair their nails.”

While thus they rail, and scold, and storm,
It passes but for common form :

But, conscious that they all speak true,

And give each other but their due,

It never interrupts the game,

Or makes them sensible of shame.

The time too precious now to waste,

The supper gobbled up in haste ;

Again afresh to cards they run,

As if they had but just begun.

But I shall not again repeat,

How oft they squabble, snarl, and cheat.

At last they hear the watchman knock,

“ A frosty morn—past four o’clock.”

The chairmen are not to be found,

“ Come, let us play the other round.”

Now all in haste they huddle on

Their hoods, their cloaks, and get them gone ;

But, first, the winner must invite

The company to morrow night.

Unlucky madam, left in tears,

(Who now again quadrille forswears)

With empty purse, and aching head,

Steals to her sleeping spouse to bed.

A DIALOGUE
BETWEEN
MAD MULLINIX AND TIMOTHY.

1728.

M. I OWN, 'tis not my bread and butter;
But prithee, Tim, why all this clutter?
Why ever in these raging fits,
Damning to Hell the jacobites?
When, if you search the kingdom round,
There's hardly twenty to be found;
No, not among the priests and friars—

T. 'Twixt you and me, G—d d—n the liars!

M. The tories are gone every man over
To our illustrious house of Hanover;
From all their conduct this is plain;
And then —

T. G—d d—n the liars again!
Did not an earl but lately vote,
To bring in (I could cut his throat)
Our whole accounts of publick debts?

M. Lord! how this frothy coxcomb frets! [aside.]

T. Did not an able statesman bishop
This dangerous horrid motion dish-up
As popish craft? did he not rail on't?
Show fire and faggot in the tail on't?
Proving the earl a grand offender,
And in a plot for the pretender;
Whose fleet, 'tis all our friends opinion,
Was then embarking at Avignon?

M. These

M. These wrangling jars of whig and tory,
Are stale and worn as Troy-town story :
The wrong, 'tis certain, you were both in,
And now you find you fought for nothing.
Your faction, when their game was new,
Might want such noisy fools as you ;
But you, when all the show is past,
Resolve to stand it out the last ;
Like Martin Marrall *, gaping on,
Not minding when the song is done.
When all the bees are gone to settle,
You clatter still your brazen kettle.
The leaders whom you listed under,
Have dropt their arms, and seiz'd the plunder ;
And when the war is past, you come
To rattle in their ears your drum :
And as that hateful hideous Grecian
Thersites (he was your relation)
Was more abhorr'd and scorn'd by those
With whom he serv'd, than by his foes ;
So thou art grown the detestation
Of all thy party through the nation :
Thy peevish and perpetual teasing
With plots, and jacobites, and treason,
Thy busy, never-meaning face,
Thy screw'd up front, thy state grimace,
Thy formal nods, important sneers,
Thy whisperings foisted in all ears,
(Which are, whatever you may think,
But nonsense wrapt up in a stink)
Have made thy presence, in a true sense,
To thy own side, so d—n'd a nuisance,

* A character in one of Dryden's comedies.

That, when they have you in their eye,
As if the Devil drove, they fly.

T. My good friend Mullinix, forbear;
I vow to G—, you 're too severe:
If it could ever yet be known
I took advice, except my own,
It should be yours; but, d—n my blood!
I must pursue the publick good:
The faction (is it not notorious?)
Keck at the memory of Glorious *:
'Tis true; nor need I to be told,
My quondam friends are grown so cold,
That scarce a creature can be found
To prance with me the statue round.
The publick safety, I foresee,
Henceforth depends alone on me;
And while this vital breath I blow,
Or from above, or from below,
I'll sputter, swagger, curse, and rail,
The tories terrour, scourge, and flail.

M. Tim, you mistake the matter quite;
The tories! you are their delight;
And should you act a different part,
Be grave and wise, 'twould break their heart.
Why, Tim, you have a taste I know,
And often see a puppetshow:
Observe, the audience is in pain,
While Punch is hid behind the scene;
But, when they hear his rusty voice,
With what impatience they rejoice!
And then they value not two straws,
How Solomon decides the cause,

* King William III.

Which

Which the true mother, which pretender;
Nor listen to the witch of Endor.
Should Faustus, with the Devil behind him,
Enter the stage, they never mind him :
If Punch, to stir their fancy, shows
In at the door his monstrous nose,
Then sudden draws it back again ;
O what a pleasure mixt with pain !
You every moment think an age,
Till he appears upon the stage :
And first his bum you see him clap
Upon the queen of Sheba's lap :
The duke of Lorraine drew his sword ;
Punch roaring ran, and running roar'd,
Reviles all people in his jargon,
And sells the king of Spain a bargain ;
St. George himself he plays the wag on,
And mounts astride upon the dragon ;
He gets a thousand thumps and kicks,
Yet cannot leave his roguish tricks ;
In every action thrusts his nose ;
The reason why, no mortal knows :
In doleful scenes that break our heart,
Punch comes, like you, and lets a fart.
There 's not a puppet made of wood,
But what would hang him, if they could ;
While, teasing all, by all he's teas'd,
How well are the spectators pleas'd !
Who in the motion have no share,
But purely come to hear and stare ;
Have no concern for Sabra's sake,
Which gets the better, saint or snake,
Provided Punch (for there's the jest)
Be soundly maul'd, and plague the rest.

Thus, Tim, philosophers suppose,
The world consists of puppetshows ;
Where petulant conceited fellows
Perform the part of Punchinelloes :
So at this booth, which we call Dublin,
Tim, thou 'rt the Punch to stir up trouble in ;
You wriggle, fidge, and make a rout,
Put all your brother puppets out,
Run on in a perpetual round,
To tease, perplex, disturb, confound ;
Intrude with monkey grin and clatter
To interrupt all serious matter ;
Are grown the nuisance of your clan,
Who hate and scorn you to a man :
But then the lookers on, the tories,
You still divert with merry stories ;
They would consent that all the crew
Were hang'd, before they 'd part with you.

But tell me, Tim, upon the spot,
By all this toil what hast thou got ?
If tories must have all the sport,
I fear you 'll be disgrac'd at court.

T. Got ? D—n my blood ! I frank my letters,
Walk to my place before my betters ;
And, simple as I now stand here,
Expect in time to be a peer—
Got ? D—n me ! why I got my will !
Ne'er hold my peace, and ne'er stand still :
I fart with twenty ladies by ;
They call me beast ; and what care I ?
I bravely call the tories Jacks,
And sons of whores—behind their backs.
But, could you bring me once to think,
That when I strut, and stare, and stink,

Reville

Reville and slander, fume and storm,
Betray, make oath, impeach, inform,
With such a constant loyal zeal
To serve myself and commonweal,
And fret the tories' soul to death,
I did but loose my precious breath;
And, when I damn my soul to plague 'em,
Am, as you tell me, but their may-game;
Consume my vitals! they shall know,
I am not to be treated so;
I'd rather hang myself by half,
Than give those rascals cause to laugh.

But how, my friend, can I endure,
Once so renown'd, to live obscure?
No little boys and girls to cry,
"There's nimble Tim a passing by!"
No more my dear delightful way tread
Of keeping up a party hatred?
Will none the tory dogs pursue,
When through the streets I cry halloo?
Must all my d—n mes! bloods and wounds!
Pass only now for empty sounds?
Shall tory rascals be elected,
Although I swear them disaffected?
And, when I roar, "A plot, a plot!"
Will our own party mind me not?
So qualify'd to swear and lie,
Will they not trust me for a spy?

Dear Mullinix, your good advice
I beg; you see the case is nice:
O! were I equal in renown,
Like thee to please this thankless town!
Or, bless'd with such engaging parts
To win the truant schoolboys' hearts!

Thy virtues meet their just reward,
Attended by the sable guard.
Charm'd by thy voice, the 'prentice drops
The snow-ball destin'd at thy chops :
Thy graceful steps, and colonel's air,
Allure the cinder-picking fair.

M. No more—in mark of true affection,
I take thee under my protection :
Your parts are good, 'tis not deny'd ;
I wish they had been well apply'd.
But now observe my council, (viz.)
Adapt your habit to your phyz ;
You must no longer thus equip ye,
As Horace says, optat ephippia ;
(There 's Latin too, that you may see
How much improv'd by Dr. ———)
I have a coat at home, that you may try ;
'Tis just like this, which hangs by geometry.
My hat has much the nicer air ;
Your block will fit it to a hair :
That wig, I would not for the world
Have it so formal, and so curl'd ;
'Twill be so oily and so sleek,
When I have lain in it a week,
You 'll find it well prepar'd to take
The figure of toupee and snake.
Thus dress'd alike from top to toe,
That which is which 'tis hard to know ;
When first in publick we appear,
I'll lead the van, you keep the rear :
Be careful, as you walk behind ;
Use all the talents of your mind ;
Be studious well to imitate
My portly motion, mien, and gait ;

Mark

Mark my address, and learn my style,
When to look scornful, when to smile;
Nor sputter out your oaths so fast,
But keep your swearing to the last.
Then at our leisure we'll be witty,
And in the streets divert the city;
The ladies from the windows gaping,
The children all our motions aping.
Your conversation to refine,
I'll take you to some friend of mine;
Choice spirits, who employ their parts
To mend the world by useful arts;
Some cleansing hollow tubes, to spy
Direct the zenith of the sky;
Some have the city in their care,
From noxious steams to purge the air:
Some teach us in these dangerous days
How to walk upright in our ways;
Some whose reforming hands engage
To lash the lewdness of the age;
Some for the publick service go
Perpetual envoys to and fro;
Whose able heads support the weight
Of twenty ministers of state.
We scorn, for want of talk, to jabber
Of parties o'er our bonnyclabber;
Nor are we studious to inquire,
Who votes for manors, who for hire:
Our care is, to improve the mind
With what concerns all human kind;
The various scenes of mortal life;
Who beats her husband, who his wife:
Or how the bully at a stroke
Knock'd down the boy, the lantern broke.

One tells the rise of cheese and oatmeal;
 Another when he got a hot meal;
 One gives advice in proverbs old,
 Instructs us how to tame a scold;
 One shows how bravely Audouin dy'd,
 And at the gallows all deny'd;
 How by the almanack 'tis clear,
 That herrings will be cheap this year.

T. Dear Mullinix, I now lament
 My precious time so long misspent,
 By nature meant for nobler ends:
 O, introduce me to your friends!
 For whom by birth I was design'd,
 Till politicks debas'd my mind:
 I give myself entire to you:
 G—d d—n the whigs and tories too!

TIM AND THE FABLES.

MY meaning will be best unravell'd,
 When I premise that Tim has travell'd,
 In Lucas's by chance there lay
 The Fables writ by Mr. Gay.
 Tim set the volume on a table,
 Read over here and there a fable;
 And found, as he the pages twirl'd,
 The monkey who had seen the world:
 (For Tonson had, to help the sale,
 Prefix'd a cut to every tale.)
 The monkey was completely drest,
 The beau in all his airs exprest.

Tim,

Tim, with surprise and pleasure staring,
Ran to the glass, and then comparing
His own sweet figure with the print,
Distinguish'd every feature in 't,
The twist, the squeeze, the rump, the fidge in all,
Just as they look'd in the original.

“ By —,” says Tim, and let a fart,

“ This graver understood his art.

“ 'Tis a true copy, I'll say that for 't;

“ I well remember, when I sat for 't.

“ My very face, at first I knew it;

“ Just in this dress the painter drew it.”

Tim, with his likeness deeply smitten,
Would read what underneath was written,

The merry tale, with moral grave,

He now began to storm and rave :

“ The cursed villain ! now I see

“ This was a libel meant at me :

“ These scribblers grow so bold of late

“ Against us ministers of state !

“ Such jacobites as he deserve —

“ D—n me ! I say, they ought to starve.”

TOM MULLINIX AND DICK.

TOM and Dick had equal fame,
And both had equal knowledge;
Tom could write and spell his name,
But Dick had seen the college.

Dick

Dick a coxcomb, Tom was mad,
And both alike diverting ;
Tom was held the merrier lad,
But Dick the best at farting.

Dick would cock his nose in scorn,
But Tom was kind and loving ;
Tom a footboy bred and born,
But Dick was from an oven.

Dick could neatly dance a jig,
But Tom was best at borees ;
Tom would pray for every whig,
And Dick curse all the tories.

Dick would make a woeful noise,
And scold at an election ;
Tom huzza'd the black-guard boys,
And held them in subjection.

Tom could move with lordly grace,
Dick nimbly skipt the gutter ;
Tom could talk with solemn face,
But Dick could better sputter.

Dick was come to high renown
Since he commenc'd physician ;
Tom was held by all the town
The deeper politician.

Tom had the genteeler swing,
His hat could nicely put on ;
Dick knew better how to swing
His cane upon a button.

Dick for repartee was fit,
And Tom for deep discerning ;
Dick was thought the brighter wit,
But Tom had better learning.

Dick

Dick with zealous noes and ays
 Could roar as loud as Stentor,
 In the house 'tis all he says ;
 But Tom is eloquenter.

D I C K,
 A M A G G O T.

AS when, from rooting in a bin,
 All powder'd o'er from tail to chin,
 A lively maggot sallies out,
 You know him by his hazel snout :
 So when the grandson of his grandsire
 Forth issuing wriggling, Dick Drawcansir,
 With powder'd rump and back and side,
 You cannot blanch his tawny hide ;
 For 'tis beyond the power of meal
 The gipsy visage to conceal :
 For, as he shakes his wainscot chops,
 Down every mealy atom drops,
 And leaves the tartar phyz in show,
 Like a fresh t—d just dropt on snow.

CLAD ALL IN BROWN. TO DICK.

IMITATED FROM COWLEY.

FOULEST brute that stinks below,
 Why in this brown dost thou appear ?
 For would'st thou make a fouler show,
 Thou must go naked all the year.

Fresh

Fresh from the mud a wallowing sow
Would then be not so brown as thou.

'Tis not the coat that looks so dun,
His hide emits a foulness out;
Not one jot better looks the sun
Seen from behind a dirty clout:
So t—ds within a glass enclose,
The glass will seem as brown as those.

Thou now one heap of foulness art,
All outward and within is foul;
Condensed filth in every part,
Thy body's clothed like thy soul;
Thy soul, which through thy hide of buff
Scarce glimmers like a dying snuff.

Old carted bawds such garments wear,
When pelted all with dirt they shine;
Such their exalted bodies are,
As shrivell'd and as black as thine.
If thou wert in a cart, I fear
Thou would'st be pelted worse than they're.
Yet, when we see thee thus array'd,
The neighbours think it is but just,
That thou should'st take an honest trade,
And weekly carry out the dust.
Of cleanly houses who will doubt,
When Dick cries, "Dust to carry out?"

DICK'S VARIETY.

DULL uniformity in fools
 I hate, who gape and sneer by rules.
 You, Mullinix, and slobbering C—,
 Who every day and hour the same are;
 That vulgar talent I despise
 Of pissing in the rabble's eyes.
 And when I listen to the noise
 Of idiots roaring to the boys;
 To better judgment still submitting,
 I own I see but little wit in;
 Such pastimes, when our taste is nice,
 Can please at most but once or twice.

But then consider Dick, you'll find
 His genius of superiour kind;
 He never muddles in the dirt,
 Nor scours the streets without a shirt;
 Though Dick, I dare presume to say,
 Could do such feats as well as they.
 Dick I could venture every where,
 Let the boys pelt him if they dare,
 He'd have them try'd at the assizes
 For priests and jesuits in disguises;
 Swear they were with the Swedes at Bender,
 And listing troops for the pretender.

But Dick can fart, and dance, and frisk,
 No other monkey half so brisk;
 Now has the speaker by the ears,
 Next moment in the house of peers;
 Now scolding at my lady Eustace,
 Or thrashing Baby in her new stays.

Presto !

Presto! be gone! with t'other hop
 He's powdering in a barber's shop;
 Now at the antichamber thrusting
 His nose to get the circle just in,
 And d—ns his blood, that in the rear
 He sees one single tory there:
 Then, woe be to my lord lieutenant,
 Again he'll tell him, and again on't.

DR. SWIFT TO HIMSELF,

ON

SAINT CECILIA'S DAY.

GRAVE dean of St. Patrick's, how comes it to pass,
 That you, who know musick no more than an ass;
 That you, who so lately were writing of Drapiers,
 Should lend your cathedral to players and scrapers?
 To act such an opera once in a year,
 So offensive to every true protestant ear,
 With trumpets, and fiddles, and organs, and singing,
 Will sure the pretender and popery bring in.
 No protestant prelate, his lordship or grace,
 Durst there show his right or most reverend face:
 How would it pollute their crosiers and rochets!
 To listen to minims, and quavers, and crotchets.

[The rest is wanting.]

ON

ON PADDY'S CHARACTER
OF THE INTELLIGENCER*.

1729.

AS a thorn bush, or oaken bough,
Stuck in an Irish cabin's brow,
Above the door, on country fair,
Betokens entertainment there;
So bays on poets' brows have been Set, for a sign of wit within.
And, as ill neighbours in the night
Pull down an alehouse bush for spite;
The laurel so, by poets worn,
Is by the teeth of Envy torn;
Envy, a canker-worm, which tears
Those sacred leaves that lightning spares.

And now t' exemplify this moral:
Tom having earn'd a twig of laurel,
(Which, measur'd on his head, was found
Not long enough to reach half round,
But, like a girl's cockade, was ty'd,
A trophy, on his temple-side)
Paddy repin'd to see him wear
This badge of honour in his hair;

* Dr. Sheridan was publisher of the "Intelligencer," a weekly paper, written principally by himself; but Dr. Swift occasionally supplied him with a letter. Dr. Delany, piqued at the approbation those papers received, attacked them violently both in conversation and in print; but unfortunately stumbled on some of the numbers which the dean had written, and all the world admired; which gave rise to these verses.

And, thinking this cockade of wit
 Would his own temples better fit,
 Forming his Muse by Smedley's model,
 Lets drive at Tom's devoted noddle,
 Pelts him by turns with verse and prose,
 Hums like a hornet at his nose,
 At length presumes to vent his satire on
 The dean, Tom's honour'd friend and patron.
 The eagle in the tale, ye know,
 Teas'd by a buzzing wasp below,
 Took wing to Jove, and hop'd to rest
 Securely in the thunderer's breast:
 In vain; even there, to spoil his nod,
 The spiteful insect stung the god.

P A R O D Y

ON A

CHARACTER OF DEAN SMEDLEY.

WRITTEN IN LATIN BY HIMSELF*.

THE very reverend dean Smedley,
 Of dullness, pride, conceit, a medley,
 Was equally allow'd to shine
 As poet, scholar, and divine;
 With godliness could well dispense,
 Would be a rake, but wanted sense;
 Would strictly after Truth inquire,
 Because he dreaded to come nigh her.
 For Liberty no champion bolder,
 He hated bailiffs at his shoulder.

* See the Latin Inscription in the Eighteenth Volume of this Collection.

To half the world a standing jest,
A perfect nuisance to the rest;
From many (and we may believe him)
Had the best wishes they could give him.
To all mankind a constant friend,
Provided they had cash to lend.
One thing he did before he went hence,
He left us a laconick sentence,
By cutting of his phrase, and trimming,
To prove that bishops were old women.
Poor Envy durst not show her phiz,
She was so terrified at his.
He waded, without any shame,
Through thick and thin to get a name,
Tried every sharpening trick for bread,
And after all he seldom sped.
When Fortune favour'd, he was nice;
He never once would cog the dice:
But, if she turn'd against his play,
He knew to stop à quatre trois.
Now sound in mind, and sound in corpus,
(Says he) though swell'd like any porpoise,
He hies from hence at forty-four
(But by his leave he sinks a score)
To the East Indies, there to cheat,
Till he can purchase an estate;
Where, after he has fill'd his chest,
He'll mount his tub, and preach his best,
And plainly prove, by dint of text,
This world is his, and theirs the next.
Lest that the reader should not know
The bank where last he set his toe,
'Twas Greenwich. There he took a ship,
And gave his creditors the slip.

But lest chronology should vary,
 Upon the ides of February;
 In seventeen hundred eight and twenty,
 To Fort St. George a pedlar went he.
 Ye Fates, when all he gets is spent,
 RETURN HIM BEGGAR AS HE WENT!

PAULUS; AN EPIGRAM.

BY MR. LINDSAY*.

Dublin, Sept. 7, 1728.

“A SLAVE to crowds, scorch’d with the sum“mer’s heats,
 “In courts the wretched lawyer toils and sweats;
 “While smiling Nature, in her best attire,
 “Regales each sense, and vernal joys inspire.
 “Can he, who knows that real good should please,
 “Barter for gold his liberty and ease?”—
 Thus Paulus preach’d:—When, entering at the door,
 Upon his board the client pours the ore:
 He grasps the shining gift, pores o’er the cause,
 Forgets the sun, and dozes on the laws.

* A polite and elegant scholar, at that time an eminent pleader at the bar in Dublin, and afterward advanced to be one of the justices of the common pleas.

[THE ANSWER.

BY DR. SWIFT.

LINDSAY mistakes the matter quite,
 And honest Paulus judges right.
 Then, why these quarrels to the sun,
 Without whose aid you're all undone?
 Did Paulus e'er complain of sweat?
 Did Paulus e'er the sun forget;
 The influence of whose golden beams
 Soon licks up all unsavoury steams?
 The sun, you say, his face has kiss'd:
 It has; but then it greas'd his fist.
 True lawyers, for the wisest ends,
 Have always been Apollo's friends.
 Not for his superficial powers
 Of ripening fruits, and gilding flowers;
 Not for inspiring poets' brains
 With pennyless and starveling strains;
 Not for his boasted healing art;
 Not for his skill to shoot the dart;
 Nor yet because he sweetly fiddles;
 Nor for his prophecies in riddles:
 But for a more substantial cause—
 Apollo's patron of the laws;
 Whom Paulus ever must adore,
 As parent of the golden ore,
 By Phœbus, an incestuous birth,
 Begot upon his grandam Earth;
 By Phœbus first produc'd to light:
 By Vulcan form'd so round and bright:

Then offer'd at the shrine of Justice,
 By clients to her priests and trustees,
 Nor, when we see Astræa stand
 With even balance in her hand,
 Must we suppose she has in view,
 How to give every man his due ;
 Her scales you see her only hold,
 To weigh her priests' the lawyers gold.

Now, should I own your case was grievous,
 Poor sweaty Paulus, who'd believe us ?
 'Tis very true, and none denies,
 At least, that such complaints are wise :
 'Tis wise, no doubt, as clients fat you more,
 To cry, like statesmen, Quanta patimur !
 But, since the truth must needs be stretched,
 To prove that lawyers are so wretched ;
 This paradox I'll undertake,
 For Paulus' and for Lindsay's sake ;
 By topicks, which, though I abomine 'em,
 May serve as arguments ad hominem ;
 Yet I disdain to offer those
 Made use of by detracting foes.

I own, the curses of mankind
 Sit light upon a lawyer's mind :
 The clamours of ten thousand tongues
 Break not his rest, nor hurt his lungs ;
 I own, his conscience always free,
 (Provided he has got his fee)
 Secure of constant peace within,
 He knows no guilt, who knows no sin,

Yet well they merit to be pitied,
 By clients always overwitted.

And though the Gospel seems to say,
 What heavy burdens lawyers lay

Upon

Upon the shoulders of their neighbour,
Nor lend a finger to their labour,
Always for saving their own bacon ;
No doubt, the text is here mistaken :
The copy's false, the sense is rack'd :
To prove it, I appeal to fact ;
And thus by demonstration show
What burdens lawyers undergo.

With early clients at his door,
Though he was drunk the night before,
And cropsick with unclubb'd for wine,
The wretch must be at court by nine ;
Half sunk beneath his briefs and bag,
As ridden by a midnight hag :
Then, from the bar, harangues the bench,
In English vile, and viler French,
And Latin, vilest of the three ;
And all for poor ten moidores fee !
Of paper how is he profuse,
With periods long, in terms abstruse !
What pains he takes to be prolix !
A thousand lines to stand for six !
Of common sense without a word in !
And is not this a grievous burden ?

The lawyer is a common drudge,
To fight our cause before the judge :
And, what is yet a greater curse,
Condemn'd to bear his client's purse ;
While he, at ease, secure and light,
Walks boldly home at dead of night ;
When term is ended, leaves the town,
Trots to his country mansion down ;
And, disencumber'd of his load,
No danger dreads upon the road ;

Despises rapparees, and rides
Safe through the Newry mountains sides.

Lindsay, 'tis you have set me on,
To state this question pro and con.
My satire may offend, 'tis true;
However, it concerns not you.
I own, there may, in every clan,
Perhaps, be found one honest man;
Yet link them close; in this they jump,
To be but rascals in the lump.
Imagine Lindsay at the bar,
He's much the same his brethren are;
Well taught by practice to imbibe
The fundamentals of his tribe:
And, in his client's just defence,
Must deviate oft from common sense;
And make his ignorance discerned,
To get the name of council learned
(As lucus comes a non lucendo),
And wisely do as other men do:
But shift him to a better scene,
Among his crew of rogues in grain;
Surrounded with companions fit,
To taste his humour, sense, and wit;
You'd swear he never took a fee,
Nor knew in law his A, B, C.

'Tis hard, where dullness overrules,
To keep good sense in crowds of fools,
And we admire the man, who saves
His honesty in crowds of knaves;
Nor yields up virtue, at discretion,
To villains of his own profession.
Lindsay, you know what pains you take
In both, yet hardly save your stake;

And

And will you venture both anew,
 To sit among that venal crew,
 That pack of mimick legislators,
 Abandon'd, stupid, slavish praters!
 For, as the rabble daub and rifle
 The fool who scrambles for a trifle;
 Who for his pains is cuff'd and kick'd,
 Drawn through the dirt, his pockets pick'd;
 You must expect the like disgrace,
 Scrambling with rogues to get a place;
 Must lose the honour you have gain'd,
 Your numerous virtues foully stain'd;
 Disclaim for ever all pretence
 To common honesty and sense;
 And join in friendship with a strict tye,
 To M—l, C—y, and Dick Tighe.

A DIALOGUE

BETWEEN

AN EMINENT LAWYER*,

AND

DR. JONATHAN SWIFT, D. S. P. D.

IN ALLUSION TO HORACE, BOOK II. SAT. I.

“Sunt quibus in Satirâ, &c.”

DR. SWIFT.

SINCE there are persons who complain
 There's too much satire in my vein;
 That I am often found exceeding
 The rules of raillery and breeding;

* Mr. Lindsay.

With

With too much freedom treat my betters,
Not sparing even men of letters:
You, who are skill'd in lawyers' lore,
What's your advice? Shall I give o'er?
Nor ever fools or knaves expose
Either in verse or humourous prose;
And, to avoid all future ill,
In my scrutoire lock up my quill?

LAWYER.

Since you are pleas'd to condescend
To ask the judgment of a friend,
Your case consider'd, I must think
You should withdraw from pen and ink,
Forbear your poetry and jokes,
And live like other Christian folks;
Or, if the Muses must inspire
Your fancy with their pleasing fire,
Take subjects safer for your wit
Than those on which you lately writ.
Commend the times, your thoughts correct,
And follow the prevailing sect;
Assert that Hyde, in writing story,
Shows all the malice of a tory;
While Burnet, in his deathless page,
Discovers freedom without rage.
To Woolston recommend our youth,
For learning, probity, and truth;
That noble genius, who unbinds
The chains which fetter freeborn minds;
Redeems us from the slavish fears
Which lasted near two thousand years;
He can alone the priesthood humble,
Make gilded spires and altars tumble.

DR. SWIFT.

Must I commend against my conscience
 Such stupid blasphemy and nonsense?
 To such a subject tune my lyre,
 And sing like one of Milton's choir,
 Where devils to a vale retreat,
 And call the laws of Wisdom Fate,
 Lament upon their hapless fall,
 That Force free Virtue should enthrall?
 Or shall the charms of Wealth and Power
 Make me pollute the Muses' bower?

LAWYER.

As from the tripod of Apollo,
 Hear from my desk the words that follow:
 "Some, by philosophers misled,
 "Must honour you alive and dead;
 "And such as know what Greece has writ,
 "Must taste your irony and wit;
 "While most that are, or would be great,
 "Must dread your pen, your person hate;
 "And you on Drapier's hill must lie,
 "And there without a mitre die."

ON BURNING A DULL POEM. 1729.

AN ass's hoof alone can hold
 That poisonous juice, which kills by cold,
 Methought, when I this poem read,
 No vessel but an ass's head
 Such frigid fustian could contain;
 I mean, the head without the brain,

The

The cold conceits, the chilling thoughts,
 Went down like stupifying draughts:
 I found my head began to swim,
 A numbness crept through every limb.
 In haste, with imprecations dire,
 I threw the volume in the fire:
 When (who could think?) though cold as ice,
 It burnt to ashes in a trice.

How could I more enhance its fame?
 Though born in snow, it dy'd in flame.

AN EPISTLE

HIS EXCELLENCY JOHN LORD CARTERET,

BY DR. DELANY, 1729.

“Credis ob hoc, me, Pastor, opes fortasse rogare,

“Propter quod, vulgus, crassaque turba rogat.”

MART. Epig. lib. ix.

THOU wise and learned ruler of our isle,
 Whose guardian care can all her griefs beguile;
 When next your generous soul shall condescend
 T' instruct or entertain your humble friend;
 Whether, retiring from your weighty charge,
 On some high theme you learnedly enlarge;
 Of all the ways of wisdom reason well,
 How Richlieu rose, and how Sejanus fell:
 Or, when your brow less thoughtfully unbends,
 Circled with Swift and some delighted friends;

When, mixing mirth and wisdom with your wine,
Like that your wit shall flow, your genius shine;
Nor with less praise the conversation guide,
Than in the publick councils you decide:
Or when the dean, long privileg'd to rail,
Asserts his friend with more impetuous zeal;
You hear (whilst I sit by abash'd and mute)
With soft concessions shortening the dispute;
Then close with kind inquiries of my state,
“How are your tithes, and have they rose of late?”
“Why, Christ Church is a pretty situation,
“There are not many better in the nation!
“This, with your other things, must yield you clear
“Some six—at least five hundred pounds a year.”

Suppose, at such a time, I took the freedom
To speak these truths as plainly as you read 'em;
You shall rejoin, my lord, when I've replied,
And, if you please, my lady shall decide:

“My lord, I'm satisfied you meant me well:

“And that I'm thankful, all the world can tell:

“But you'll forgive me, if I own th' event

“Is short, is very short, of your intent;

“At least, I feel some ills unfelt before,

“My income less, and my expenses more.”

“How, doctor! double vicar! double rector!

“A dignitary! with a city lecture!

“What glebes—what dues—what tithes—what

“fines—what rent!

“Why, doctor!—will you never be content?”

“Would my good lord but cast up the account,

“And see to what my revenues amount;

“My titles ample; but my gain so small,

“That one good vicarage is worth them all:

“And

“ And very wretched sure is he, that’s double
 “ In nothing but his titles and his trouble.
 “ Add to this crying grievance, if you please,
 “ My horses founder’d on Fermanah ways;
 “ Ways of well-polish’d and well-pointed stone,
 “ Where every step endangers every bone;
 “ And, more to raise your pity and your wonder,
 “ Two churches—twelve Hibernian miles asunder!
 “ With complicated cures, I labour hard in,
 “ Beside whole summers absent from my garden!—
 “ But that the world would think I play’d the fool,
 “ I’d change with Charley Grattan for his school*—
 “ What fine cascades, what vistles, might I make,
 “ Fixt in the centre of th’ Iernian lake!
 “ There might I sail delighted, smooth and safe,
 “ Beneath the conduct of my good sir Ralph†:
 “ There’s not a better steerer in the realm;
 “ I hope, my lord, you’ll call him to the helm.”—
 “ Doctor—a glorious scheme to ease your grief!
 “ When cures are cross, a school’s a sure relief.
 “ You cannot fail of being happy there,
 “ The lake will be the Lethe of your care:
 “ The scheme is for your honour and your ease;
 “ And, doctor, I’ll promote it when you please.
 “ Meanwhile, allowing things below your merit,
 “ Yet, doctor, you’ve a philosophick spirit;
 “ Your wants are few, and, like your income, small,
 “ And you’ve enough to gratify them all:
 “ You’ve trees, and fruits, and roots, enough in store:
 “ And what would a philosopher have more?

* A freeschool at Inniskillen, founded by Erasmus Smith, esq.
 See Journal to Stella, March 29, 1713.

† Sir Ralph Gore, who had a villa in the lake of Erin.

“ You

- “ You cannot wish for coaches, kitchens, cooks—”
“ My lord, I’ve not enough to buy me books —
“ Or pray, suppose my wants were all supplied,
“ Are there no wants I should regard beside?
“ Whose breast is so unmann’d, as not to grieve, “ Compass’d with miseries he can’t relieve?
“ Who can be happy—who should wish to live,
“ And want the godlike happiness to give?
“ That I’m a judge of this, you must allow:
“ I had it once—and I’m debarr’d it now.
“ Ask your own heart, my lord; if this be true,
“ Then how unblest am I! how blest are you!”
“ ’Tis true—but, doctor, let us wave all that—
“ Say, if you had your wish, what you’d be at.”
“ Excuse me, good my lord—I won’t be sounded,
“ Nor shall your favour by my wants be bounded.
“ My lord, I challenge nothing as my due,
“ Nor is it fit I should prescribe to you.
“ Yet this might Symmachus himself avow,
“ (Whose rigid rules * are antiquated now)—
“ My lord! I’d wish to pay the debts I owe—
“ I’d wish besides—to build, and to bestow.”

* Symmachus bishop of Rome, 499, made a decree, that no man should solicit for ecclesiastical preferment, before the death of the incumbent.

AN EPISTLE UPON AN EPISTLE
FROM A CERTAIN DOCTOR TO A CERTAIN GREAT LORD.

BEING A CHRISTMAS BOX FOR DR. DELANY.

AS Jove will not attend on less,
When things of more importance press :
You can't, grave sir, believe it hard,
That you, a low Hibernian bard,
Should cool your heels a while, and wait
Unanswer'd at your patron's gate ;
And would my lord vouchsafe to grant
This one, poor, humble boon I want,
Free leave to play his secretary,
As Falstaff acted old king Harry ;
I'd tell of yours in rhyme and print ;
Folks shrug, and cry, " 'There 's nothing in't."
And, after several readings over,
It shines most in the marble cover.

How could so fine a taste dispense
With mean degrees of wit and sense ?
Nor will my lord so far beguile
The wise and learned of our isle ;
To make it pass upon the nation,
By dint of his sole approbation.
The task is arduous, patrons find,
To warp the sense of all mankind :

Who

Who think your Muse must first aspire,
Ere he advance the doctor higher.

You've cause to say he meant you well:
That you are thankful, who can tell?
For still you're short (which grieves your spirit)
Of his intent; you mean, your merit.

Ah! quanto rectius, tu adeptus,
Qui nil moliris tam inepte?

Smedley, thou Jonathan of Clogher,
“When thou thy humble lay dost offer
“To Grafton's grace, with grateful heart,
“Thy thanks and verse devoid of art:
“Content with what his bounty gave,
“No larger income dost thou crave.”

But you must have cascades, and all
Ierne's lake, for your canal,
Your vistles, barges, and (a pox on
All pride!) our speaker for your coxon:
It's pity that he can't bestow you
Twelve commoners in caps to row you.
Thus Edgar proud, in days of yore,
Held monarchs labouring at the oar;
And, as he pass'd, so swell'd the Dee;
Enrag'd, as Ern would do at thee.

How different is this from Smedley!
(His name is up, he may in bed lie)
“Who only asks some pretty cure,
“In wholesome soil and ether pure;
“The garden stor'd with artless flowers,
“In either angle shady bowers:
“No gay parterre with costly green
“Must in the ambient hedge be seen;
“But Nature freely takes her course,
“Nor fears from him ungrateful force:

“ No sheers to check her sprouting vigour,
“ Or shape the yews to antick figure.”

But you forsooth your all must squander
On that poor spot, call'd Dell-ville, yonder:
And when you've been at vast expenses
In whims, parterres, canals, and fences,
Your assets fail, and cash is wanting;
Nor farther buildings, farther planting:
No wonder, when you raise and level,
Think this wall low, and that wall bevel.
Here a convenient box you found,
Which you demolish'd to the ground:
Then built, then took up with your arbour,
And set the house to Rupert Barber.
You sprang an arch, which, in a scurvy
Humour, you tumbled topsyturvy.
You change a circle to a square,
Then to a circle as you were:
Who can imagine whence the fund is,
That you quadrata change rotundis?

To Fame a temple you erect,
A Flora does the dome protect;
Mounts, walks, on high; and in a hollow
You place the Muses and Apollo;
There shining 'midst his train, to grace
Your whimsical poetick place.

These stories were of old design'd
As fables: but you have refin'd
The poets' mythologick dreams,
To real Muses, gods, and streams.
Who would not swear, when you contrive thus,
That you're don Quixote redivivus?

Beneath, a dry canal there lies,
Which only Winter's rain supplies.

O ! couldst thou, by some magick spell,
Hither convey St. Patrick's well !
Here may it reassume its stream,
And take a greater Patrick's name !

If your expenses rise so high ;
What income can your wants supply ?
Yet still you fancy you inherit
A fund of such superiour merit,
That you can't fail of more provision,
All by my lady's kind decision.
For, the more livings you can fish up,
You think you'll sooner be a bishop :
That could not be my lord's intent,
Nor can it answer the event.
Most think what has been heap'd on you
To other sort of folk was due :
Rewards too great for your flim-flams,
Epistles, riddles, epigrams.

Though now your depth must not be sounded,
The time was, when you'd have compounded
For less than Charley Grattan's school ?
Five hundred pound a year's no fool !

Take this advice then from your friend,
To your ambition put an end.
Be frugal, Pat : pay what you owe,
Before you build and you bestow.
Be modest ; nor address your betters
With begging, vain, familiar letters.

A passage may be found *, I've heard,
In some old Greek or Latian bard,
Which says, " Would crows in silence eat
" Their offals, or their better meat,

* Hor. lib. 1. ep. xvii.

" Their generous feeders not provoking
 " By loud and unharmonious croaking,
 " They might, unhurt by Envy's claws,
 " Live on, and stuff to boot their maws."
